As if it was not already hot enough with the thermometer at 100 in the shade, the Senate, a body which usually takes things cool and easy, resolved itself into a political debating society, with the report of Senator Aldrich's committee on the effects of the tariff upon earnings, cost of living etc., as the subject for discussion, and the Senators spouted away just as though the session had just began and the weather was perfectly comfortable. Senator Aldrich opened the ball with a long speech and an able one, too, in favor of protection, and pointing out the decrease in the cost of living, as shown by the report of the committee, which he said had made its investigation free from partisanship, and the greater earnings of Americans, as compared with Europeans. Senator Vest was the next to make a set speech. His speech consisted of a general attack on the protective system, rather than an answer to Senator Aldrich's statements. Senator Carlisle having announced his intention to reply to so much of it as referred to the investigation by the committee, of which he was a member. The feature of Mr. Vest's speech that attracted the most attention was his assertion that under the protective system agricultural lands had steadily decreased in value, an assertion which was denied, so far as it concerned their States, by a number of republican Senators, including the two republicans who voted against the McKinley bill in the Senate—Paddock, of Nebraska, and Pettigrew of N. Dakota. The other Senators taking more or less prominent parts in the discussion were, Allison, Palmer, Hale and Davis.

Senator Cameron, finding that he could not defeat or "hang up" the nomination of Mr. Shiras, of Pennsylvania, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, withdrew his opposition and allowed the nomination to be unanimously confirmed by the Senate.

President Harrison's nomination of Mr. A. B. Hepburn, who has been national bank examiner at New York city for several years, to be Comptroller of the Currency in place of Mr. Lacey, who in becoming president of a National bank has followed close in the footsteps of several other comptrollers, was not altogether satisfactory to any one but Mr. Hepburn's personal friends; not because of anything known against that gentleman, but because the peculiar circumstances surrounding the examinations of several of the big national banks of Philadelphia and Boston, which failed a year or so ago—A Congressional committee is now investigating their failures—had caused conservative people to think that a change in the method of examination would prove advantageous, and they know that such a change is not likely to be made by one of the old force of examiners.

The new Canadian retaliation law has whetted the appetite of the retaliationists, who now ask that the Grand Trunk Railroad be officially retaliated against because of discriminations in freight charges it makes against Americans. A Senate committee will investigate.

The current catalogue of the Michigan State Normal School is at hand, which shows that institution to be in a flourishing condition. The total enrollment last year was 1318, of which 1062 were in the Normal department and 316 in the training school.

THE APPORTIONMENT DECISION.

The decision of the State Supreme Court, knocking out the last apportionment act, will restore Lenawee County to her old position and give us three representatives instead of two. The appended diagram will show the districts as they formerly existed under the act of 1885.

3		2		1
Woodstock	Cambridge	Franklin	Clinton Tec'seh		Macon
Rollin	Rome	Adrian City	Raisin		Ridgeway
Hudson	Dover	Madison	Palmyra		Deerfield Blissfield
Medina	Seneca	Fairfield	Ogden		Riga

From this it will be seen that the three districts are composed of the following towns:

First district—Townships of Blissfield Clinton, Deerfield, Macon, Ogden, Palmyra, Raisin, Ridgeway, Riga, Tecumseh.

Second district—Townships of Adrian, Fairfield, Franklin, Madison, and city of Adrian.

Third district—Townships of Cambridge, Dover, Hudson, Medina, Rollin, Rome, Seneca, Woodstock.

The decision will also change the Senatorial representation, giving Lenawee alone one Senator as before.

LENAWEE COUNTY INSTITUTE.

The State Teachers' Institute for Lenawee county will be held at Adrian, commencing at 10 o'clock, a. m., Monday, August 15, closing at 4 p. m., Friday, August 26. C. F. Field, Tecumseh, local committee.

The value of the instruction received at these institutes is being very generally recognized by teachers and school officers. As a rule, it has been the experience of County examiners and other examining officers, that the most successful teachers are those who have availed themselves of the normal instruction offered by these local institutes.

The daily sessions of the institute for this year will, as heretofore, be devoted exclusively to topics of special interest to teachers, presented by persons of extended practical experience as teachers, and who have made a special study of institute work. The evening lectures will be of a popular character.

The institute law allows teachers, whose schools are in session at the time appointed for the County institute, held under the direction of the State Superintendent, to close their schools during the continuance of such institute without forfeiting their wages for as many half-days as they are in attendance at the institute. This provision of the law, and the fact that there will be no enrollment or tuition fee exacted, should insure the attendance of every teacher in the county who possesses the true professional spirit.

Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

A Correction.

EDITOR HERALD:—Two weeks ago an item appeared in your paper and was copied by Detroit and other city papers to the effect that the celery crop in this vicinity bids fair to be a large one. I do not know where you got your information, certainly not from a grower. I have taken pains to visit all of the celery farms around here and am safe in saying that the acreage will not be more than two-thirds of what it was last year, and one-third of this was planted after July 10th and must necessarily be very late. Now, as Tecumseh is one of the largest shipping points of fine celery, such statements are taken as truth by dealers and have an influence in depressing the market. I hope you will make the correction that, although the output will amount to thousands of boxes if good weather prevails, still it will fall far short of a full crop. CELERY GROWER.

Magazine of American History.

The Magazine of American History for August contains several illustrated as well as exceedingly readable articles, the first being a sketch of "Historic Tea-Party at Edenton, North Carolina, in 1774," by Dr. Richard Dillard, with a fine queenly, full-page portrait of the president of the tea-party, Mrs. Penelope Baker—neither facts nor picture having before this been given authoritatively to the public. The second is entitled "Muscoutin. "The Successful Novel of Fifty-six Years ago. Horse-shoe Robison," a work that has been out of print for forty or more years, is brought into fresh notice through a brief summary of the exciting story. Its historic features are, however, its chief charm, as it unfolds a vast amount of information about the revolutionary war in the mountainous regions of the Carolinas, and the character of the people in those rural districts. It is more interesting than any modern novel extant. Col. Norton continues the "United States History in Paragraphs," concluding Alaska. "Sabbath Breaking and the Clash of Theological Steel" is a striking incident of travel in Kansas to the land of gold in 1849, by ex-Governor Charles Robinson. There is not a dull page in the number. Price $5.00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

Official World's Fair Guide.

It is very seldom that we are able to recommend a book so unreservedly as we can the "World's Columbian Exposition & Chicago Guide." The work is official and reliable and is no catch-penny product, but a book which having the greatest interest at the present time possesses value so permanent as to entitle it to a place in every household. More than 500 pages richly embellished with superb illustrations of the highest order. Elegantly printed and handsomely bound.

The guide does not only describe to the minutest detail everything of inestimable value pertaining to the Exposition and Chicago, but has a full page picture of each of the mammoth exhibit buildings in eight oil colors. Also many others, illustrating artistically the useful, the curious, and the beautiful that will be there in magnificent display.

It caps the climax with a magnificent cyclorama view, "Birds-eye View of the Exposition Grounds and Buildings," beautifully lithographed in eight oil colors, size 9x25 inches.

It is a book for the millions who contemplate visiting Chicago in 1893. It will be purchased by the millions who cannot go, but will desire to know just what their friends are seeing. The price of the book adapts it to the wants of the masses.

Agents are wanted to sell the book in every town. Full particulars and terms will be sent on application. Address, Pacific Publishing Co., 210 North Third St., St. Louis, Mo., Read their advertisement in another column.

American Gardening for August.

Outdoor life furnishes all the inspiration, enthusiasm, and freshness of existence during these hot, dusty, midsummer days, and outdoor books and magazines are more in keeping with our pastimes, occupations, mindmoods, and the weather than any others. The leading article in American Gardening for August is fresh and breezy and full of suggestions helpful to all who wish to see and enjoy beauty in nature. Many bits of country road might furnish such a chapter of revelation as the "harvest of quiet eye" to all who read it. For botanists, there are, in this same number of the magazine, interesting papers upon parasites and oddities, garden exiles, our native orchids, etc. Orchids, palms and "The Lilies of the Field" all receive due attention in separate, special articles, and time spent "In the Gardens at Woodbanks," cannot fail to pass pleasantly. Orchardists will find much to interest them in the three articles contributed by specialists on fruit-culture, and the needs and interests of market-gardeners are remembered in notes upon various vegetables. "Handling Garden Crops for Profit," and "Fields Under Glass"—the latter, by Professor L. H. Bailey, contains much that is interesting concerning the forcing of vegetables by means of electric light.

The People's Party.

Jackson, Aug. 3.—The great People's party convention which met here yesterday decided upon taking their medicine straight, and nominated a full ticket, as follows.

For Governor—John W. Ewing, of Eaton.

For Lieutenant Governor—Geo. H. Sherman, of Wayne.

For Secretary of State—Frank M Vandercook, of Gratiot.

For State Treasurer—Joseph W. Welton, of Kent.

For Auditor General—Carrolton Peck, of Lapeer.

For Attorney General—A. A. Ellis, of Ionia.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—O. M. Graves, of Emmet.

For Commissioner State Land office—Wm. L. Hayden, of Houghton.

For Member State Board of Education—Wilbur H. Clute, of Bay.

Ellis, the present attorney general, was placed on the list because of his sympathies.

We acknowledge the receipt of a neat card announcing the marriage of Carrie, daughter of A. B. Cotton of Chicago, to Mr. Chas. A. Brown, on Wednesday, July 27th. They will be at home after Aug. 15th. The bride's numerous friends in Tecumseh and Clinton will extend their congratulations and good wishes at this auspicious season.

Some complaint has been made about the increased village taxation this year. Upon investigation we find there are three causes for it. 1st.—The taxes last year were very low, less than ever before. 2d.—The water works tax necessarily increases this year's levy quite largely. 3d,—The new law reduces the assessed valuation of the village from $1,546,000 to $1,350,000 thus making the taxes one-sixth higher on the new valuation.

The "Odd Fellows' Grand March" and the "Air Ship Waltz" are two of the latest compositions of Isaac Doles, Indianapolis, Ind. Both are musical gems. They comprise five pages each, sheet music size, besides illustrated title pages, not difficult in execution, but beautiful in composition, and sell at 40 cts. each. By way of introduction Mr. Doles will mail them to any address on receipt of ten cents per copy, when accompanied by this notice. Address, Isaac Doles, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Michigan Club, of Colorado, composed of former residents of Michigan, has been organized in Denver to welcome Michigan people during the Knights Templar conclave week. A reading and writing room and office, ladies' parlor and toilet rooms have been secured, and papers from all the leading cities of Michigan will be on file. A directory of former Michigan people and a bureau of information will be found in the office. Visitors may have mail and telegrams sent in care of the club.

The following notice is clipped from a Buffalo paper:

Died, July 14, 1892, in this city, Louisa Towne, mother of Mrs. M. A. Ransom, Mrs. Julia P. Meredith of this city, Mrs. John M. Sabin, of Oakland, Cal., Paul A. Towne of New York City and Chas. B. Towne of Cheyenne, Wy., aged 92 years. Funeral will take place from the residence of Mrs. M. A. Ransom, No. 1285 Main Street, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Friends are invited to attend.

The deceased had many acquaintances here in Tecumseh who will sympathize with the bereaved family. She was a woman of remarkable intellectual vigor and reared a family of talented children, most of whom survive her. She retained her mental faculties unimpaired almost until the date of her death.

All young republicans of this village are requested to meet at Cheever's hall, next Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing a Harrison & Reid club.

The Table Factory seems to be doing business worthy of commendation. They are working on an order for 700 tables for a Grand Rapids firm, and their orders that will take months work before they are filled.

It is expected that either the Rev. J. Hughes or Mrs. Marion B. Baxter will speak here on the evening of Aug. 9th. The great mass meeting near Britton will be held on that day and one of the speakers will come here in the evening. Further notice will be given later on.

A runaway occured in town last Saturday morning. Ed. Williamson's team was at the Lake Shore depot, and the wagon they were hitched to was being loaded with egg crates, when suddenly they thought they would have a frolic and broke away. They ran from the depot to Bennett's livery barn, where they stopped of their own accord.

Mr. James Wallace came here about two months ago from Harvey, Ill., to the home of Wilson McClure. When he came he was ailing with consumption, and since has been a continued sufferer, until Thursday night of last week, death brought him relief. Mr. Wallace was a former resident of this village and worked at the stove mason's trade. He had many friends who will regret to hear of his death. The funeral services were held on Friday afternoon, Rev. Vincent officiating.

C. D. Keyes, of Clinton, was in town Monday afternoon.

Miss Cora Randall, of Ann Arbor, is visiting at S. W. Anderson's for a few days.

The W. C. T. U. held a union meeting at the Baptist church last Sunday evening. Short addresses were given by Rev. Perrin, Dr. North, A. P. Coddington, and Prof. Fred Boyd, interspersed with recitations and singing.

The prohibitionists who are holding a sort of camp meeting in the vicinity of New York city are dumbfounded at proof that the "liquor interests" are helping to circulate their harangues in favor of closing the world's fair Sundays.

A wheel with a rubber tire and wind on its stomach is recognized as possessing superior qualities to anything ever bloated except the politician and the baloon. The pneumatic wheel is now being tried on baby carriages with success. It has been tried on the sulky and is declared to be a success.

August 5th the planet Mars will show a friendly disposition by coming within 25 million miles of the earth, instead of keeping the respectful distance of 140 million miles. All who own telescopes should take advantage of this unusual friendliness and give Mars a good squint, for they will not have such an opportunity again for fifteen years.

Rev. W. F. Crispin, of Akron, Ohio, preached two fine sermons at the Universalist church last Sunday. He is a man of much erudition, having published a denominational book that is having an extensive sale. He is also a pulpit orator of more than ordinary ability. We hope he may visit Tecumseh again some time in the future.

The base ball game at Clinton, Saturday, between the Clinton nine and the Gillilands, of this city, resulted in a slugging match. The score card was dotted all over, the runs figuring up 16 for the woolen boys, and 15 for the electricians. Three of the Adrian team were knocked out before the end of the game, and the ambulance corps was kept busy. The game, however, was a howling success.

Sunday seems to have been an off-day for ex-Alderman Lawrence. In addition to the damage done by storm, at his villa in this city, he received a letter to-day from the manager of his immense farms in Minnesota that some four hundred acres of wheat and other cereal crops had been leveled the same day by a tornado. The loss from this visitation will be likely to swell into the thousands.—Adrian Times.

A diptheria scare has struck Adrian. The little child of Mr. Brewer, on Spring Brook avenue, died Wednesday morning, the death being caused by the dread disease, and another child is very ill with it, but will probably recover. Residents of Henry street are considerably disturbed over the appearance of the disease in the home of Charles A. Parker. He has six children, one of whom is very ill, and many have been exposed.

The Adrian Times says: The O. & M. band tournament, in Tecumseh, and the farmers' picnic at Devils lake, take place on the same day, August 25th. This is wrong. Can it not be remedied before too late?

It can be certainly, and it should be. The date of the picnic can be changed now without any damage thereto. The bands that have decided to attend the reunion have made their arrangements for that particular day and it is too late now to change that date.

If this is'nt model summer weather, what is it?

Attorney Salsbury, of Adrian, was in town Monday on business.

Harry Snell, of Grand Rapids, was in town on business Tuesday.

There was a big crowd in town last Thursday to see the circus.

The Prohibitionists meet in County convention to-day at Adrian.

Hudson Conkling returned from a business trip to the west, Tuesday.

Wm. McCowen has added an elegant black pall to his undertaking outfit.

Mrs. Charles Lawrence went to Detroit Tuesday morning to visit friends.

The Co. C. boys are drilling three evenings a week now, getting ready for camp.

This is Masonic week, the regular meetings of the various Masonic bodies occurring on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Walter Heck has sold his photo gallery at South Bend and we understand that he will soon return to Tecumseh and open a gallery here.

Floyd Florence, of Holloway, was a caller at our office last Thursday. He proposes to keep right along at the old stand, and is doing well.

Wm. Smith picked the first ripe tomato from his patch last Sunday. He will have a bountiful crop this season, from present appearances.

There will be no services at the Friends church Sunday, August 7th, on account of Quarterly meeting which will be held near Ypsilanti.

The W. C. T. U. will meet at Mrs. Tilton's every Friday at 3 o'clock during August. A good program is provided for mother's meeting, Aug. 5th.

Lieut. W. S. McNair, a former Tecumseh boy, who is now stationed in the regular army at Washington Barracks, D. C., is at home on a month's furlough.

J. D. Walker, of Brooklyn, Mich., was in town the first of the week. He has thirty acres of good marsh land on his place and is thinking of starting a celery patch.

Justice Burridge and family were occupying their Cedar Point cottage at Devils Lake during the big blow a week ago Sunday. Matters looked decidedly squally for a time.

We learn that there is a movement on foot to vary the program of Band Reunion Day, and add to it lively features such as foot and wheelbarrow racing. Let us have a gala day for Tecumseh.

Sena Drew, of Anderson & Co's, is taking a vacation this week. This firm seem to think each one of their clerks know enough to appreciate a recreation of one week and they generously donate their salary to buy pink lemonade and enjoy themselves. Happy clerks and a good-hearted boss are "right in line."

The hot spell of last week has never been equalled in this vicinity, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. For five days in succession the thermometer marked 95 degrees, or above. By George Merritt's thermometer, the mercury stood at these figures at three o'clock p. m., except on Sunday, when the observation was taken at noon. Sunday, 98 degrees; Monday, 96 degrees; Tuesday, 97 degrees; Wednesday, 96 degrees; Thursday, 95 degrees.

Geo. Waldron, of Plymouth, is stopping in town this week.

D. C. LeBaron, of Toledo, stopped off one train yesterday to call on Tecumseh friends.

Miss Hattie Russell, of Adrian, has been visiting friends in Tecumseh, for the past few days.

Loana Davidson returned from Ypsilanti Monday, where she has been for a few week's visit.

Miss Ella Walker, of Brooklyn, is spending the present week with her aunt, Mrs. Judge Stacy.

Frank Rosebraugh and Mary Hosmer are guests of S. P. Hosmer's family. They expect to remain here three or four weeks.

The Maccabee picnic at Devils Lake yesterday was not very largely attended, but it was a beautiful day and those who attended had a fine time.

The National Loan and Investment Co. of Detroit, is one of the solid financial institutions of Michigan. We call attention to their card to be found elsewhere in to-day's paper.

In the special notice of "Dressmaking" which appeared last month in the Herald, the names should read Mrs. Waldron and Miss Harris—not Mrs. Harris. In justice to Miss Harris we make this correction.

The Young Ladies Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church will hold their August meeting in the lecture room, Sunday p. m. at 4 o'clock. Subject, Alaska. Members urged to be present. All ladies cordially invited.

Sells and Rentfrow's show gave two entertainments to crowded seats, last Thursday. The menagerie part of the show was not very extensive but the circus was good. The bicycle riding and some other parts of the program were unusually fine.

Frank DePuy has just completed an elegant new horse barn, which is one of the best in Macon. It is 20x40 feet in size, with an ample loft for hay. The ground floor is made of cement, at a cost of about $100. This floor contains a large room for carriages, one box stall and a wash room. The barn is nicely painted and is a decided ornament to the farm.

—It is poor economy to put off attending a Normal or College because of hard times. It would be equally wise to put off planting corn because of the expense of the seed. In gaining an education time lost now is lost forever. The expense of attending some of our excellent higher institutions, such as the Fayette Normal University, of Fayette, O., is now so low that any one may find a way to meet it. Do not wait until another year. Attend now. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC
BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true merit is always recognized and the quality of itself takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgments that so much comfort for $1.00 the price is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else will.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Lumbago, Rheumatism, sufferers long chronically afflicted, Dyspepsy quickly yields, spinal troubles and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured. Fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular 5c. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant 4-ring 52 Electric Belt which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt, except $5 belt and credit $2 on the price of new belt. Remember the Electric Foot Warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

DRIVEN INTO THE MUD.

Terrible Death of Prof. Edward Hope, the Aeronaut, at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 1.—Prof. Edward Hope, the balloonist, met instant death at Inver grove in a peculiar manner Sunday afternoon. After his balloon had gone up about half a mile it began to drift rapidly toward the Mississippi before a west wind. Becoming alarmed, Hope cut away his parachute and began to descend. The machine worked badly, however, and he dropped to the earth like a shot. He fell in a slough and was driven 12 feet into the soft mud. It required nearly an hour to dig his body out.

A COSTLY STRIKE.

More Than $1,000,000 Lost by the Homestead Affair.

Ten or Twelve Lives Were Also Sacrificed—Idle Men Being Supported by the Unions—Hard Lines for Storekeepers.

COUNTING THE COST.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 30.—The great lockout at Homestead is just one month old and has already cost over $1,000,000, besides the sacrifice of a half score of human lives and serious injuries to many times that number. Of the loss in cash the military has cost in round figures $350,000, the workmen have lost in wages $1,80,000 and the Carnegie company has lost and spent as much more in getting new workmen. The workmen at Beaver Falls, Duquesne and the Union mills in Pittsburgh have lost about $100,000 in wages by their sympathy strike and the firm is out $100,000 by the idleness of these plants. Added to this will be the county expenses for deputy sheriffs and murder trials, the expense to the city for hunting anarchists and to the nation for the congressional investigations. Another item of no mean significance is the loss to workmen and manufacturers in plants indirectly affected which have been forced to close down for want of material.

The locked-out workmen have not as yet been deprived of any of the necessaries of life, and if the fight should last several weeks yet there is no danger of the workmen's families coming to actual want. Subscriptions have been coming in liberally, and the relief work has been carried on judiciously and well. Every day people come to Amalgamated headquarters and receive orders for groceries and provisions. The funds already collected will hold out for some time, and none of the men are in fear of suffering from want of plenty to eat. The people who are receiving aid are principally those who received $1.40 a day, the cheap laborers who left their positions out of sympathy for the members of the Amalgamated association.

The second month opens rather discouragingly so far as the locked-out men are concerned, though they do not in the slightest admit it, and express as great confidence in ultimate victory as ever. On the 29th of June, 2,000 men having been locked out, 1,800 others struck out of sympathy and only a few watchmen were left around the plant. To-day there about 725 men in the mill and the firm claims it has a quantity of beams ready for shipment.

The Homestead strikers claim that they are still confident of victory, but the fact remains that the company now has about 725 men in the mills. So far the strikers' relief committee has been able to take care of the unemployed, but the merchants in the town are beginning to be embarrassed by the strike. Long credits are pressing them to the wall, and a grocery store has been closed by a constable.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 1.—Saturday looked like a May moving day in Homestead. All the wagons which could be secured were in use transporting the household effects of about sixty families out of the company's houses. The houses are to be occupied by the non-union workmen as soon as they can be put in good repair. The charge is made by the mill people that during the last few days the evicted tenants broke many windows and doors and otherwise destroyed property.

HELD FOR TRIAL.

Bergmann, the Anarchist Who Shot H. C. Frick, Given a Hearing.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 29.—Sylvester Critchlow, one of the strikers charged with murder on the day of the riot, applied for release on bail, but was refused and remanded to jail for trial. At the hearing several witnesses swore that they saw Critchlow load and fire a gun at the barges. In refusing bail Judge Magee said the case was close to murder in the first degree.

Alexander Bergmann, the anarchist who attempted to assassinate H. C. Frick, was given a hearing in the private office of the jail Friday afternoon and held for trial at the September sessions in $24,000 bail. The only witnesses were Vice Chairman Leishman, who was with Mr. Frick at the time, and David Forney, the elevator boy. Bergmann said it was not true that he tried to shoot Mr. Leishman. "I did not want to touch anyone but Frick; I meant to kill him." During the hearing Bergmann was remarkably cool and smoked constantly at a cigarette. It is stated that in New York the "reds" are raising a fund to defend Bergmann.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 1.—Knold and Bauer, the anarchists, were given a hearing before Magistrate Gripp Saturday and were committed to jail for trial on the charge of conspiracy in default of $2,000 bail each.

Minnesota Republicans.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 29.—Knute Nelson was nominated for governor by acclamation yesterday by the republican state convention. D. M. Clough, of Minneapolis, was nominated for lieutenant governor. Secretary of State Fred Brown was renominated, as was also State Treasurer Bobleter. The platform indorses President Harrison's administration, favors protection, recommends arbitration for settling disputes between labor and capital, favors excluding objectionable classes of immigrants and liberal pensions for old soldiers.

Father and Son Killed by Gas.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Aug. 1.—George Hite, of Union township, was overcome by gas while digging a well. His son saw him fall and went into the well to his aid and was also overcome. Both were taken out dead.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Work of the Lawmakers at the National Capital.

A Daily Summary of the Proceedings in the Senate and House—Bills Passed and New Measures Introduced.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The senate yesterday adopted the report of its conferees on the deficiency bill, leaving only the sundry civil bill to be disposed of. Mr. Hale's resolution as to the relative effects of the republican policy of "protection" and the democratic policy of "tariff for revenue only" was discussed.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—A bill was passed in the senate yesterday to facilitate the enforcement of the immigration and contract labor laws of the United States. The anti-option bill was discussed and the following nominations were confirmed: Watson A. Sperry, of Delaware, to be minister to Persia; Truxton Beale, of California, to be minister to Roumania, Servia and Greece, and A. Barton Hepburn, of New York, to be comptroller of the currency. A resolution permitting foreign exhibitors to bring into the United States skilled laborers from abroad in connection with the world's fair was passed.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—In the senate yesterday a motion favorable to the anti-option bill was passed and the house resolution for final adjournment was referred to the appropriation committee. An eight-hour law as to public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia was passed.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Discussion of the Hale resolution as to the relative merits of the republican policy of "protection" and the democratic policy of "tariff for revenue only" occupied the entire day in the senate yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—In the senate on Saturday the anti-option bill went over until the next session in December. A bill was passed appropriating $1,000 to mark by a suitable column the birthplace of James Madison, fourth president of the United States, near Port Conway, Va.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Bills were passed in the house yesterday setting apart lands in Oklahoma territory for school purposes, and forbidding railroads to charge over three cents per mile on passenger fare in the Indian territory and Oklahoma. The conference report upon the deficiency bill was agreed to. The appropriations amount to $5,900,319, being $523,589 less than as passed by the senate and $1,081,087 more than as passed by the house.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—In the house yesterday a motion to concur in the $5,000,000 world's fair appropriation made by the senate for the world's fair was carried, 117 yeas, 105 nays.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—In the house yesterday a favorable report was made on a bill appropriating $50,000 for the relief of the southern flood sufferers. Filibustering tactics were pursued to defeat the world's fair appropriation and a motion to adjourn sine die on the 30th was passed.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Filibustering over the world's fair amendment occupied most of the time in the house yesterday and no action was taken.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—No progress was made with the world's fair matter in the house on Saturday, and an adjournment was taken out of respect to the memory of Representative Craig.

CONGRESSIONAL NOMINEES.

Candidates Who Will Strive to Secure Seats in the Lower House.

OSKALOOSA, Ia., July 30.—E. S. Owens, of Wapello, was nominated yesterday for congress by the people's party in the Sixth district.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., July 30.—Hervey Lindley, of Los Angeles, was nominated for congress yesterday by the republicans of the Sixth district.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 30.—James A. Tawney, of Winona, was nominated for congress yesterday by the republicans of the First district.

MONTGOMERY CITY, Mo., July 30.—The action of the Clark delegates at the Ninth district democratic congressional convention Thursday in nominating Champ Clark, of Pike county, for congress, was followed later in the day by the Norton delegates nominating the incumbent, R. H. Norton.

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 1.—The prohibitionists of the Seventh district have nominated Rev. J. B. Mayfield, of Marshall, for congress. In the Fifth district the people's party nominated Johnson Clarke.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—The democrats of the Second district have renominated L. E. McGann for congress.

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Four Men Killed by an Exploding Boiler in a Michigan Sawmill.

GAYLORD, Mich., July 29.—The most frightful accident in the history of this county occurred Thursday morning at Bagley, on the north shore of Otsego lake. Hartnell & Smith's shingle mill, which had been built ninety days ago, was blown to atoms at 7:30 a. m. by the explosion of the boiler and the following men killed: Irwin Hutchins, L. S. Parker, Andrew Swedock and John Thompson.

Shot His Sweetheart and Himself.

CAMERON, Mo., July 30.—A young man named Parrot saw a particular friend of his and Miss Annie Coder walking to the park Friday evening. Driven to desperation by jealousy he shot and killed Miss Coder and ended his own life with the same pistol.

For Governor of Wyoming.

LARAMIE, Wyo., July 30.—Dr. J. E. Osborne, of Rawlins, has been nominated by the democrats for governor of the state.

MONROE, Mich., July 18, 1891.
Dr. O. J. Fay & Co.:
Gentlemen.—It is with pleasure that we reply to your letter asking about our success with Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Six months ago we gave our first order and since then we have sold eight times as much as our first order amounted to more than any other lung medicine we sell. Our customers after once using it want no other and they are always sure to recommend it to some other sufferer. It could not give better satisfaction and we have so much faith in what it will do that we are not afraid to recommend it to any person in need of a lung medicine. With many wishes for your success.
Yours truly,
W. VAGEN & Son.

"IF I WERE FAIR."

If I were fair!
If I had little hands, and slender feet;
If to my cheeks the color rich and sweet
Came at a word, and faded at a frown;
If I had clinging curls of burnish'd brown;
If I had dreamy eyes aglow with smiles,
And graceful limbs, and pretty girlish wiles—
If I were fair, Love would not turn aside;
Life's path, so narrow, would be broad and wide.
If I were fair.

If I were fair,
Perhaps like other maidens I might hold
A true heart's store of tried and tested gold.
Love waits on Beauty, though sweet Love alone,
It seems to me, for aught might well atone.
But Beauty's charm is strong, and Love obeys.
The mystic witchery of her shy ways.
If I were fair, my years would seem so few;
Life would unfold sweet pictures to my view,
If I were fair!

If I were fair,
Perhaps the baby, with a scream of joy,
To clasp my neck would throw away its toy,
And hide its dimples in my shining hair,
Bewilder'd by the maze of glory there!
But now—O! shadow of a young girl's face!
Uncolor'd lips that Pain's cold fingers trace,
You will not blame the child whose wee hands close,
Not on the blighted bud, but on the rose
So rich and fair.

If I were fair,
O, just a little fair, with some soft touch
About my face to glorify it much!
If no one shunn'd my presence, or my kiss,
My heart would almost break beneath its bliss.
'Tis said, each pilgrim shall attain his goal,
And perfect light shall flood each blinded soul,
When day's flush merges into sunset's bars,
And night is here. And then beyond the stars
I shall be fair!

—Edith Rutter, in London Spectator.

THE SPECTER WEDDING.

A Curious But All-Sufficient Ceremony.

Mr. Martin Dupont was a justice of the peace in the little town of Marlburg. He had been elected to office at the close of the war of 1812, and had acted in his present capacity for nearly nine years. Men of Mr. Dupont's type were very common in those days, and even now one does not have to search far to find one of these self-complacent, pompous gentlemen, who delight in winning admiration from their associates, who always have at their tongue's end a great many stories in which they play the leading part, but who are, nevertheless, very superstitious, so much so, indeed, that a glimpse of the moon over the left shoulder, or a howling dog, has power to make them melancholy for a week.

Having failed to secure for himself as large a share of this world's goods as he had wished, Mr. Dupont was fully resolved that his two children, Henry and Margaret, should not be lacking in wealth. As for his son, he very wisely concluded that a good education, added to his natural abilities, would secure for him a place in the world; and already Henry was showing the wisdom of the plan, and by his rapid advancement in business was more than fulfilling his father's expectations. It had always been Mr. Dupont's desire that his daughter should marry some rich man, but Margaret had fallen in love, very foolishly, according to her father's idea, with the principal of the Marlburg high school.

Charles Foster had several times pleaded his suit in vain before Mr. Dupont. There was no fault in the young man; Mr. D. rather grudgingly admitted, except that all he had to depend upon was his salary, but still no man should presume to become his son-in-law who had not money enough to support his daughter in better style than that in which she was then living. He liked the school-teacher very well as a friend, but as a son-in-law—that was quite another matter.

Nevertheless Charles and Margaret did not despair of their cause, although Mr. Dupont was seemingly immovable. The thought of an elopement was banished by them both as being dishonorable, and as no other plan seemed practicable they very wisely resolved to wait until some kind fate should come to their aid. This, then, was the condition of affairs when our story begins.

Mr. Dupont's duties as justice of the peace did not confine his law practice to Marlburg, but very frequently he was called away to attend various lawsuits in neighboring towns and hamlets; and it so happened that at this particular time he was engaged in a case of some considerable importance in an adjoining town. On account of the nearness of the place it was Mr. Dupont's custom to drive his own horse back and forth and to spend his nights at home.

One night, on account of an unusual press of business, he was obliged to remain beyond his ordinary time of leaving, and after the work was completed he yielded to the urgent invitation of his client to chat for a few moments. As they puffed away at the choice Havanas, they began to tell each other of various exciting adventures and wonderful experiences. Time slipped away so rapidly that it was after ten o'clock before Mr. Dupont suddenly remembered that a seven-mile drive lay between him and his home. Hastily bidding his friend good-by, he started for the hotel stable to get his horse.

The weather had changed while the two gentlemen had been chatting, and now the ominous stillness and the cloudy sky admonished Mr. Dupont that, if he wished to get home before the rain began to fall, he must hasten. Hastily throwing a quarter to the sleepy hostler, he sprang into his buggy and set out on his homeward way.

The road home was a lonely one; houses were few and far between, and a few miles out of Marlburg some lonely woods lined the road on either side, and adjoining the woods was a graveyard. As Mr. Dupont drove on into the darkness he began to become nervous, the weird stories that he had just been hearing kept flashing through his mind, a great many wrong deeds of his life came before him, magnified by the darkness and solitude, and among other things he began to wonder if he was doing just right in refusing his consent to his daughter's marriage. In this frame of mind he approached the woods; involuntarily he tried to quicken his horse's pace, but the darkness and the low murmurings of thunder seemed to have affected the horse, too, and the sagacious brute tried constantly to slacken his pace. How lonely it seemed there, no houses, no living being—nothing but the dead in the graveyard beyond. Suddenly the horse stopped and snorted. Mr. Dupont saw two white figures suddenly dart into the road; one stood beside his horse, and the other beckoned him to descend from his wagon. His hair rose, and his tongue seemed glued to his mouth. The silence was terrible. If those white beings would only speak; but no sound came from them. At last in desperation he stammered out:

"Who are you, and what do you mean by stopping me here in this way?"

"We are spirits of the departed dead," a sepulchral voice replied, "and we have need of your services; descend from your vehicle, do as we bid you, and on the word of a ghost you shall not be harmed."

The terrified lawyer descended and stood by the speaker's side, while the other ghost tied his horse to a tree and joined them.

"Yield yourself entirely to us and you shall be safe," said the spokesman. "You must needs walk far and must allow us to blindfold your eyes, in order that you may not discover before your time the way to the land of the shades. No more words must be spoken. Obey."

Mr. Dupont was so terrified that he could not speak, and in silence allowed a cloth to be bound over his eyes; then, escorted by his ghostly companions, he began to walk. It seemed to him that he would never be allowed to stop; seconds seemed ages; every attempt of his to speak was checked by impatient groans of his guides. At last, after walking half around the earth, as it seemed to him, he realized that he was being piloted up some steps, and by the feeling of warmth he knew that he had left the open air.

"The justice of the peace may be seated," said the ghost who had done all the talking.

Mr. Dupont sat down and the cloth was quickly removed from his eyes, revealing to his astonished gaze the interior of a room dimly lighted by wax candles. Every side was hung with black curtains, and on four black-covered stools facing him sat four white-robed specters, while beside him stood another dressed like his companions. Before he had time to more than wonder at his strange surroundings, the spokesman began:

"Mr. Dupont, we have a solemn duty for you to perform. You are a justice of the peace in the world of the living, and a man dear to us on account of your noble life; therefore are you here. We have in these abodes of the dead two young shades recently come from the other world. Each of these died of a broken heart because a stern parent forbade them to marry? What do you think, sir, of such a parent as that?"

Mr. Dupont wiggled about uneasily in his chair, and at last said: "I think, good shade, it was very wrong of him."

"We knew you would," resumed the ghost, "because you are a kind man, and one who loves his children. Now do we understand you to say that if the poor girl had been your child it would never have happened?"

"Surely it never would," replied the frightened Mr. Dupont.

"We have not misjudged you, then," replied the shade, while the other four ghosts nodded approvingly. "We have summoned you in order that you may unite them in wedlock, so that in this world at least they may be happy. Such a marriage as this is not common among us, so we brought you here, a good justice of the peace, rather than a minister, who might have been shocked at these proceedings. You can marry them just as well as a clergyman. Now, sir, will you oblige us by marrying these two shades? If you will consent, you may depart at once to your home. Will you?"

Marry the two shades? Of course he would; anything to get away from this terrible spot. And so, without the precaution of stipulating his fee, he stammered out:

"Oh, yes, surely, anything you wish."

No sooner had he given his consent than one of the black curtains was drawn aside and two other beings in white entered and stood before him. The other shades rose, and Mr. Dupont, not wishing to be the only one to keep his seat, rose too. The good justice had never married shades; he did not know quite how to proceed. They looked exactly alike; he did not know which was the bride and which the groom. He wished he were well out of it, and the only way to gain his wish was to proceed quickly with the ceremony, and so he began at once. Some way he managed to get through, although he could not have told afterward how it was done. He turned to the bride when he said: "Do you take this woman to be your wedded wife?" and to the groom when he should have addressed the bride; but at length, much to his relief, the "I do" was said by each, and the justice finished with the "I pronounce you man and wife."

But all was not yet over. No sooner had the words left his lips than one of the beings before him threw aside its ghostly robe, and there, in a beautiful wedding gown, stood—his daughter, Margaret. Mr. Dupont started to speak, but he only gasped, for around him stood the other ghosts; they, too, had thrown aside their robes and stood revealed. Could he believe his eyes? Yes, there was no mistake, he had married his daughter to Charles Foster, in the presence of his wife, his son and three family friends; and the justice knew enough of law to realize that the ceremony was binding. The black curtains, too, were torn down, and there they all stood in his own parlor.

There was no help for it, consequently Mr. Dupont submitted, and someway all his friends thought that he was very glad that the joke was played upon him; at any rate, in later days, as he trotted his grandchildren on his knees, he never tired of telling over and over again into their wondering ears the tale of the specter wedding.—Frank D. Blodgett, in Amherst Literary Monthly.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A Costly Kiss.

Hiram S. Lapham, a furniture dealer and large property owner in Detroit, was fined $100 on the charge of assault and battery. The evidence showed that once, while calling on a tenant, Mrs. Carrie Sackett, for his rent, he seized her about the waist and succeeded in giving her a kiss square on her lips. Mrs. Sackett is a comely brunette. She was very angry, and, furthermore, her husband entered in time to witness the osculatory assault. Lapham was severely assaulted and dragged out and was then hauled into court.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-one observers in different parts of the state for the week ended July 23 indicated that inflammation of the brain, membranous croup and inflammation of the bowels increased, and diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and pneumonia decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-five places, scarlet fever at thirty-two, typhoid fever at seventeen and measles at nine places.

Harvest in Full Blast.

Thrashing has fully commenced in southwestern Michigan, and some of the new wheat crop is already in the market. The percentage of shrunken berries is much less than expected, the hot weather immediately preceding the harvest having served to fully ripen the heads on down grain. The yield per acre will be considerably less than last year, but the increased acreage sown this season will make the total output about the same.

Robbed the Mail.

A daring robbery was committed at Traverse City on the United States mail. When the station agent went to get the mail bags thrown from the 10:45 north-bound train on the Chicago & West Michigan they had disappeared, and were only discovered late the next morning in an unused freight car, cut open and the contents taken. There was no clew to the robbers.

Will Go to Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Henderson, D. D., the well-known and eloquent divine who for the last ten years has been pastor of the First Baptist church in Detroit, has resigned to accept an important position with the Chicago university. Dr. Henderson will have charge of all the religious work of the students and will deliver lectures in the department of sociology.

Mrs. W. J. Kies and children of Elkhart are at Mrs. J. S. Kies.

We understand that James Wells has rented E. A. Clark's house.

Eugene Crane of Moreland Bros. & Crane of Adrian, was in town Monday.

Mrs. J. E. Woodward visited Mrs. Elias DePuy Saturday and Sunday.

Hause and Bainbridge attended the funeral of Joseph Lowry last Sunday.

A. W. Stalker filled the M. E. pulpit at Tecumseh last Sunday.

Alice and Ralph Halladay are visiting friends in Ohio.

C. F. Reed and family and Mrs. J. S. Kies returned from Sand Lake Monday.

Will Katner and wife went to the K. O. T. M. picnic at Devil's Lake Wednesday.

Miss Addie VanDerCook, of Tecumseh, is visiting Saturday and Sunday with friends here.

Mrs. E. R. Smith and Mrs. Mary Gilbert called on Tecumseh friends last Saturday.

Rev. Stone and family have returned from Evans Lake. They report a very enjoyable time.

E. A. Clark has leased the Elsie House for three years. He took possession Tuesday.

The Epworth League social at Mrs. Orange Sheffield's Tuesday evening was well attended.

Miss Virginia Daniels of Tipton was the guest of Mrs. Jennie Kimball Saturday and Sunday.

Misses Agnes Stevens and Lillian Kerns and Mrs. Henry Stevens visited Clinton friends Tuesday.

Claude Larrabee is spending a few days at his uncle's, Wright Miles, near Wampler's Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Freeman, of Manchester, attended the funeral of Mr. Demuth last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ward left here Wednesday for Wisconsin, where they will remain several days.

Mrs. G. W. Freese is entertaining visitors from Wisconsin. They arrived Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. E. S. Tate, of Tecumseh, was in Clinton and visited the Eastern Star Chapter Wednesday evening.

George Freese's new residence is going up rapidly. It will be an exceptionally pretty place when completed.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kies and Eva Shipman went to Sand Lake Wednesday to remain a week or ten days.

Friends of Mrs. Elvin Glimpse will be glad to hear that her condition is considerably improved and the hope of recovery thereby strengthened.

Mrs. C. B. McMaster moved her stock of millinery goods into the rooms lately occupied by E. R. Smith in the Brown block, Tuesday. Her present quarters are larger and more convenient.

The ball game last Saturday between the Adrian and Clinton boys was one of the best of the season. A large crowd witnessed the game, among which were several ladies. The score stood 15 to 14 in favor of Clinton.

We are sorry to learn of the serious illness of Clark Payne's little son, Alva, with blood-poisoning. It was caused by his wading in stagnant water after sis feet had been bitten by mosquitoes. The little fellow is a great sufferer and though everything is being done for him his recovery seems very doubtful.

The house occupied by Joseph Jackson caught fire last Saturday, and but for prompt attention and hard work it would have burned to the ground. Minnie Staiger attempted to light the gasoline stove while burning, thus igniting the fluid. The blaze spread rapidly and the kitchen roof was nearly burned through when the fire was extinguished.

The death of William W. Demuth, which from the nature of his illnesss has been looked for at any time during the last few weeks, occurred at 2 o'clock on Wednesday, July 27th. His sickness dates from early in the summer, and most of the time his suffering has been almost unendurable, so that his death, which to his friends means sorrow and loneliness unspeakable, was to him but the "touch of God's finger," releasing him from sickness and pain, placing him beyond the veil "where there is no sorrow nor sighing, neither is there any more pain." Mr. Demuth will be greatly missed among his business associates, as he was always to be found at business hours at his desk in the store, where he was engaged in the grocery business for nearly 20 years. His family knew him as a man of great kindness and indulgence, his neighbors as a genial, pleasant companion, and his acquaintances as a man worchy of the highest respect and trust. Clinton has lost a noble citizen and mourns his death. The funeral was held at the residence on Friday, at 4 p. m.

SNOWDEN TALKS.

He Says the Feeling at Homestead Is Only Suppressed—Defends Himself in the Iams Case.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 1.—Maj. Gen. George R. Snowden and a number of his staff returned to Philadelphia Friday from Homestead, and unless the situation there re[illegible] to a very serious and critical condition the general will remain here. In an interview he said:

"There are few people in Philadelphia who understand accurately the condition of affairs at Homestead at present or what it has been recently. There has been a practical press censorship out there and the newspaper correspondents have actually been prevented from describing accurately the condition of affairs.

"Is the present military force at Homestead sufficient to preserve order?"

"Unquestionably. When the division was ordered out there were prospects of the same revolutionary methods at Pittsburg, Braddock and other places in that section. Those threatening signs, outside of Homestead, have disappeared and the regiments of the Second brigade are now sufficient to attend to the trouble in that place."

"Do you think the trouble is over?"

"[illegible] The bad feeling is suppressed somewhat but it still exists and as long as the situation remains as it is now the Second brigade will remain at Homestead. It is just possible if their stay is prolonged other regiments from other brigades may be called upon to relieve them and the First brigade or some of its regiments may be called out again. The strikers such of them as are on the ground now, for many of them have disappeared, are full of threats, and it is a common thing to hear men declare that as soon as the soldiers leave they will have the lives of any men who hold their places in the works. Philadelphians can hardly appreciate the actual communism of these people. They believe that the works are theirs quite as much as they are Carnegie's and it is obvious how this sentiment renders settlement of the trouble difficult and uncertain. The ultimate result will be, I believe, that the owners of the works will regain and operate them with men of their own choosing."

"It is reported that you may be a defendant in any prosecution that may be brought in the Iams affair."

"So I have read in the newspapers, but I know nothing else about it. I think I have explained myself perfectly in that matter. When the offense of Private Iams was reported to me I ordered that he be disgraced and drummed out of the regiment. It was not my province nor was it necessary for me to write an essay instructing Col. Streator how a soldier guilty of such a crime should be disgraced. That matter could be safely left in Col. Streator's hands. As to the nature of the punishment I was ignorant of that until it had been inflicted, but I have my own opinion as to the character of the punishment that should be meted out to a soldier guilty of treason in time of actual revolution."

THE SUN'S VICTIMS.

Results of the Hot Wave That Swept Over the Country.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Yesterday was the worst and most malignant day of all the eight of affliction before the almost unprecedented hot visitation came to an end. The deaths during the day numbered 94, making a total of 170 deaths and 300 prostrations in the last eight days. The weather is now cooler.

PHILADELPHIA, July 30.—Twenty-nine deaths were added to the results of the hot weather yesterday, making 40 in the past six days, but relief is now at hand. A thunderstorm burst upon the city at night and the temperature has fallen several degrees.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The cooler weather had a marked effect on the number of heat fatalities and prostrations. Only four deaths were reported yesterday. The highest point reached by the thermometer was 94 degrees. The total number of deaths in the past six days from the heat is 96 and prostrations numbered 200.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 30.—The deaths from sunstroke in this city yesterday were 27. The temperature has fallen.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 30.—In this city and other towns in the northwest the terrible heat has given way to a cooler temperature.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—During the twenty-four hours ending at noon Saturday there were 266 deaths reported in this city. This is the heaviest death rate for a single day for twenty years. The number of deaths for the week just past is 1,434, the heaviest since July 6, 1886, when 1,581 deaths were reported for the week ending that day. Out of the 1,400 employes of the sugar refineries of Williamsburg and Brooklyn during the last six days almost 500 men have been prostrated by the heat and fourteen have died.

EX-GOV. HARDIN DEAD.

Missouri's Former Executive Expires at His Home at Mexico.

MEXICO, Mo., July 30.—Ex-Gov. C. H. Hardin died at his home in this city at 9 a. m Friday. He had been ill for some time and his death was not unexpected. Gov. Hardin was born in Kentucky in 1820. He was elected governor in 1874. He had previously been several times a member of each branch of the legislature, and in 1855 was one of a commission appointed to revise and codify the laws of the state. He voted against secession, and in 1863 retired to his farm near here, where, after the war, he resumed the practice of law. He endowed Hardin Female college, situated near this city, with property valued at over $60,000. He was president of its board of directors and gave much of his time to the cause of education.

Four Persons Cremated.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 1.—During a terrific thunder storm Saturday the Sussex county almshouse was struck by lightning and totally destroyed by fire. Four of the twenty-eight inmates perished in the flames while many of the others were seriously injured. The loss to the buildings will amount to $40,000.

The Clearing Houses.

NEW YORK, July 30.—At the leading clearing houses in the United States the exchanges during the week ended yesterday aggregated $991,715,149, against $1,052,306,769 the previous week. The increase as compared with the corresponding week of 1891 was 13.1.

Death of an Ex-Senator.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 1.—Anthony Kennedy, the only man ever elected to the United States senate as a know-nothing, died here Sunday. He was 81 years old.

A Judge Drowned.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 1.—Judge Joseph R. Clarkson, of this city, was drowned while fishing in Honey Creek lake, Ia.

WATSON'S CHARGES.

The Third Party Leader Creates a Sensation in the House.

In a Campaign Pamphlet He Accuses Members of Drunkenness on the Floor, and Emphatically Refuses to Retract.

WORRIED BY WATSON.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The world's fair matter was delayed in the house by a question of privilege raised by Mr. Wheeler (Ala.) relative to certain statements contained in a campaign book recently published by Representative Watson (Ga.) reviewing the action of the present congress and the positions taken by its members in the past. The house was plunged into a state of great confusion by an assertion by Mr. Watson that every word written in the book to which Mr. Wheeler alluded was literally true, and that he stood ready to defend every word. The assertion was greeted with prolonged hisses as the book charges that drunken members reel through the aisles of the house and drunken members speak upon grave issues.

Mr. Boatner (La.) introduced a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee to investigate the truth of Mr. Watson's charge relative to drunkenness of members of the house, and to recommend what course should be taken with respect to the member (Mr. Watson) if the charges are found to be true. Mr. Boatner asked for immediate action and after some debate the resolution was ruled to be privileged and was adopted without division.

The speaker appointed Boatner, of Louisiana, chairman; Wolverton, of Pennsylvania; Buchanan, of Virginia; Grant, of Vermont, and Simpson, of Kansas. Mr. Grant is the only republican member of the committee.

The book which contains the extract objected to and which gave rise to the sensational scenes in the house is a people's party book entitled "A Tale of a Revolt: It Is a Revolution," edited by Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia.

"There is nothing more singular than the infatuation of a system which has been weighed and found wanting, and over which hangs the sentence of doom. Belshazzar is repeated at every epoch, and wherever the mad king reaches his last evening on earth his feast is certain to be had. Revelry and wine and music within, the tread of Cyrus and his Persians without. The pampered aristocrats will listen to no warning until Dark strides into the hall and the laugh of the visionary freezes on the lips of the quaking coward.

"The congress now sitting is one illustration. Pledged to reform, they have not reformed. Pledged to economy, they have not economized. Pledged to legislate, they have not legislated. Extravagance has been the order of the day. Absenteeism was never so pronounced. Lack of purpose was never so clear. Lack of common business prudence never more glaring. Drunken members have reeled about the aisles—a disgrace to the republic. Drunken speakers have debated grave issues on the floor, and in the midst of maudlin ramblings have been heard to ask: 'Mr. Speaker, where was I at? Was I at?' Useless employes crowd every corridor. Useless expenditures pervade every department."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The special committee of the house to investigate Mr. Watson's charges that members were drunk during debate began taking testimony Saturday. Mr. Watson testified that he had seen two members reeling in the aisles during debate on the silver bill. He had seen a member drunk while talking on the Noyes-Rockwell election case.

Mr. Boatner said he did not notice anything of the kind. Messrs. Otis, White, Halverson, Butler and Clover said they had seen members intoxicated on the floor, and Miss Bessie A. Dwyer, reporter for the National Economist, testified that she noticed the speaker in the Noyes-Rockwell debate drunk, as described by Mr. Watson.

Mr. Watson interrupted and asked to be allowed to prove that there was a barroom in the basement and members were often seen drinking there. This was ruled out.

Representative Oates, of Alabama, was the next witness. During his testimony it developed that Representative Cobb, of Alabama, was the person who had made the speech in the contested election case and who was the person charged with intoxication by Representative Watson.

Mr. Oates said that while Mr. Cobb was speaking he appeared greatly exhausted, and some one sent him something to drink. The stimulant, he observed, had some effect on Mr. Cobb, enlivening his manner. Witness declared, however, that Mr. Cobb was not drunk. He had known him for twenty-seven years and never knew him to be drunk, although he took a drink sometimes. Adjourned.

KNOCKED OUT.

Acts of the Legislature of Michigan Declared Unconstitutional.

LANSING, Mich., July 29.—The supreme court has handed down opinions declaring unconstitutional the two acts of the last legislature reapportioning the representative and the senatorial districts in the state. The title of the case involving the senatorial gerrymander was "Theron F. Gidding vs. Secretary of State," and that involving the representative redistricting, "Supervisors of Houghton County vs. Secretary of State." The mandamus asked for is granted in each case and the secretary is ordered to issue notices of election in accordance with the redistricting act of 1881, the acts of 1885 being held to be equally defective with that of 1891. The court is unanimous on both acts. The decision in the senatorial case was written by Justice Grant, Chief Justice Morse and McGrath filing opinions in which the same conclusion is reached through a different course of argument. The decision in the representative bill was written by Justice Long, the chief justice filing a separate opinion.

Ten Thousand Perished.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 1.—Latest reports from the Great Sangir islands in the China sea show that the volcanic eruption of Gunong Aroo June 7 was the most destructive of modern times. Ten thousand people are believed to have been buried in the ashes and lava.

THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED, AND "THE BIG 5."

TWO GRAND TRAINS DAILY BETWEEN THE WORLD'S FAIR CITY AND THE FOOTHILLS.

One Night Out, or One Day Out. Take Your Choice, Business Demands it, and the People Must Have it.

The popularity of "The Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—it having long time since taken first place as the people's favorite between the Lakes and the Mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is one night on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo. This train will be known as the "Rocky Mountain Limited," and will be put in service May first. Leaves Chicago daily at 10:45 a. m., arriving at above cities in the afternoon of the next day, earlier than any of its competitors. Especial equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a LIMITED in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the large cities through it which passes, are Davenport, Des Moines, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Smith Center, Colby and Goodland. This makes it a most desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler. Another point: The popularity of our dining-car service, is still on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always, say, "the best."

"Our Big 5" will continue as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m. and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha.

Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas city at 9:00 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

Our Colorado service is made perfect by this new "ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED and the "BIG 5," and gives to the traveling public TWO FLYERS DAILY.

Manitou passengers should consult the map and time tables of our line, to fully appreciate the advantages in time saved by taking this route, when on their summer vacation.

JOHN SEBASTIAN,
G. T. & P. A., Chicago.

The state teachers' institute for Lenawee county will be held at Adrian, commencing at 10 a. m., Monday, Aug. 15, and closing at 4 p. m., Friday Aug. 26. The daily sessions of the institute for this year will, as heretofore, be devoted exclusively to topics of special interest to teachers, and who have made a special study of institute work. The evening lectures will be of a popular character.

Scribner for August.

The August number of Scribner's Magazine is that annually welcome feature of the summer season. "The Fiction Number." This year it contains an unusual assortment of stories—no less than seven in all. Among the popular writers who contribute stories are: Mrs. Burton Harrison, Octave Thanet, T. R. Sullivan, H. C. Bunner, and Duncan Campbell Scott. Four of the stories are illustrated, each by a single artist chosen with reference to his special fitness to deal with the particular characters and scenes. A. B. Frost illustrates Octave Thanet's Western story, "The Besetment of Kurt Lieders;" W. T. Smedley, Mr. Bunners "As One Having Authority;" Chester Loomis, Mr. Scott's Canadian story, "The Triumph of Marie Laviolette;" and C. Delort, of Paris, Mrs. James T. Field's charming version of Maurice de Guerin's famous and and beautiful prose poem, "The Centaur."

BOND & Co., 576 Rookery, Chicago.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

ESTATE OF HARRIET E. SPOFFORD.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday the 1st day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Harriet E. Spofford, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Charles A. Wright, administrator of the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far cured have been fully paid and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to law to the person or persons entitled thereto and that he may be discharged and his bond canceled, and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 29th day of August, 1892, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

A Pretty Surprise.

A beautifully illustrated and charmingly bound edition of Longfellow's "Evangeline," the most popular long poem ever published by an American author, and one of the most famous poems in the language, just published, is a pretty surprise for book-lovers. It is in large type, numerous and excellent illustrations, very fine and heavy paper, gilt edges, remarkably handsome cloth binding, with gilt title and ornaments. No illustrated edition has ever before been published at less cost than $1.50, and that is about what you might "guess" the price of this to be, but it isn't—it sells for only 19 cents; plus 6 cents for postage, if by mail. This covers only about the actual cost of manufacture by the 100,000, the publisher's object being, not profit, but to show the book-loving millions what he can do. His publications are not sold by dealers, but only direct; catalogue, over 100 pages, a literary curiosity in its way, is sent for a 2-cent stamp. Every home in the land ought to have a copy of this Evangeline, so charmingly beautiful, as a poem, as a collection of artistic illustrations, and as a product of the book-making art. Address, JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

THE TRUE LAXATIVE PRINCIPLE

Of the plants used in manufacturing the pleasant remedy, Syrup of Figs, has a permanently beneficial effect on the human system, while the cheap vegetable extracts and mineral solutions, usually sold as medicines, are permanently injurious. Being well-informed, you will use the true remedy only. Manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

There are too many young Americans looking for jobs. They had better go to work.

WOMAN'S HEALTH AND LIFE

depend more regularity than on any or all causes combined. All actual or living death is the result of derangement of functions which make woman what she is. Immediate relief is the only safeguard against wreck and ruin. In all cases of stoppage, delayed, painful or other irregularities Beadfield's Female Regulator is the only sure remedy. Sold by Jno. J. Orr.

I used three bottles of Mother's friend and when I was sick I never went to bed until 12:30, and my boy was born at 3 a. m. with scarcely any pain. I will do all I can in recommending it to expectant mothers. Your thankful friend, Mrs. B. F. Wathereus, Marion, O., Sept. 1890. Sold by Jno. Orr.

Lightning struck Tony Brunk's chimney last week Wednesday, completely clearing the plaster from between the bricks. It also shattered one of the posts of Jas. Cadewood's windmill, besides setting fire to many fine crops in other sections, and in some cases destroying human life.

Married, at the homes of the brides parents, Wednesday, August 3rd, 1892, Miss Anna M. Smith and Mr. David Britton, at Macon, and Miss Nettie Davenport and Lamont Hoagland, at Blissfield. Both of the boys are among our most highly respected young men. They were born and raised here and have many warm and intimate friends. We congratulate them on their choice of life partners and extend our best wishes for a long, happy and prosperous future. Mr. Britton, after a few weeks' rest from office duty, will return to his work at Battle Creek. Mr. Hoagland for the present will stop at home, and should he not succeed in the establishment of a banking company here he will embark in other business.

THE BAND REUNION.

Arrangements are being rapidly perfected for the Band Reunion which will take place in Tecumseh on Aug. 25th, two weeks from to-day. Special rates have already been secured on both the Lake Shore and Mackinaw roads and special trains are expected on both roads. Tecumseh must get ready to entertain a big crowd. Below is a general outline of the day's program:

At 1:30 o'clock the bands will form on Evans street, in front of the Council Building, in four divisions in charge of Marshall H. W. Stevens and his assistants.

Division 1, with headquarters at the Council Building, form on Evans street.

Division 2, with headquarters at Sutton's Opera House, form on Chicago St.

Division 3, with headquarters at Armory hall, form on Evans street.

Division 4, with headquarters at Cheever's hall, form on Chicago street.

Visiting bands will be met at the depots by the Tecumseh City Band and escorted to the headquarters assigned them, where badges will be distributed to each musician.

From 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. dinner will be served at Sutton's opera house to all visiting bandmen. The dinner will be furnished by the ladies of Tecumseh and vicinity.

LINE OF MARCH.

On Evans Street south to Pottawatamie, on Pottawatamie west to Union, on Union north to Logan, on Logan east to Maumee, on Maumee south to Pottawatamie, on Pottawatamie west to Oneida, on Oneida south to Kilbuck, on Kilbuck west to Ottawa, on Ottawa north to Chicago, on Chicago west to Maiden Lane, thence countermarch to place of beginning.

At the central band stand the following program will be observed:

Address of Welcome—Hon. J. D. Shull.
Selections by various bands.
Overture by consolidated bands, conducted by Prof. C. F. Skinner.

The bands will then consolidate and march through the principal streets, playing in unison, after which the various bands will give concerts from stands erected in different parts of the city.

During the afternoon and at the close of the musical program Prof. Bartholomew of Jackson, will make a balloon ascension and parachute drop.

Rah for Grover Cleveland!

What a mighty, mighty army moves the Democrats along!
To the polls just see them rushing, fully seven million strong!
Grover Cleveland is our leader, and we're sure to win the fight,
Battling for our country's honor, for the truth and for the right.

CHO.—"Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah for Grover Cleveland!
From the lakes to old Swanee;
Grover Cleveland wins the battle,
"Cleve" and "Steve" twill surely be.

Southern Democrats are saying, we are sure to win the day,
Northern patriots are with us, and they've surely come to stay
In the West we're strong, and Stevenson will make us stronger too,
While the Eastern states are sure to vote for Grover, tried and true

CHO.—"Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah for Grover Cleveland!
Harrison and all his party of Repubs are on the run,
Scared to death by Grover Cleveland and the Democratic gun.
Off will go the heads of thousands as we turn a the rascals out.
So so long with the procession and be with us at the rout

CHO.—"Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah for Grover Cleveland!

The above are the words of a rattling good Campaign Song by A. J. Showalter the popular composer and song writer. The words speak for themselves, while the music is catchy and spirited—just what it ought to be to set all the bands to playing and everybody else to singing, whistling or shouting for Grover Cleveland. Published by The A. J. Showalter Co., Dalton, Ga. Price words and music, 25 cents per dozen copies; $1.00 per 100 post paid. Send for a hundred and help win the glorious victory.

For The Campaign.

SOMETHING ABOUT WAGES.

Manufacturers Begin to Hear Ominous Rumblings—High Priced Wages and Cheap Goods.

Mr. L. L. Schoonmaker, the representative of the Carnegie association in New York, made a statement in regard to the Homestead troubles in which he said:

"The day must infallibly come—it may come at the next election—when the protective tariff which built our mills will cease, and it is to prepare for that repeal that we are making these tonnage increases, in order to defy the competition that on that day—now in sight—will arise from every corner of the land."

This is all nonsense, except in so far as it shows that some of the manufacturers have had their ears to the ground recently and have heard the pent-up rumblings against the republican favoritism. Many kinds of iron and steel goods are manufactured cheaper here now than in any other country, and with a few raw materials we could in most lines, as we now in some, compete in the markets of the world without attempting to make any saving by reducing wages—which is a doubtful saving at best.

We have heard many good republican authorities say, as did Blaine and Evarts, when as secretaries of state they made reports on the condition and efficiency of labor here and abroad, that the difference in efficiency accounted for the high wages paid in this country. The New York Press has demonstrated this in the paper and several other industries. The following from the American Wool Reporter of July 7, 1892, also a protectionist paper, is a plain statement of the case:

"It is well known that, when a manufacturer wishes to lessen the cost of goods, his first thought turns to the question of a reduction of wages; that seems to be the easiest solution. It saves trouble in estimating results from more complicated methods, and like many of the easiest ways, we are inclined to think it is not always the best way. At first there is undoubtedly a reduction in cost, but the reaction is frequently bad. We could have no better example than the old world, where wages have been reduced to the very lowest figure that will prevent starvation. Americas and Americans are fast distancing them in the skilled arts, and can produce a good many lines cheaper and better than they can. The reason for this is well illustrated by the apparently strange course business is taking in the large iron-producing establishments.

"It is an indisputable fact that as wages have been reduced in England so has the German and Belgium competition begun to be felt, and it may be looked upon as an illustration of cheap labor against high priced labor.

"More illustrations of the fact that low priced labor is not always productive of cheap goods but that high priced is, can be had by looking abroad, if we do not desire to look around our own country. England has for a great number of years held markets on the continent of Europe, in competition with the cheap labor there. Vast quantities of cotton goods are exported to China, and no one can question the cheapness of the labor there.

"It seems rather paradoxical to state that high priced wages make cheap goods. Everything points to this conclusion very forcibly, that cutting down the pay of help instead of endeavoring to improve them and make them worth more is not always to do business that will have a continued success. Manufacturers have evidence of it every day; they see some firms that are prosperous, the help satisfied and in good circumstances, not needing any trades unions to set the price of their labor but satisfied with getting what they earn. And the increased earnings of the help mean an increase of production for the factory and at cheaper rates."

CHIEF OF TARIFF FRAUDS.

"American" Tin Plate Made of Imported Black Sheets, Coated With Imported Tin, By Imported Labor, By the Use of Imported Machinery.

There are several other bigger frauds when amounts are considered that are being worked on the American people than the tin plate fraud; but this one is pre-eminent when the percentage of frauds to the dollar is taken into account. It matters but little from what point of view the subject is approached: The consumer is losing from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year, with no compensation at present and no hopes of any in the future; the American workingman is getting no benefit from the small tin plate, or rather tin coating, establishments that are temporarily located here, because the only labor that receives more than ordinary day wages is imported; the capitalist who invests in this business is likely to lose money because the high price of steel or "black" sheets (due to the duiy) prevents the prosperity of the industry here until we can import plates free of duty or can roll them here as cheaply as they are rolled in Europe; even the politicians will find that this industry has done them more harm than good. It is said that some of them are already sorry that they staked so much on it and made such glowing promises.

Hon. Thomas L. Bunting said in congress, June 16, 1892: "The tin plate industry, as now developed and put on record, is a finishing shop for Welch consignments of cold-rolled, pickled, and annealed steel-plates. It is adding to this Welch material twenty-five cents of Welch labor, through the use of Welch machinery, for each box of tin plate. It is simply putting on a coat of paint on the finished product, with Australian paint, and a Welch brush and by a Welch painter. Up to date, with but few exceptions, the tin plate industry of this country has but one ingredient in its composition which is truly American, viz: domestic atmosphere. And this is the reason why in the burning of the factory over at Philadelphia belonging to the N. & G. Taylor company there was not an entire destruction and loss because the atmosphere was rescued!"

If anyone thinks that American tin plate, so-called, is made from American black sheets, let him read the evidence presented by Hon. Benjamin F. Shively in the house on June 15. Mr. Shively had prepared for him by the chief of the bureau of statistics statements showing the imports of iron and steel sheets, such as are commonly used for making tin and terne plates. It should be remembered that these plates constitute about nine-tenths of the weight and also nine-tenths of the value of tin and terne plates. The statistics of imports were as follows:

Period, Year Ended June 30	Rate of duty, cents per lb.	Pounds, thinner than No. 25 wire gauge	U. S. Product
1889	1.75	6,246
1890	1.75	2,750
1891	1.65	1,333,582
Quarter ended September 30, 1891	1.65	786,603	826,923
December 31, 1891	1.65	974,241	1,409,821
March 31, 1892	1.65	3,957,700	3,004,487

Commenting upon this table Mr. Shively said: "Every pound of black plates noted in this table is of the proper gauge and general character for thin and tern plates. The plates noted are ready to receive the coat of tin or tin and lead. The normal importation and consumption of these plates prior to the passage of the act of 1890 is shown by the statistics for the fiscal years 1889 and 1890, respectively." For comparison the product of "American" tin plate, as reported by the special agent of the treasury department, has been given in the last column. Previous to the quarter ended September 30, 1891, tin and terne plate was not made here in commercial quantities, though it is evident from the imports of black sheets just previous to this time that preparations were being made to establish this now famous "American" industry.

Mr. Shiveley says: "These statistics, all of which are official, show that the American production of tin and terne plate for the three quarters ended March 31 was 5,240,830 pounds, while the importations of black plates for the same period was 5,418,552 pounds. Moreover it must be remembered that the 1,389,582 pounds of black sheets imported during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1891, remain unaccounted for. As is shown by the importations for 1889 and 1890 the consumption of imported black plates in this country prior to the passage of the act of 1890 did not average over 5,000 pounds per annum. Small amounts of these plates have been for years used in the manufacture of signs and a few other articles. It is perfectly apparent that the bulk of the 1,339,582 pounds was imported for other purposes. The real fact is that from the time the act of 1890 went on the statute book to March 31, 1892, there was imported into the United States 6,758,144 pounds of black plates, and there was made 5,240,830 pounds of what the treasury department construes to be tin and terne plate produced in the United States, so that after making ample allowance for all the imported black plates consumed in this country for other purposes, we have left over 1,000,000 pounds to coat with tin and return to the treasury department at the end of the present quarter as tin plate produced in the United States.'"

This, then, is the kind of an industry that protection is trying to domesticate and put on exhibition here. The animals in Barnum's circus are as much American as is this industry, and far more useful for exhibition purposes.

HIGH TARIFF.

Air—"Tu Willow."

Republican friends have you tried long enough
This tariff, high tariff, high tariff
Don't it look to you now like a big game of bluff,
This tariff, high tariff, high tariff?
Can you see where it's helped you to sell or to buy
Is it truth which they've told you, or is it a lie?
And will you continue to vote till you die
For tariff, high tariff, high tariff?

The workingmen now have just opened their eyes
To tariff, high tariff, high tariff
Republican pledges they've learned to despise
On tariff, high tariff, high tariff.
McKinley's loud talk has turned out mighty thin;
It amounts to the same as American tin:
It's varnished outside, but it's rotten within,
Like tariff, high tariff, high tariff.

Monopolists cry for protection, you know,
And tariff, high tariff, high tariff.
We're taxed to protect them—you all know it's so—
With tariff, high tariff, high tariff.
They urge us to vote, and, with promises fine,
Inform us we'll have a more prosperous time:
They gobble the fat and then throw us the rind—
That's tariff, high tariff, high tariff.

The force bill, you know, is another rank fraud,
With tariff, high tariff, high tariff.
How can any party such measures applaud,
With tariff, high tariff, high tariff.
It's a blot on the nation such bills to put through.
But republican schemes of that sort are not new:
We'll change the whole plot if you'll only pull true
Against tariff, high tariff, high tariff.

With tariff reform we will swamp the whole crew.
And tariff, high tariff, high tariff:
With republican chaff honest men have got through.
And tariff, high tariff, high tariff.
For Cleveland and Stevenson now clear the way.
We see through the mist the bright dawning of day:
We see better times and we see better pay—
Less tariff, less tariff, less tariff.
—Em. Pierce, in N. Y. World.

Tell-Tale Wage Reductions.

Out of the 438 wage reductions in protected industries printed in the New York World, the greatest number that occurs in any one state is 110, which, of course, is credited to Pennsylvania. Next in order comes New York with 97; New Jersey, 39; Massachusetts, 33; Ohio, 26; Indiana, 19; Illinois, 15; Connecticut, 11; Rhode Island, 7; Tennessee, 6; Montana, 6; Missouri, 5; Maine, Maryland and Michigan, 4 each; Minnesota, Kentucky, Wyoming, Alabama and Arkansas, 3 each; Iowa, West Virginia, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas and Delaware, 2 each, and eleven more states and territories 1 each. This summary shows at once what states receive the most protection and the inevitable results of such protection. Not only are wages higher in the unprotected industries, but there are fewer wage reductions and strikes in them. It is facts like these that make protectionists scratch their heads and think.

BRUTALLY SLAIN.

A Gray-Haired Couple Murdered in Massachusetts.

Andrew J. Borden and His Wife Found Dead at Their Home—A Daughter Suspected of Having Committed the Terrible Crime.

AN AWFUL TRAGEDY.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 6.—Andrew J. Borden, a respected business man 69 years of age, and his wife, a most estimable lady of advanced years, were literally hacked to pieces in their quiet home at 92 Second street just previous to the noon hour Thursday. It was a most brutal and shocking murder, and no crime in the annals of Massachusetts compares with it in fiendishness. The house is a two and one-half story structure, surrounded by a well-kept yard with a barn, and is located in a thickly-settled neighborhood. The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Borden, an unmarried daughter Lizzie and a servant named Bridget Sullivan. Another unmarried daughter is away on a visit to relatives.

Mr. Borden was a courteous gentleman who amassed a fortune when a member of the firm of Borden & Almy, undertakers. He retired from business many years ago and invested largely in real estate. He was president of the Union savings bank, a director in the B. M. C. Durfee Safe Deposit and Trust Company and was interested in several manufacturing concerns of the city.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 6.—Miss Lizzie Borden is practically under arrest on suspicion of the murder of her father and stepmother. She is under the close surveillance of four detectives. The detectives engaged on the case feel confident that their suspicions will be sufficiently confirmed by further evidence to-day to warrant the woman placed in jail. Friday it was discovered that within thirty-six hours prior to the murder Miss Lizzie purchased four ounces of prussic acid at D. R. Smith's drug store, and an investigation is being made to discover if that was the poison which caused the sickness of the old people. Eli Bence, the clerk who sold the poison, identified Miss Borden. She made no denial of the purchase and claimed she intended to use the prussic acid to kill moths. Every effort has been made to find the ax, for such doubtless was the instrument with which the heads of Millionaire Borden and his wife were crushed in. Thus far they have been unsuccessful

For a motive the authorities say that Miss Borden would have come into possession of $500,000 by the death of the old folk and that she had been kept down on a miserly allowance insufficient to dress and do as she desired.

THE EARTH TREMBLED.

A Violent Shock Felt in Several Localities in Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 5.—An earthquake was distinctly felt all over Burlington and the vicinity shortly after 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. A rumbling noise, followed by the rattling of dishes on the supper tables, the stopping of clocks and distinct shaking of the walls, caused many people to run out of doors to investigate the cause. The reports from New Munster, Wilmot and other places state that the shock was distinctly felt in those neighborhoods. In some places it was so severe that houses were toppled over, chickens were knocked off their roosts and people were made "seasick." In many instances bricks were dislodged from chimneys and signs swung to and fro, although there was no breeze. At New Munster bells were tolled in the church steeples and the inhabitant were panic-stricken.

AT LOON LAKE.

The President Arrives and Finds His Wife Improved, Though Still Far from Well.

LOON LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—President Harrison arrived here Saturday as unostentatiously as do the other guests who visit Loon Lake. Dr. Gardener, the physician who attended Mrs. Harrison upon her first arrival, is no longer here. He has now been gone several days, but it is understood that he will return in a few days. Mrs. Harrison is still quite ill, though she has improved and to a wonderful degree since her arrival here.

The Cartridge Was Good.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 6.—Luke Madden on Thursday held a dynamite cartridge while George Mahoney set it off. They will never do it again, as four hands were blown into space. The boys live at Lansing. The cartridge was found in the woods and the boys wanted to see if it was good. It was. It took two doctors all night to patch up what was left of four arms.

A Desperate Criminal.

NOBLESTOWN, Pa., Aug. 8.—Martin Reed, under sentence of death for the murder of Alexander Chappel, escaped from jail at Noblestown, Pa., and when Officers Orr and Coyle attempted to capture him Saturday Reed shot them fatally and then shot himself dead.

Death of an Old Engineer.

TUCSON, A. T., Aug. 6.—Joshua Walcott, aged 67 years, died Friday morning. He was born in Massachusetts, and was engineer of the first passenger train run on the New York Central, also the first engineer on the Panama railroad.

Fire in a Nebraska Town.

ALLIANCE, Neb., Aug. 8.—Fire at 2 o'clock Sunday morning destroyed the post office, the building of the Alliance Times, the Norton block and five other business buildings, causing a loss of $50,000; fully insured.

Lightning Sets a Mill on Fire.

STILLWATER, Minn., Aug. 6.—The lumber mill of the Schulenberg & Boeckeler Company has been destroyed by fire. The loss is $125,000; insurance, $65,000. The fire is supposed to have been started by lightning.

BY S. C. STACY.

IN HYMEN'S BONDS.

The cozy little auditorium of St. Peter's church was never decked in finer attire and never contained a happier assemblage than on last Monday afternoon. More than two hundred guests assembled there at six o'clock to witness the nuptial ceremony which bound [illegible] and Miss Blanche Mead.

The church was gaily decorated and all the details were arranged on an elaborate scale. Flowers, myrtle and white were profusely scattered about the chancel and in front of the choir platform. The decorations within the chancel were wholly of white and green. The floor was carpeted with white and the sides hung with white, covered with trailing green vines, while large banks of palms completed this part of the decorations. The organ loft was trimmed in yellow, the orchestra being concealed behind a bank of yellow daisies and cat tails. The windows were shaded, giving a twilight appearance to the scene. A canopy [illegible] the sidewalk to the South entrance door, forming a closed canopy to shelter the bridal party as they entered. Special music was prepared for the occasion, which was executed by Miss Louise Phelps organist, and Messrs. Knapp, Dickinson and Ingersoll. The introductory piece was a selection, "Approach of Spring Waltz" by Zichoff. The bridal chorus from Lohengrin, by Wagner, was played as the bridal party entered the church. The closing selection was Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Messrs. Ben Cocker of Adrian, Will Kerr of Bay City, Robe Hosier and Herbert Baker of Tecumseh, officiated as ushers. Miss Camilla Mead, a sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor. Misses Fanny Mead and Alice Hatch of Bay City, Albertine Brewer of Tecumcumseh and Anna Osborn of Macon, were bridesmaids. Capt. Will Hayden officiated as best man. The bride and her maids were richly attired in costumes appropriate to the season and the occasion. The bride wore white crape en train, with white flowers adorning her hair, carrying white china asters. The maid of honor wore yellow silk mull, en train, carrying marguerite marigolds. Miss Fanny Mead, wore pink silk mull, en train; Miss Hatch light blue silk mull, en train; Miss Brower light blue corded silk, en train; Miss Osborn pink silk mull, en train. The maids all carried sweet peas and wore them in their hair. The groom was attired in a full dress suit of plain black. Among the guests present from abroad were the parties already mentioned and also Miss Louie Hatch, of Bay City.

The guests arrived with promptness and at the appointed hour, six o'clock, the chorus from Lohengrin announced the entrance of the bridal party, who passed up the isle in this order: Two ushers, two bridesmaids, two ushers, two bridesmaids, next the maid of honor, then the bride, followed by Mrs. Josephine Mead, the bride's mother, on the arm of the bride's uncle, Mr. Cyrus Mead, the uncle giving the bride away. They were met by the groom and best man in front of the chancel; the rector, Rev. J. Phelps, said the marriage formula from the church ritual; the bride and groom stepped to the inner altar, knelt and received the rector's benediction, and the ceremony was over which made the twain husband and wife. The bridal party then retired from the church, led by the newly wedded couple, and the spectators followed.

A portion of the company drove directly to the residence of the bride's mother, in Macon, where a reception was tendered to a large and brilliant company. An elaborate wedding supper was served and the festivities continued until a late hour in the evening. The happy pair were the recipients of a large and beautiful array of wedding gifts, which testified more emphatically than words can express, the high esteem in which they are held by their friends and acquaintances. After a brief honeymoon they will take up their permanent abode in Tecumseh, the groom having a good position in the Globe Mills.

The bridal couple, whose wedded life has been so auspiciously begun, need no introduction to our readers. The groom is the son of Wm. Hayden, Esq., one of the best known and most highly respected of Lenawee County's citizens. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Leroy Mead of Macon, and is a young lady of marked ability, fine social accomplishments, and womanly beauty. Both groom and bride have been reared in adjoining towns and both have long been favorites in Tecumseh society. Congratulations and good wishes will be showered upon them, as they set sail on their matrimonial voyage, and none will be more heartily and sincerely tendered than those which the HERALD begs leave to bestow. That their future years on earth may be as bright as their present prospects are will be the benediction of all who know them.

The major portion of the HERALD force will go to Devils Lake, to-morrow morning for an outing of four days. They have engaged a temporary home, the Bresie cottage, and expect to catch about a ton of fish during their stay here.

A DAY IN DETROIT.

Last Friday was a good day for a brief outing and we devoted it to a trip to Detroit, combining business and pleasure in one.

Taking the Lake Shore road to Raisin Center, we then alighted and took the morning train on the Wabash to Detroit, arriving there about half-past ten in the forenoon. Took a Fort street car for down town and upon arriving at Griswold street we started out at once on our travels.

S. A. James & Co. on Larned street are flourishing. Sam James is now in Windsor, having recently gone there [illegible] Alf is now on the road most of the time and Roy DeWolf was in charge of the store. He likes his position there very much and is evidently becoming a fixture in the establishment.

We found Mr. F. C. Stoepel at Burnham, Stoepel & Co.'s wholesale store, corner of Jefferson and Woodward Avenues. The House is now doing an immense trade, although this is an "easy season of the year. Mr. Stoepel's family is now rusticating at Pine Lake, near Pontiac, where they have a summer cottage. He runs up there nearly every night and always on Saturday to stay over Sunday. Mrs. N. M. Stoepel is now stopping with them at Pine Lake and will remain two or three weeks yet.

We called at Eugene Clarkson's office but found him not [illegible]. He had left the city that morning for a business trip to Denver, taking advantage of the excursion rates to the Templar Conclave. From his associate in the office we heard good reports about him and learn that he is acquiring the reputation of being one of the best young attorneys in the city. We regretted that we missed a personal chat with him.

We found Capt. Jas. C. Wheeler at his old desk in the Collector's office. Administrations may come and go, but the Captain stays right there just the same. He began work in the U. S. Collector's office at Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 1st, 1872, remained there until October, 1888, when he entered the Detroit office, where he has been ever since. He is considered one of the best clerks in the civil service and is reasonably sure of retaining his place as long as he desires it.

Wm. Van Camp's family is still residing in Detroit, although Mr. Van Camp himself, being engaged in the book business, is traveling most of the time. Miss Maigel Van Camp, who has had considerable experience as a teacher of vocal music and elocution, is now connected with Schwankovsky's music establishment on Woodward Ave. in a business capacity and is evidently giving excellent satisfaction there.

We found Bert Tribou in the cashier's chair at the National Loan & Investment Co. in the Opera House block. This Company has a strong local board in Tecumseh and an ad now running in the HERALD. Bert's official duties must agree with him for he does not pine away a particle. He likes his position and the firm is evidently well satisfied with his services.

As we descended the stairs, who should we find on the sidewalk but our whilom friend, Joe Hart, formerly of Adrian, who invited us into the Central Savings bank on the lower floor of the Opera House block. Mr. Hart was one of the original organizers of this institution, about four years ago, and is now the Cashier of the bank. They make a specialty of receiving savings deposits and keep open doors an hour each evening.

We made a serious effort to find Jud DePuy but failed. Probably he could have been found at his home on Brady street, but that was a mile or two out and lack of time prevented our taking the necessary walk.

Frank Smalledge is still to be found at his drug store on Jefferson Ave., where he is enjoying a fine business. He keeps one of the best steppers in the City and knows how to pull the reins over him. Tecumseh people will always find the latch string out at Frank's store.

We spent a few minutes very profitably in the Free Press establishment. Both Detroit and the State of Michigan have reason to be proud over the growth and present condition of the Free Press. Not only is it the leading newspaper in Michigan but it has large and finely equipped job and engraving departments, and the business of the House in these two departments is assuming mammoth proportions. We called at the proof readers' sanctum to see Levi B. Stevens, but as his hours do not begin till after supper we failed to find him.

We enjoyed an excellent dinner and supper at Rice's Hotel, and returned home on the evening Lake Shore train, having put in the day to excellent advantage.

OBITUARY.

Frances T. McMillan was born at [illegible], N. Y. March 4, 1821, where she lived until eighteen years of age, when she removed with her parents to the then new state of Michigan. In Jan. 1842, she was united in marriage with Alvin W. Goff and went with him to his home two miles west of Blissfield. Four children, three daughters and one son, were born to them, two of the daughters dying in infancy.

In December, 1852, her husband was removed by death, and left with the care and responsibility of two little children, her life for a number of years was one of constant struggle and self-denial.

Soon after marriage, she united on [illegible] and [illegible] with the Methodist Episcopal church, and remained a faithful and consistent member. Though at a distance from the church and nearly always obliged to walk if she attended its services, through summer's heat and dust, or winter's cold and snow, her place there and in the Sabbath School, where she was for many years a teacher, was seldom vacant.

In March, 1876, she left the farm that had been her home for over thirty years and removed to Tecumseh. Thereafter her cares were somewhat lightened, yet hands and brain were still busy, working and planning for those she loved. In October, 1876, she united by letter with the Presbyterian church at Tecumseh, and though prevented for some years before her death by failing health from attending its services or taking any active part in its work, her interest in its growth and prosperity remained keen and strong until the last. The last year and a half she has been entirely blind and then it was that her faith and trust shone out the more brightly. Much of the time suffering pain and weakness, days and nights alike in darkness, she who had so long ministered to others, herself now wholly dependent on their care, yet through it all her confidence in God and his kindly dealings with her never for a moment failed. Never fretful or complaining, grateful always for every service rendered, her constant expression was, "How good every one is to me; how many things I have to be thankful for." Gradually growing weaker, on the afternoon of July 27th she peacefully fell asleep.

And so has gone a faithful, loving mother and a true friend. May those who were permitted to witness her faith and courage carry with them these lessons of patient endurance till they too shall be called to meet her on the other side. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord: Yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

OBITUARY.

Alva B. Paine, only child of T. C. and Lucy J. Paine, died at the home of his parents after a painful illness of four weeks, Friday morning, Aug. 5th, 1892. He was born September 7th, 1883, lacking only one month and two days of being nine years old. The funeral obsequies were held at the family residence Sabbath afternoon, Aug. 7th, conducted by Rev. O. J. Perrin, of Tecumseh. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in this section of the county. Many sympathizing friends came to mingle their tears with those of the distressed parents, who had been called to part with their only child. Little Alva was a very bright and affectionate boy, loved most tenderly by his father and mother and by all who knew him. In return the warmest love of his own dear heart went out to his kindred and friends. God be praised for the precious children of our homes. We have done much for them. They have done more for us. What a salve for a wounded heart there is in the soft palm of a child's hand. Did harp or flute ever have such music as there is in a child's sweet "good night?" How desolate is the home from which death has removed them. But God has the first claim upon them. The Good Shepherd knows that they are safer, more secure and happier in the Heavenly fold above. They are still our own to love and cherish.

"He is not dead, the child of your affection.
But gone on to that school
Where he no longer needs your protection
And Christ himself shall rule."

CARD OF THANKS.

During our recent sore bereavement in the unexpected loss of our only child, the manifestation of sympathy by so many kind friends was so abundant that words are inadequate to express our gratitude. We can only say that we were helped to bear our burden of sorrow in a manner never to be forgotten.

T. C. PAINE.
LUCY J. PAINE.

Died, in this village, on Tuesday evening, August 9th, 1892, Mrs. Mary E. Burnett, in the 55th year of her age.

Deceased was born in Perrysburg, O. Her father, the late Hon. Henry Darling, and mother, who still survives, came to Michigan while she was yet a babe and settled at Lake Ridge, where she was brought up and lived till Aug. 14, 1857, when she was married to W. Q. Burnett and at once entered upon the duties of an itinerant minister's wife. Her earnest and consistent life won her many friends in that sphere of labor. She was a devoted wife and tender mother. Her husband, four sons and two daughters, an aged mother, one brother and two sisters lament her departure, but are supported by the hope of meeting her again in our Father's house of many mansions.

Frank Thomas Adkins, the youngest child of Rev. Frank and Mrs. Alice D. Adkins, was born at Elyria, Ohio, on the 29th of April, 1885. As he was but three years old when his parents removed to Tecumseh it may be said that his babyhood was passed in Elyria and his childhood in Tecumseh. He was always a child of slight but active frame, with a mind developed more than is usual in a child of [illegible] age. Though the youngest of the family and the pet of all he was in no degree injured thereby, for he was a child of unusually happy and pleasing disposition. Though he never made a public profession of religion he spoke often on the subject, and expressed clear convictions of the fact that he trusted in the Savior for a hope of eternal life. The remembrance of this is a great consolation to his parents and sisters and brothers in their [illegible] bereavement. He died Aug. 1st from cerebral meningitis after a short but painful illness of a little less than three weeks. In our beautiful cemetery he sleeps the sleep that shall know no waking till that great day when "The grave shall give up its dead."

Reunion of the 18th Regiment.

COMRADES:—The 25th annual reunion of the 18th Mich. Vol. Infantry will be held at Pittsford, Mich., Aug. 26, 1892. Business meeting at one p. m. Rev. Elvero Persons, of Co. C, and others will be present and address us. The comrades and citizens of Pittsford will give you a cordial welcome. A general good time is expected.

Train No. 15, (vestibule) west, on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., will stop at Pittsford; also No. 8, east. This will give those from the east about twelve hours for reunion. Camp-fire in the evening.

Comrades of the 18th Mich.—Thirty years have come and gone since we were mustered into the U. S. service. [illegible] but let us again close up our ranks and come out and make the 30th anniversary the grandest reunion ever held by the Regiment.

LIEUT. C. A. JEWELL, Pres.
D. H. WARREN, Sec.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to tender our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for their sympathy and kindness during the sickness of our husband and daughter.

MRS. ABIJAH PACKARD AND FAMILY.

Card of Thanks.

To all who so kindly assisted us through our mother's long illness and at her death, and to the singers who rendered such beautiful music at her funeral, we wish to return our sincere thanks.

R. G. GOFF AND FAMILY,
MRS. G. J. HUEY.

A GOLD TRAIN.

About 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, one of the great gold trains, transferring $100,000,000 of bullion from the west coast to Washington, D.C., passed through this city. The transfer is being made from the sub-treasury at San Francisco, because the treasury department thinks it is too near the sea coast, in case of an international affair.

This train carries $80,000,000 in gold, and is made up of two special service steel cars, dead ends, one U. S. mail car, and a C., B. & Q. sleeper. Forty men are in charge. The train did not stop here, but went through on the fly. The side doors of the car were open, and the guards, heavily armed, stood in the doors.—Adrian Times.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 11, 1892.

Local and Miscellaneous

There is a big crop of huckleberries this year.

Alf. James, Jr., of Detroit, was in town Friday of last week.

The Knights Templar have taken Denver by storm this week.

Work is being pushed satisfactorily at the big water works well.

There was an old fashioned crowd in Tecumseh last Saturday evening.

Lt. Will McNair and Fred McNair visited their uncle, C. A. Sharp, at Adrian, the first of the week.

Enoch Tindall left home last Saturday for a trip to Denver. He expects to be absent about a month.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Henry, of Toledo, came up on the excursion train last Sunday and spent the day with Tecumseh friends.

E. C. Baird, of Dayton, Ohio, is in town this week. He expects to return home Saturday but his wife will remain for some time yet.

A train of twenty empty passenger coaches went up the Jackson Branch Tuesday morning. They were used for the grocers' excursion from Jackson to Bawbeese Lake, yesterday.

A. J. Sherrard arrived in town Saturday and is spending the present week with Tecumseh friends. He is now on the road and makes his headquarters at New York city.

Preaching in the South Macon church on Sunday 14th at 7:30 p. m., instead of 10:30 a. m., as at first announced. Will members please take notice and oblige,
J. I. GULICK, Pastor.

The Literary Century for July is at hand. It is the best number yet issued and has a very readable table of contents among which is a fine short story entitled "The Story of Jack Clemens," by E. Cora DePuy.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richard, of Jackson, were shaking hands with their Tecumseh friends last Saturday. They are always welcome here, but their visits are too short to satisfy their many acquaintances.

Landlord Patterson entertained a large party of home guests at dinner last Sunday, together with a number of Toledo visitors. Taking a Sunday dinner at the Lilley House is quite the style now.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Montague left last Tuesday to visit friends north of Grand Rapids. Jim said they were going to fill up with fish, wild game, pure air, and chew pine gum. Hope they will weigh a ton when they get home.

Frank Lamkin, of Franklin, who has been afflicted for some weeks with consumption of the throat, succumbed to the dread disease on Sunday last. Frank has fought a noble battle for life, but the fates were against him. The funeral obsequies were attended on Tuesday by a large concourse of sympathizing friends.

An illustrated edition of Green's Short History of the English People—a work which has probably been more widely read and enjoyed than any other of its kind—is in preparation, and the first volume will soon be published by Harper & Brothers. The illustrations have been selected with the purpose of carrying out the favorite wish of the author, to interpret and illustrate English history by pictures which show how men and things appeared to be lookers-on of their own day, and how contemporary observers aimed at representing them.

Following is the Program for Commencement week at the Agricultural College:

Thursday, Aug. 11, 4 P. M.—Review of the Batallion of Cadets, by Governor Winans and Staff.
Friday, Aug 12, 8 P. M.—Society Reunions, in Society Halls.
Monday, Aug. 15, 8 P. M.—Class-Day Exercises.
Tuesday, Aug. 16, 10 A. M.—Commencement Exercises.
Tuesday Aug. 16, 8 P. M. President's Reception.
Baccalaureate Address, Class-Day and Commencement Exercises are in the Armory.

Rev. David J. Lewis was in Ypsilanti over Sunday.

Mrs. Vet Erskine is visiting friends in Detroit this week.

Brooklyn now indulges in the luxury of a street sprinkler.

Special rates on all the railroads for the big Band Reunion.

Tecumseh must prepare to entertain a big crowd on the 25th.

Mrs. E. C. Rogers and son have gone to Chicago for a brief visit.

Miss Minnie Jones went to Portland, Mich., last Saturday, to visit a sister.

The Macon prohibitionists will hold an institute at Grange hall, Sept. 1st.

Mrs. C. E. Conley, of Detroit, is visiting friends in Tecumseh and vicinity.

Frank and Lettie Aten are spending a few weeks with friends at Memphis, Mich.

Tecumseh celery is in the market now. It is a little late but of good quality.

Nelson Demorest, of Atchison, Kan., has been visiting Capt. A. D. Lawrence, this week.

A new card may be found on the 4th page, setting forth the virtues of red crown gasoline—Read it.

Apples, rather rare done, and possessing lots of stomach ache are beginning to appear in the market.

The big Knights' Templar parade took place at Denver on Tuesday last with 25,000 Sir Knights in line.

Over thirty bands have already accepted the invitation for the Band Reunion, and they are still coming in.

There will be morning and evening services next Sunday, at the Presbyterian church. Sermon by Rev. Mr. Chandler, of Harvey, Ill.

The Tecumseh Herald is house cleaning. The remains of a missing "devil" have been found in a petrified condition and the explorations have but just begun.—Adrian Press.

Several counterfeit silver dollars have found their way into the cash drawers of Hudson stores. There is a strong suspicion that some one in Hudson is "shoving the queer."

The Tecumseh Chapter Eastern Star gave a picnic Tuesday last, going to Manitou Beach. Sixty-five members of the Chapter participated and they passed a very enjoyable day.

An exchange truthfully says that profitable farming depends as much upon selling as upon producing. First grow the best crop you can. Take it to the best market that is available.

At the Democratic caucus held last Monday evening the following delegates were chosen to attend the county convention to-day: John T. Boice, Frank Davidson, Alf. James, Jas. H. Aten, B. F. Snyder, Henry Keyser.

Editor Grandon of The Michigan Messenger, should get a new calendar. The last issue of his paper was dated Saturday, August 3. He is in a measure excusable, however, owing to his recent efforts at balancing a new bicycle.—Petersburg Sun.

The 10th annual reunion of the 2d. Michigan Infantry, held at Hudson Thursday, was not very largely attended. Hudson had on her good clothes to welcome the veterans. There was a banquet in the opera house at night. Hillsdale was decided upon as the next place of meeting.

Mrs. W. Q. Burnett, after a brief illness, passed over to the other shore last Tuesday evening. The deceased was a woman of fine talents, a devoted christian, a faithful wife and mother. Her death will be mourned by a large circle of sympathizing friends. The funeral obsequies will be held at the family residence on Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

The Lenawee County G. A. R. Association will hold their annual reunion and picnic at Devils Lake, on Thursday, Aug. 18th. An excellent program has been arranged. Let every old soldier, member of the Womans' Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans make arrangements to attend and bring along all their friends. Let us have a grand rally that will remind us of the stirring days of '61.

Tecumseh Lodge No. 69 has received, through George Holloway, a souvenir gift, which they will value highly. It is a neat apron with Masonic emblems painted upon it, and is presented by Bro. Miller, formerly member of Greenley Lodge, No. 103. The apron was worn by Bro. Miller's father at Gov. Clinton's funeral in Albany, N. Y., and hence possesses quite a history as a masonic relic.

The Times of Monday says: A bad wreck occurred on the Air line of the Lake Shore road Saturday night, near Ligonier, compelling all trains to go through here over the old road. A fast passenger train met a wild engine on a curve and a collision ensued, throwing the wild engine bottom up into the ditch. The engineer of this engine had the calf of one leg entirely scraped off the bone.

The application of the wife of Augustus Hathaway, of Hudson, for a pension, made at least wenty years ago, has at last been granted. An award of $30 per month is made, with back pay aggregating $7,500. Hathaway is in a soldiers' asylum at Washington, his trouble being the result of a sunstroke sustained in the service, it is claimed. His wife has married again, and the money will probably be turned over to C. Hathaway, father and guardian of the unfortunate man.—Addison Courier.

Miss Inez Thorp is visiting friends in Adrian.

Fred McNair now rides a pneumatic bicycle.

Harry Lee went to Chicago on business Saturday.

The Democrats hold their County Convention at Adrian to-day.

Mrs. Mortimer, of Toledo, is the guest of Mrs. H. S. Lee this week.

Old papers for sale cheap at this office, in large or small quantities.

Our Tecumseh laundry is doing considerable work for Dundee parties.

Rector & Reynolds shipped two car loads of cattle to Buffalo last Saturday.

Prof. Skinner is drilling bands now practicing in the woods each Sunday.

Mrs. T. D. McKinney, of Chicago, is visiting at her mother's, Mrs. M. A. Freeman's.

J. H. Smith and family spent a portion of last week at the DeWolf cottage at Sand Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Cayloe Satterthwaite, of Dayton, Ohio, are visiting friends in this vicinity.

Miss Etta Thorp has gone to Fort Wayne, Ind., to visit friends until the first of October.

Mrs. R. J. W. Bowen and her sister Nina Anthony spent last week with Mrs. Milo Dole of Adrian.

Bert and Wallie House, of Springfield, Ohio, were visiting friends in this village the first of the week.

Harry Strickland, a former Tecumseh boy who is now in St. Louis, Mo., is visiting friends in this village.

Miss Church of Ithica, daughter of Col. N. Church, is the guest of O. P. Bills' family for a few days.

The C. J. & M. R. R. seems to be right up to business in freight traffic; two to three extra trains go over the road every day.

Arrangements for the Band Reunion are progressing satisfactorily. The indications now are that at least fifty bands will be in line.

Cholera morbus is now on sale at the grocery stores at twenty-five cents each. The other name for it is Georgia water melon.

Mrs. Thomas Miller, of Washington, D. C., returned home last week, accompanied by her mother-in-law, Mrs. Miller of Raisin.

The thermometer was on the rampage again the first of the week. Tuesday at one o'clock p. m., the mercury marked 96 degrees in the shade.

When you go to Devils Lake and wish to ride over to the South side, take the steamer Flora. She is a safe and snug little craft and makes good time.

The B room in the Central school building has been divided into two rooms, one of which will be used by Prof. Kellogg and the other as a recitation room.

The painter and kalsominer has "done" another room in the HERALD office. We are getting the house in apple pie order for a lively business campaign this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bresie returned from their cottage the first of the week. The Herald force will be at home in this cottage from Friday noon till Monday noon, with a tip top menu—and fish.

Thirty years ago last Saturday A. W. Slayton enlisted in Co. E. 18th Mich. Infantry. A good many Tecumseh boys enlisted in Co's E and I 30 years ago this week. The recruiting office was in C. A. Stacy's law office in the rooms now occupied by Alf James, over Heesen's store.

If your going to Detroit to the Exposition, or any time, you can't do better than to stop at Rice's Hotel, corner of Jefferson Ave. and Randolph street. Mr. Rice is preparing to accommodate 300 or more guests during the exposition. If you are going to the big show be sure and call there; his prices are always moderate. Meals only 25 cents.

Several of the Tecumseh Sir Knights left home Friday to attend the Conclave at Denver. The following persons were in the Tecumseh party: C. A. Wright and wife, I. S. Osborn and wife, Mrs. J. F. Hicks and her son Will, Miss Elva Rosacrans, Sam M. McClure and S. W. Anderson. Mrs. Hicks and Irve Osborn will prolong their visit several days to visit friends at Colorado Springs. Miss Rosacrans returns to her parents, near Denver.

Clarence A. Cotton, deputy county clerk, of Kent county, who formerly lived at Tecumseh, was married Tuesday, July 26th, to Miss Anna Wykes, one of Grand Rapids' most accomplished and beautiful society belles and left for Chicago to attend his sister Caddie's wedding, which occurred Wednesday evening, July 27th. Clarence and Caddie were well known by our young society people who will rejoice at their bright prospects.—Clinton Local.

At an election held last week the following officers were chosen for Hose Cart, No. 1:

Pres.—O. P. Bills.
Sec.—W. J. C. Hastings.
Treas.—F. Rosecrans.
Foreman—C. E. Williamson.
Asst. Foreman.—Geo. Wilson.

The foreman assigned his men to the following positions:

Pipemen—F. Rosacrans, S. W. Anderson, Geo. Wilson, Geo. Beneway.
Assistant Pipemen—J. L. Anderson, C. A. Slayton, W. Hastings, J. M. Jones.
Hydrant Men—D. L. Whitenack, Jno. Freeman, E. N. Satterthwaite.
Linemen—C. A. Wright, P. V. Woodard, L. M. VanTyne, O. P. Bills.

The Free Methodist camp meeting began yesterday at Lowe's grove in Ridgeway.

Co. C, M. S. T. will attend divine services at St. Peter's church next Sunday afternoon at five o'clock.

Scove Walker returned to Tecumseh yesterday, having finished haying and harvesting on the old farm.

Bro. Samsen of the Blissfield Advance is enjoying a two weeks outing, having gone with his better half on a trip to Denver.

The marriage of Robert S. Moore and Miss Grace Heck takes place this afternoon at the residence of the bride's father.

Mrs. Geo. W. Stacy of East Buffalo arrived in town yesterday and will spend a couple of weeks at the old home in Newburg.

An old lady over in the southern part of this county, near Lambertville, who seemed to be boss of all she surveyed, thrashed her hired man a few days ago for uttering cuss words in the presence of her young son.—Dundee Reporter.

The old lady was right. But wouldn't she make a son-in-law climb a tree with celerity!—Adrian Press.

At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Bell McComb, Ogden Center, Mich., July 27th, occurred the marriage of her daughter, Jennie, to Mr. H. W. Daniels, of Clinton, the ceremony being performed by Rev. O. F. Winton, of Grass Lake. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Detroit and Niagara Falls, after which they will reside at Clinton, where he is engaged as principal of the high school.

The above, from the last issue of the Blissfield Advance, shows that Prof. Daniels has forsaken the "error of his ways" and become a benedict. His numerous friends in Northern Lenawee will extend their congratulations.

Quite a number of Tecumseh people visited Devils Lake last Sunday. Most of them went across to Allen's Pleasant Grove to attend the camp meeting in session there. It proved to be a very pleasant day at the lake. A train of ten coaches went up that morning to accommodate the telegrapher's excursion from Toledo. J. B. Allen is running his Pleasant Grove hotel himself this year and is having a fine run of custom. The steamer Flora, owned by C. H. Imerson, makes her headquarters at this hotel and conveys passengers to all the different landings on the lake.

Two Bottles Cured Her. VI

CARROLL, Iowa, July, 1889.
I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so that at times I didn't expect to recover. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic; the second dose relieved me and 2 bottles cured me. S. W. PECK.

Recommends It to Many.

SEYMOUR, Ind., Oct. 1, 1890.
My daughter became epileptic about five years ago through a fright. All physicians' treatment availed nothing, until I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, which at once dispelled the attacks. It is the best remedy I ever used and I have recommended it to many of such as are suffering from this dread disease.

Representative Watson's Charges of Drunkenness in the House Declared Unwarranted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Representative Boatner has finished his report on Representative Watson's charges of drunkenness among members on the floor of the house. The report is approved by the three democratic members of the committee and, with some qualifications, by Representative Grout, of Vermont. The facts are, the report will say that three and probably four members appeared on the floor more or less under the influence of liquor, but none in the condition described in the charges. The committee will report a resolution, declaring that the [illegible] of Mr. Watson [illegible] and constitute [illegible] warranted assault upon the honor and dignity of the house, and have the unqualified disapproval of the house. Mr. Grout submitted a minority report recommending the adoption of the resolution recommended by the committee if, on presentation to the house, Mr. Watson declines to retract this objectionable statement.

Representative Simpson (farmers' alliance) summitted a report dissenting from the views of the majority and exhonerating Mr. Watson. He quoted from the testimony of the alliance members and others before the committee in support of his (Simpson's) contention that Mr. Watson's charges had foundation in fact.

CONGRESSIONAL NOMINEES.

Candidates Who Will Strive to Secure Seats in the Lower House.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 5.—Gen. Victor F. Quain was nominated for congress yesterday by the democrats of the Fourth district.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Aug. 6.—C. M. Cooper, of Jacksonville, received the democratic nomination for congress in the Second district yesterday on the first ballot.

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss., Aug. 6.—The democratic convention for the Second district nominated J. C. Kyle to succeed himself in congress.

SAGINAW, Mich., Aug. 6.—The republicans of the Eighth district nominated William S. Linton, of Saginaw, for congress.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 6.—The prohibitionists yesterday nominated A. J. Powell for congress in the Fifth district.

OCALA, Fla., Aug. 6.—C. M. Cooper was nominated for congress yesterday in the Second district by the democrats.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The democrats in the First district have nominated Robert I. Hunt for congress, and in the Fourth district Julius Goldzier was nominated.

A NEW LAW.

Michigan Legislators Pass an Apportionment Measure and Adjourn.

LANSING, Mich. Aug. 8.—The special session of the legislature ended Saturday. The democratic members of the apportionment committee in both the house and senate joined their republican colleagues and recommended to the respective bodies bills concerning the fairness and equity of which there can be no question. The senate apportionment bill recommended was introduced by Senator Brown, who was elected as a patron of industry, while the house measure was what is known as the Detroit Evening News bill. Under the senatorial act republicans have sixteen districts on the vote of 1890. The house bill makes [illegible] reasonably safe republican districts.

Did Not Require Bail.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 8.—The one Pinkerton man who was arrested was released Saturday upon his own recognizance. The lawyers for the Homestead men could not offer sufficient evidence to induce the judge to require bail. The other Pinkertons against whom informations were laid will surrender themselves and be released in the same manner. The test made of the case of Fred Prime, one of the Pinkerton men on the barges, against whom informations were laid by Hugh Ross, was almost a rout for the Homestead people. The ruling of Judge Ewing shows that Attorneys Brennan and Cox cannot expect to hold the Pinkertons.

Russian Famine Ended.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 5.—The Russian famine is officially regarded as over. Tolstoi is sojourning at Raizan to wind up his famine labors and adjust his accounts. Whatever balance remains will be devoted to the aid of the peasants suffering on account of the failure of their crops. In Samara, where the crops are good, the relief offices have been closed. Nevertheless there is still much distress and ample use for any contributions of the charitable.

Destructive Fire at Ottumwa.

OTTUMWA, Ia., Aug. 8.—A disastrous fire broke out Sunday afternoon in the Kerr ventilated barrel and box factory and consumed all the seven buildings comprising the plant. The plant is outside the fire limits, and when discovered the fire had gained considerable headway. The force pump broke at a critical juncture and $70,000 went up in smoke.

Miners Drowned in a Coalpit.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Six miners lost their lives in a coalpit near Dewsbury, county of York, through the pit in which they were at work becoming flooded with water, which forced its way from an adjacent pit which had been abandoned.

COME TO AN END.

First Session of the Fifty-Second Congress Closed.

The World's Fair Bill Passed by Both Houses—Review of the Work Done During the Past Eight Months.

IT IS FINISHED.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The first session of the Fifty-second congress has passed into history. The final adjournment came at 11 o'clock last night. One of the last acts of the session was the passage of the Durborow bill giving $2,500,000 to the world's fair, and President Harrison signed the bill at 9:10 o'clock. The measure passed the [illegible] the vote standing 161 to 78.

Senators Allison (Ia.) and Gorman (Md.) were named the committee from the senate to wait on the president, and then Senator Harris (Tenn.) presented a resolution thanking Vice President Morton for his impartial services, etc. Senator Cockrell (Mo.) presented a similar one in regard to the president pro tem., Senator Manderson. Both were adopted and the senate took a recess to 10:55. When the recess was up the committee reported that President Harrison had no further communication to make, the vice president watched the wheels of the big clock go around for nearly two minutes, and then made his pleasant speech of thanks and farewell, timing it so that he was able to drop the gavel and declare the senate adjourned within a few seconds of 11.

In the house, after the customary resolution of thanks to the speaker and others was made, Speaker Crisp promptly at 11 p. m. declared the house adjourned without day. Two hundred representatives joined in applauding the welcome announcement, and the corps of Washington correspondents arose in the press gallery and sang with unction "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." The crowd of spectators in the public and private galleries and the congressmen joined in the singing and loudly applauded.

THE WORK DONE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Senator Manderson before the senate adjourned made some remarks as to the business of the session. It was unprecedented, he said, at least for many years, that the calendar of cases was as reduced as it is now. There were on the calendar not exceeding six house bills yet undisposed of and there were comparatively few senate bills on the calendar. The senate had passed 709 senate bills, and of those the house had passed 120. The house had passed 450 house bills, and of these the senate had passed 316. Of all the presidential nominations that had come to the senate there had not been a single rejection, and but three nominations had died on the executive calendar of the senate.

Senator Allison (Ia.) said that he would state in general terms the appropriations of this session as compared with the appropriations of the first session of the Fifty-first congress. The appropriations of that session were, in round numbers, $4[illegible],000,000, and those of the present session $507,000,000, showing an increase at this session of $44,000,000. The principal increases were in the appropriations for pensions and for the post office department. There were some diminuations in the present session, notably in deficiencies, to the amount of $5,000,000. There was also a diminution of $4,000,000 in miscellaneous appropriations. It was obvious to all that postal facilities and postal expenditures were constantly increasing, and so there had been $8,000,000 added to the post office appropriation bill at this session, as compared with two years ago, yet the postal appropriations fall short of meeting the necessary expenditures for the fiscal year, 18[illegible]. Large deficiencies for the post office department and for other departments of the government would be necessary at the next session. For instance, the appropriation for United States courts was about $1,000,000 less than was necessary, and that was true in regard to other departments of the government.

Mr. Gorman (Md.), a member of the committee on appropriations, commended the chairman of that committee for his fair and candid statement. The fact remained, however, that the appropriations at this session would exceed $500,000,000, notwithstanding the extraordinary efforts of the house of representatives to keep them within reasonable bounds. It was not altogether a party matter, for these immense appropriations were partly made necessary because of the growth of the country, the extension of the postal system and the expansion of the pensions and other permanent and necessary expenditures, for which neither party should be held responsible.

Robbed the Express Car.

FRESNO, Cal., Aug. 5.—The Southern Pacific express, which left San Francisco Wednesday night and was due here at 12:10 a. m. yesterday, was held up in a most daring and successful manner by three highwaymen 6 miles from Collis and the express car robbed of a sum estimated at from $10,000 to $40,000.

A TWISTED TALE

Once on a time—this tale is true—
There lived an individual who Believed his intellect held more
Than other men's did ten times o'er.
He had most everything down pat,
Enlightened folks on this and that,
And "pointers" gave to great and small,
This man who used to know it all.

He told the farmers how to till
Their fields, their bins to overfill;
He told the merchants how to sell
Their goods that they their gains might swell;
He told the writers what to write
If they the people would delight;
Prosperity to them would fall
Who heeded him who knew it all.

Much of his precious time was spent
In howling at the government,
And Providence he'd often rake
For making some great big mistake.
There wasn't anything but what
He thought he knew it to a dot,
And wisdom waited at the call
Of him who used to know it all.

But strange as it may seem to you—
'Tis no more strange than it is true—
This man ne'er did a single deed
To prove to other folks that he'd
The brains whereby he could invent
A plan to make a single cent.
Good luck it seemed would not befall
This man who used to know it all.

One day he saw—this knowing fool—
A farmer try to lead a mule.
The mule was stubborn-like and slow,
And finally refused to go.
And as the farmer pulled and swore
The mule hung backward all the more.
"It won't do any good to maul
The brute," said he who knew it all.

"But I've a little plan, you bet!
To make that mule get up and get!
I'll neither beat, nor flog, nor flail
The beast, I'll simply twist his tail!"
The farmer said: "It will not do."
The wise man said he guessed he knew.
Biff! Bang!! The funeral was small
Of him who used to know it all.

There may not be a moral here,
But yet this thought is pretty clear,
We're very, very, VERY wise,
But yet some day to our surprise
We may bump up against a fact,
And get our dome of wisdom cracked.

'Twere well to now and then recall
The tale of him who knew it all.

—Nixon Waterman, in Chicago Times.

OVER THE WIRE.

Familiar Telegraph Talk As It Looks in Type.

Many Abbreviations and What They Mean—How an Operator Judges of a Fellow Laborer's Temperament and Sentiments—Some Short Stories.

There are pairs of men who have been in daily communication with each other over the same telegraph wire for years, and who have never seen each other. Each is well acquainted with the other's temperament, his moods, his disposition, and his sentiments. Telegraph instruments and telegraph wires are unfeeling and stolid-looking things. Yet, through them a man is able to convey emotions of sorrow or joy almost as plainly as they may be expressed facially. The fact is perfectly palpable to the man at one end of the wire, while he is receiving dispatches, that the man who is sending them is ill or well, or—though the sender may make use of no terms of friendliness or of swear words—that he is in good temper or bad.

In their conversation telegraphers use a system of abbreviations which enables them to say considerable more in a certain period of time than they otherwise could. It is not quite as compact as the Phillips code, but answers their requirements very well. Their morning greeting to a friend in a distant city is usually "g. m.," and the farewell in the evening "g. n.," the letters of course standing for good morning and good night. The salutation may be accompanied by an inquiry by one as to the health of the other, which would be expressed thus: "Hw r u ts mng?" And the answer would be: "Im pty wl; hw r u?" or "I'm nt ffg vy wl; fraid I've gt t malaria."

By the time these courtesies have taken place some early messages have come from the receiving department or from some other wire, and the man before whom they are placed says: "Wl, hrs a fu; gol darn ts everlastin grind. I wish I ws rich." And the other man says: "No rest for wicked, min pen,' the last words indicating that he wants the sender to wait a minute while he adjusts and tests his pen. Presently he clicks out "g. a.," meaning "Go ahead," and the days work has begun.

Operators laugh over the wire, or rather they convey the fact that they are amused. They do this by telegraphing "ha! ha!" Very great amusement is indicated by sending "ha" slowly and repeating it several times, and a smile is expressed by sending "ha" once or perhaps twice. Transmitting it slowly and repeating it tells the perpetrator of the joke at the other end of the wire that the listener is leaning back in his chair and laughing long and heartily.

When the feeling between two operators in two cities, instead of being that of gentle affection, is that of strong dislike, the fact can be made just as apparent as though they were within a few feet of each other. No personal collision can occur, of course. This is one of the drawbacks. But a man can call names and make threats over a wire with almost the same facility as by word of mouth. One of the favorite resorts when two operators are quarreling is that known as "fighting circuit." Not much is accomplished by this, however, for when two operators strive at the same time to call names over a wire neither can succeed.

Telegraphers have an old story about "fighting circuit." James Austin, who is located on Newspaper row, who is a Canadian by birth, brought the story to this city, one of the operators in the story being located at Toronto and the other at Buffalo. After a successful exchange of uncomplimentary remarks, they began to fight for the circuit—that is, they both tried to send epithets over the wire at once. They fought for some time. Neither would yield. The man at Toronto, who was old and astute, saw that the man at Buffalo was young and stubborn and was in for an all-night struggle. The Toronto man looked around for a proxy. He found it in the clock wire, which was a wire attached to the clock's pendulum, the swaying of which acted to open and close the circuit. He connected the Buffalo wire with the clock wire and went home to bed, leaving the Buffalo man valorously battling with the tick-tick-tick-tick of the clock. The story concludes with the veracious statement that when the Toronto man reached the office the next morning he heard the Buffalo man still fighting the clock, and that when the former disconnected the clock wire and closed the circuit the latter snapped out triumphantly: "I downed you at last, did I?"

"Fighting circuit" is probably the most annoying occupation there is. The very impotency, the very futility of it is maddening. Here is a man who has offered a grievous insult. Yet the insultee cannot get at the insulter to kick him. They may be separated by thousands of miles. The practice of calling hard names is not infrequent, possibly, for that reason. "Fighting circuit" has several times driven men to the verge of frenzy. There is on record in the archives of the Western Union office in New York the tale of an excitable operator who, after a long and unsuccessful struggle to say something mean to a man in Albany whom he hated, and who at the same time was trying to say something mean to him, suddenly arose from his chair and darted from the operating-room in New York city and ran down the stairs into the street.

There he gazed wildly around, looking for some object on which to vent his anger. Near him a peaceable, mild-looking gentleman was having his boots polished. The unhappy operator rushed at him, struck him in the face, and shouted: "Blank, blank you, you're always getting your boots blacked." But that was in the old days.

Not always, however, have differences arising over a wire been without a bloodless termination. It has been the case on a number of occasions that the insultee has boarded a train for the town of the insulter, and upon the insulter being pointed out to him the two have come together in an affray. But such instances are exceptions. Even though a man may board a train full of thought of vengeance it is likely to ooze out after a few hours' ride, and the visit, instead of being sanguinary, may be one of harmonious peace and good feeling. It may be stated positively that no quarrel begun over a telegraph wire has ever resulted fatally.

They tell a good story up at the big Western Union office on Fifteenth street. One of the night men was sending press to Richmond. The operator at the latter place said:

"What's the matter? You come so heavy I can't adjust enough."

"Is that so?" responded the operator at the Washington end. "Wait a second."

Then came a pause.

"How's that?" asked the Washington man.

"That's splendid," replied the Richmond operator. "What did you do?"

"I took off my cuffs," came back the reply from the Washington man, and even the relay and sounder exchanged smiles.—Washington Star.

OCEAN TOWING.

An Invention That Claims the Solution of an Important Problem.

The subject of long-distance ocean towing has been receiving much consideration at the hands of American ship owners. A proposal has already been made to employ hermetically sealed steel barges for ocean transportation, these barges being towed by specially designed tugs and towing apparatus. It is believed by many ship owners in this country that we are nearing the time when the towing steamship will be largely employed to drag freight barges across the Atlantic. The possibilities in this direction have been suggestively indicated by some noteworthy feats of towing done recently by the United States tug steamer Saturn, which is about twenty-two hundred tons and is fitted with very powerful engines. The chief difficulty in ocean towing is the failure of the tow rope or steel hawser or its fastenings. Neither manila rope nor steel wire rope can withstand the sudden strains caused by the motion of the towboat and her consort in a heavy seaway, the great want being elasticity. To overcome this difficulty the Saturn has been fitted with a towing apparatus invented by an American engineer. It is a balancing cable drum, which is so geared up that the normal pressure of the engine cylinders, situated on either side of the drum, will balance the normal strain on the cable or hawser; but if the strain on the hawser is increased the drum revolves aft and the hawser pays out, running in again when the strain is relieved. The inventors of this ingenious apparatus claim that they have solved the problem of ocean towing.—Chicago Journal.

Skull of a Swedish Queen.

A Swedish queen's grave was reopened at Upsala in the presence of the prince regent, the archbishop and many professors. The grave, which dates from 1584, is situated in a side aisle of the cathedral at Upsala, in a vault beneath the pavement; on the ceiling are painted the royal arms. On the immense stone over the grave are engraved in Latin the words: "Catherine, queen of Sweden, died September 16, 1583; daughter of Sigismund, king of Poland, and wife of Johann III., king of Sweden. She was buried on the 16th of February, 1584." On removing this stone a copper coffin was found and opened. Within was a wooden coffin, somewhat decayed, and lined with velvet in rags. Beneath a leather cover lay the corpse of the queen, clothed in velvet, the feet in stuffed shoes. Amid the folds of velvet lay an extremely small skull.—London News.

—"Palet is playing in hard luck," said one artist to another. "How?" "He painted a picture of the grate in his room and got it so natural and life-like that a new servant he had threw a scuttleful of coal throughit and ruined it."—Detroit Free Press.

TO OPEN THE FAIR.

Plans for Dedicating the World's Columbian Exposition.

The Festival to Begin October 19 and Will Consist of Parades, Addresses, Procession of Floats, Music and Grand Displays of Fireworks.

THREE GREAT DAYS.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—When dawn breaks over Lake Michigan the morning of October 21 it will herald the coming of a proud day in the history of Chicago. Perhaps it will be the proudest, for then will be dedicated the great world's fair buildings which have stirred the admiration of men of two hemispheres. It will be the natal day of the enterprise in which every nation on earth will participate, and for which $16,000,000 will have been expended. Then Chief of Construction Burnham will turn over the completed work for dedication by the president of the United States. The near approach of this time is beginning to awaken interest throughout the country. Work on buildings is being rushed in order to have them ready.

Twenty thousand invitations have been issued for the occasion, and acceptances are almost unanimous. The first to accept was President Harrison; then followed members of the supreme court, senators, congressmen and governors of the states. All these have said they will be here, and from Washington will come the representatives of every foreign country.

There will be a three-days' carnival, beginning Wednesday, October 19, when a civic parade will be held and which promises to bring nearly 100,000 people into line. The second day, Thursday, October 20, will be devoted to a military review and military maneuvers. President Harrison, with members of the cabinet, will review the parade. Friday, October 21, will be the dedicatory day proper. Elaborate preparations have been made for this occasion, when President Harrison will in the name of the United States dedicate the buildings to the uses of the World's Columbian exposition. Each of the three nights there will be a display of fireworks on a grand scale. The second and third nights will witness a procession of centuries, consisting of twenty-four floats propelled by electricity through the waters of the lagoons. With the exception of the civic parade, all of the exercises will be held in Jackson park. The ceremonies of dedication day proper will be held in manufactures building.

No charge will be made for admission to the park while the dedicatory ceremonies are taking place Friday. The remaining days and Friday after 5 o'clock an admission fee of fifty cents will be charged. The fireworks and the floats will be of such magnitude and brilliancy, as well as so costly, that the exposition management decided to charge for the enjoyment of these entertainments. A number of brilliant social entertainments will be given by citizens of Chicago during the three evenings of the dedication ceremonies. A grand dedicatory ball on the final night will be held under the auspices of the leading society people of Chicago.

CHINESE TARS BARRED OUT.

Their Employment on American Vessels Is Forbidden.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—Collector Phelps has been informed by Secretary of State Foster that no Chinese sailors shipped outside the United States can be employed by the Pacific Mail Company or any American ship, as American vessels are always and everywhere American territory. The crew imported on the steamer City of Peking will have to be returned to China as passengers by the company that brought them. The Pacific Mail steamship Peru has sailed for China with a Chinese crew. Forty of them were green hands, shipped here, and the rest inexperienced men taken from the ships City of Peking and Oceanic.

Death of Col. Bundy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Col. John C. Bundy, for many years editor and proprietor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal of this city, died at his residence, 582 La Salle avenue, Saturday. He has been identified with the business and intellectual interests of Chicago for many years and has left his mark in the world of thought.

Republican Campaign Plans.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The republican campaign in the west will be directed from Chicago by the following committee, subject to the national executive committee: W. J. Campbell, of Illinois; J. N. Huston, of Indiana; E. Rosewater, of Nebraska; R. G. Evans, of Minnesota, and H. C. Payne, of Wisconsin.

Fire Caused by Lightning.

MATTOON, Ill., Aug. 8.—During a severe rain and electric storm here early Sunday morning Alschuler & Co.'s large dry-goods store was discovered to be on fire and before the blaze was extinguished damage to the extent of $40,000 had been done the building, stock and adjoining buildings.

Contracts to Make Rain Fall.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Aug. 6.—Rainmaker Melbourne has accepted the offer of the Bourbon county farmers, who are suffering from drought, of $500 for a half inch of rainfall. He will begin operations Saturday, and agrees to bring the desired amount of rain inside of forty-eight hours.

Land Office Business.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The annual report of Commissioner Carter, of the general land office, for the last fiscal year shows that 114,360 persons obtained free homes during the year. In the public land states and territories there are 579,664,783 acres of vacant lands.

The Failure Record.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Business failures occurring throughout the country during the seven days number 184, as compared with 198 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 231.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

MISER'S HOARD FOUND.

Thousands of Dollars Secreted in a De... Near Detroit.

Last winter John Flynn, an eccentric farmer in Dearborn township, near Detroit, died leaving a small farm. He had been reputed wealthy, but investigation revealed no estate but his farm, which was quickly gobbled up by numerous creditors. The other day the old house in which he had lived was torn down, and in the walls and under the floors rolls of bank notes and small chests of gold coin to the value of nearly $10,000 were found. The house had remained vacant since the old man's death, and was rapidly falling to pieces. A nephew who is said to reside in Woodland, Cal., is Flynn's nearest heir.

Banks in Good Condition.

From reports received from 183 state banks and three trust companies in the state at the close of business July 12 Commissioner Sherwood has issued a consolidated statement showing the total of loans, discounts, stocks, bonds and mortgages to be $59,280,821.90; capital stock, surplus and undivided profits, $14,220,097.48; and deposits, $61,984,886.14. This is an increase since May 17, the date of the last report, of $2,951,334.59 of stock, etc., and $4,150,371.58 in deposits.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-eight observers in different parts of the state for the week ended July 30 indicated that typhoid fever, cholera morbus and cholera infantum increased, and diphtheria, typho-malarial fever, consumption of the lungs and inflammation of the bowels decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at nineteen places, scarlet fever at thirty-one, typhoid fever at twenty and measles at five places.

Soper Asked for Money.

An echo of the Soper scandal was heard in Lansing when Auditor General Stone addressed a letter to the ex-secretary demanding the payment by him of $1,172.50, that being the amount found by the investigating committee to be due and not yet accounted for for pamphlets of public acts and manuals distributed contrary to law. Soper has failed to keep his promise made at that time to pay such other sums as the committee should find to be due.

Fought a Duel for Love.

A duel took place between two woodmen named O'Brien and Lafernai about 6 miles west of Summitt. Both men were in love with the cook, Mrs. Tillie Leonards, and decided to settle the matter by fighting a duel with knives. O'Brien received bad gashes in the neck, shoulder and abdomen and would die. Lafernai was cut about the right eye, in the left breast and a deep gash was inflicted in the thigh.

A Frightful Accident.

The most frightful accident in the history of Otsego county occurred at Bagley, on the north shore of Otsego lake. Hartnell & Smith's shingle mill, which had been built ninety days, was blown to atoms by the explosion of the boiler and the following men were killed: Irwin Hutchins, L. S. Parker, Andrew Swedock and John Thompson. No cause was known for the explosion.

The Teachers' Institute.

The state teachers' institute for Lenawee county will be held at the high school building in Adrian, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. Monday, August 15, and closing ... Friday, ...

Prof. F. W. Arbury, superintendent of the Battle Greek schools, will be conductor; and Prof. E. E. Brown, of Ann Arbor, and Miss Hattie Scott, of the Detroit Training school, will act as instructors.

The Graded Course of Study for use in Teachers' Institutes, prepared by the superintendent of public instruction will be made the basis for the regular work of the institute.

It is proposed to make the work of the institute as practical and beneficial as possible and with the competent instructors whom we shall have to conduct the work, I predict a very successful and pleasant institute. I hope that every teacher and person who intends to become a teacher in Lenawee county, will make an effort to attend.

The institute will be conducted on the recitation plan and all teachers are requested to bring their text-books. The program will be arranged so as to include Theory and Art and School Law, Language, Science, Mathematics, History and Music and Drawing. It is especially desirable that all teachers be present at the organization of the institute Monday morning.

There will be at least one general lecture each day. Superintendent of Public Instruction Ferris, S. Fitch and Prof. H. R. Pattengill have been invited to give an evening lecture at some time during the institute, and other features of an educational and social nature will be provided for the pleasure and improvement of the members.

Notice of Drain Letting.

Notice is hereby given that I, Charles Kayner, township drain commissioner of the township of Raisin, county of Lenawee, state of Michigan, will, on the 20th day of August, 1892, at the Tecumseh Celery Farm in said township of Raisin at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, proceed to receive bids for the deepening and widening of the drain known and designated as Cook Drain No. 1, located and established in the said township of Raisin and described as follows to-wit: Commencing at a point on the west side of S. E. ¼ of S. E. ¼ of Sec. 5 town 6 south of range 4 east, 10 chains north from S. W. corner thereof for place of beginning, and running S. 4.45 chains to N. W. corner of N. E. ¼ of N. E. ¼ of Sec. 8, lands owned by Hanford; thence S. 15 links; thence S. 22½ W. 2.35 chains to E. line of Tecumseh Celery Company's land, to-wit:—west 75 acres of N. E. ¼ of Sec. 8; thence 22½° W., 34.23 chains; thence S. 57½ W., 1.52 chains to E. side of E. ½ of N. W. ¼ of lands owned by the Prairie Side Celery Co.; thence S. 57½ W. 6.63 chains to E. line of S. W. ¼ of S. E. ¼ of Sec. 5, lands owned by Mrs. Salkeld; thence S. 57½ W. 6.87 chains to N. line of S. 16½ acres of N. W. ¼ of S. W. ¼ of Sec 8, owned by Z. Cook; thence S. 57½° W., 15.97 chains; thence S. 14° W. 11.42 chains to N. W. corner of S. ½ of S. W. ¼ of S. W. ¼ of Sec. 8, lands owned by Edwards; thence S. 14° W., 9.86 chains on division line between lands of Cook and Edwards, to N. line of N. E. ¼ of N. E. ¼ of Sec. 17; thence S. 27° W., 21 chains; thence S. 55° W., 5.70 chains to E. side of S. W. ¼ of N. E. ¼ of Sec. 18, lands owned by Cornelius; thence S. 55° W., 11.30 chains; thence S. 47° W., 8.70 chains to stake No. 65.

Said job will be let by sections. The section at the outlet of the drain will be let first, and the remaining sections in their order up stream, in accordance with the diagram now on file with the other papers pertaining to said drain, in the office of the township clerk, to which reference may be had by all parties interested, and bids will be made and received accordingly. Contracts will be made with the lowest responsible bidder giving adequate security for the performance of the work, in a sum then and there to be fixed by me, reserving to myself the right to reject any and all bids. The date for the completion of such contract, and the terms of payment thereof, shall be announced at the time and place of letting.

Notice is further hereby given that at the time and place of said letting, or at such other time and place thereafter to which I, the drain commissioner aforesaid, may adjourn the same, the assessments for benefits and the costs comprised within the Cook Drain Special Assessment District will be subject to review.

The following is a description of the several lots or parcels of land constituting the special assessment district of said drain, to-wit:

Mrs. Romine Miller and son Sidney left Tuesday for Detroit for a short stay, after which they will meet Mr. Miller in Ludington and prepare to move to Big Rapids, where the Professor will superintend the school for the coming year.

The attendance at the camp-meeting Sunday was very large and the usual amount of stealing of whips, dusters, etc., was done by a gang of toughs, who think it is their duty to get full on forty-rod and disgrace humanity by their actions and words. It is our impression that fifty-one weeks will be far too short a time to right the evil committed during the past week.

RINGLING BROS. CIRCUS.

The HERALD takes pleasure in announcing to its readers that while the famous Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will not be seen in this place during the present season, arrangments have been made with the railroad authorities by which all who desire to go to Adrian where this aggregation exibits Saturday, Aug. 27, can do so at greatly reduced rates. A visit to this biggest of big shows will constitute a gala day long-to-be remembered, and, besides, it will furnish an opportunity for seeeing the grandest exhibition in the world. Under the largest tents ever constructed will be shown the finest zoological collection on earth, including two great herds of performing elephants, a whole drove of camels, the largest living hippotamus, a magnificent Percheron stallion with a mane nine feet in length, a complete horse fair containing 350 head of high-bred horses, and a circus performance embracing more high salaried preformers than any other two shows can boast, the best bareback riders in the world, and the most exciting chariot and other races ever seen under canvas. A grand street procession occurs at 10 o'clock, when among many other novel features there will be exhibited free, a mammoth highway locomotive drawing one section of the parade,—a magnificent reproduction of Moscow's Kremlin Tower, with its chimes of sweet sounding bells, and a full mile of other wonders, such as no other show in the world has ever exhibited.

WHEN NATURE needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed. The best and most simple and gentle remedy is the Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

One week ago Tuesday a sneak thief visited Art Underwood's potato patch and helped himself. He has been found out and will probably dance to the tune of bread and water in the county jail. Some of our small boys are also quite inclined to help themselves about our stores and if they are not careful the next cigar or orange will come higher than a curtain lecture.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the many friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in our late bereavement, the death of our dear mother, we sincerely extend our thanks.

MR. AND MRS. G. W. UNDERWOOD.

OBITUARY.

Freelove Whelan was born in Oneida Co., N. Y., October 4th, 1806. She was married to John Whelan in October, 1828, and in May, 1833, came with him to Michigan and settled on the farm in Franklin, where the remainder of their wedded life was spent and where he died Oct. 14, 1867.

Twelve children were born to them, six of whom are now living, the eldest, Ozro Remington, a son by a former marriage. All are settled and own fine farms near the old home; and fourteen grand-children. Of these all are living in Franklin, with the exception of Wood Remington, who is professor of a school in Denver, Col.; John Brown Whelan, who is practicing law in Detroit; Charlie Doty, who resides in Ypsilanti, and Ada Bunting, who moved last spring to Shiawassee Co. Fourteen great grand-children, one sister and two brothers also survive her.

For about 23 years her home has been with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Wisner, visiting with her other children for weeks at a time as she saw fit, until the infirmities of age overtook her and confined her wholly to her daughter's home for the past two years. Here she passed into the perfect rest July 30, aged 85 years and 10 months, and here the funeral services took place Aug. 1st.

The dear aunt who has passed into the Beyond was a woman of strong and sterling character, loving all that was true and good in life, with a quick sympathy for the distressed and discouraged; her eye so quick to see, her willing hand so ready to help; a generous neighbor, a faithful friend and a loving mother.

The pall bearers were the five sons and the son-in-law of the deceased. At the grave a friend of the family read the following original poem:

She rests from her labor,—our mother,—
The labor of living; none know
How great was the burden she carried,
With footsteps so faltering and slow.

She whom we so love to remember,
Long ago had departed this life,
Leaving naught but the frail feeble semblance
Of her, the dear mother and wife.

Who in years which long since have been numbered
Among the dear days lost and gone,
Was ever so steadfast and faithful:
Oh, sweet be the sleep she has won!

Then fold the tired hands, once so active,
Peacefully o'er her worn breast;
She never will awake from her slumber;
Forever and ever she'll rest.

Oh, silently, silently lay her,
Not with sorrow nor murmuring word,
Where o'er her will burst the fair blossom,
Where o'er her will sing the sweet bird.

For no more break life's fierce storms upon her,
No more will her faltering feet
Stumble amid the dark shadows
Of earth life. Her slumber is sweet.

A HUDSON SENSATION.

A Girl's Attempt to Blow Up an Entire Family With Dynamite.

Hudson, Aug. 14—An astounding sensation has been sprung on this community by the discovery of a plot to blow up a peaceful farmer's family with dynamite. The respectability and high standing of all the parties involved make the affair more sensational. Henry Tabor, prosperous farmer and mechanic three miles northwest of Hudson, was found dead in bed one morning a few months ago. This left his children orphans. His daughter, Jennie, a young lady of twenty-four, and son, Gaylord, lived at the homestead, and the other member of the family was a married sister, Mrs. Jessie Elmore, who lived near. Mrs. Elmore suggested that the estate of about $5,000 be divided.

Jennie, who claimed that her sister had already received her share of the property, objected to this, and there was a bitter feeling over the matter. The younger brother thought that there was trouble brewing, and on Friday, while his sister was away, he searched the house and found twenty dynamite cartridges concealed in the top of the parlor organ and beneath the chamber floor. This created great consternation and the case was placed in the hands of officer Pease, who extracted a confession from the young woman, the nature of which the officers refuse to divulge, but is generally believed it was her intention to put the rest of the family out of the way with the explosion. It is thought by many that the girl is deranged.

It was on this same girl's story that a highly respected farmer of Locust, named Myers, was arrested Saturday, for burglarzing the house of George Goodwin, of Pittsford. Myers is thought by everyone to be innocent; in fact, he can prove an alibi. Miss Tabor has told several astounding stories about deeds she has committed, and the authorities will give the matter thorough investigation, and it may be the means of showing up numerous mysteries in the neighborhood where this strange girl lives.

Miss Tabor says that her lover, Will Meyer, forced her at the point of a pistol to enter the home of George Goodwin, while the family were away at a neighborhood picnic, last July, and rob it of $65. She also charges young Meyer with compelling her to buy the dynamite, August 4th, of which twenty and one-half pounds were purchased at S. F. Palmer & Son's hardware.

Upon her statment, Meyers was arrested by Sheriff Baker, of Hillsdale county. Meyers can prove an alibi to her statement, and the officers now hold him guiltless.

It is thought that Miss Tabor's own family have known all along that she had a thieving and fabricating propensity, but have suppressed it.

She is now charged with purloining wearing apparel and various sums of money about the neighborhood, thus throwing light on affairs which hitherto could not be explained.

The sudden death of her father, and a former lover who suddenly sickened and died at her home, have also been charged to this unlucky girl, but this is very likely an idle rumor though everything goes now.

It is thought she intended to take her own life as she was seized with spasms, and a paper was found which contained strychnine, but she did not take enough.

She is now under surveillance at the home of her sister.—Adrian Times.

THE BAND REUNION.

Arrangements are being rapidly perfected for the Band Reunion which will take place in Tecumseh, Aug. 25th, 1892. Special rates have already been secured on both the Lake Shore and Mackinaw roads and special trains are expected on both roads. Tecumseh must get ready to entertain a big crowd. Below is a general outline of the day's program:

At 1:30 o'clock the bands will form on Evans street, in front of the Council Building, in four divisions in charge of Marshall H. W. Stevens and his assistants.

Division 1, with headquarters at the Council Building, form on Evans street.

Division 2, with headquarters at Sutton's Opera House, form on Chicago St.

Division 3, with headquarters at Armory hall, form on Evans street.

Division 4, with headquarters at Cheever's hall, form on Chicago street.

Visiting bands will be met at the depots by the Tecumseh City Band and escorted to the headquarters assigned them, where badges will be distributed to each musician.

From 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. dinner will be served at Sutton's opera house to all visiting bandmen. The dinner will be furnished by the ladies of Tecumseh and vicinity.

LINE OF MARCH.

On Evans Street south to Pottawatamie, on Pottawatamie west to Union, on Union north to Logan, on Logan east to Maumee, on Maumee south to Pottawatamie, on Pottawatamie west to Oneida, on Oneida south to Kilbuck, on Kilbuck west to Ottawa, on Ottawa north to Chicago, on Chicago west to Maiden Lane, thence countermarch to place of beginning.

At the central band stand the following program will be observed:

Address of Welcome—Hon. J. D. Shull.

Selections by various bands.

Overture by consolidated bands, conducted by Prof. C. F. Skinner.

The bands will then consolidate and march through the principal streets, playing in unison, after which the various bands will give concerts from stands erected in different parts of the city.

During the afternoon and at the close of the musical program Prof. Bartholomew of Jackson, will make a balloon ascension and parachute drop.

THE FAMOUS REED SISTERS.

One of the distinguishing features of the Ringling Bros. World's Greatest Shows, which will be seen in all their unapproachable completeness at Adrian, Saturday, Aug. 27, is the notable equestain act performed by the world-famous Reed Sisters, two petite and handsome young horsewomen, whose surprising accomplishments have made them the idols of the principal European capitals during the past three years. No other lady riders have ever won encomiums such as have been literally showered on these graceful and talented young artists. Even their professional rivals accord them the palm of superiority. In their particular line they are superb and unapproachable, and they command the enormous salary of $800 per week. No prettier picture could be conceived than these two young girls, both endowed by nature with rare beauty of face and form, dancing and pirouetting upon horseback with the same grace and abandon as a premire behind the footlights of the mimic stage; or, one above the other, in a living pyramid, defying the laws of gravity and of centrifugal force. The furore they invariably create is in itself something never to be forgotten. The Reed Sisters are however, only one of a myriad features in this colossal tented exposition, which in its entirety is without a rival.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 18, 1892.

Judging from the speeches Major McKinley has been making in the West, he still holds to the opinion that the tariff is not a tax and that the foreign pays it.

Which party will control the next House of Representatives. There is very little likelihood that the Republicans can carry a majority, but from present indications it seems quite probable that the People's Party may hold the balance of power.

The Boston Herald says: "Where am I at?" is the expression used by Congressman Cobb which convinced Congressman Watson that the member was reeling drunk. It doesn't appear, however, that he was not able to say "truly rural." That is the only recognized test of a man's sobriety.

Judging from what one reads in the papers, there is more danger of the Chicago Exhibition becoming an old curiosity shop and junk store of family relics and bric-a-brac than there is of its being overcrowded with illustrative exhibits of the arts, sciences and manufactures.

There is trembling in the big Government Printing office, and it is not caused by the danger of the old building which the employs have in a measure become accustomed to, but by the knowledge that the big discharge which always comes shortly after congress adjourns may strike the shop any day.

An enterprising Yankee has established a henhouse on the Mexican border, so arranged that his hens feed on the cheap food of Mexico and lay eggs on the protected soil of the United States. Here is an alarming situation which threatens to set at naught the whole scheme of McKinley beneficence.

The New York World has published, located and substantiated the record of 500 strikes in protected industries since the McKinley law went into effect. This may not prove that the tariff is responsible for strikes, but it does prove beyond a shadow of contradiction that it does not obviate them or in any way benefit the wage earner.

The people's party Congressmen deny that the result of the Alabama State election is a defeat for them. They claim that the people's party had no candidate in the field; that it was a fight between a regular democratic candidate and a democratic bolter, and say that the result of the National election will show the real strength of the people's party in Alabama as well as in other southern states.

The Toledo Bee says: Grand Master Hugh McCurdy, we salute you! Mr. McCurdy is a Wolverine, of good Scotch ancestry and has a string like this to his name: Rt. Sir Judge Hugh McCurdy, thirty-third degre, E., deputy master of the grand sacrament and past grand master, past grand high priest, past eminent grand commander, past most illustrious grand master and the grand councillor, illustrious deputy for Michigan and A., and A., rite, etc.

The Cobden club, in its annual report has this paragaph:

With regard to the tariff question in the United States many competent critics doubt whether the competition of the United States in the neutral markets of the world under a regime of free trade, would not injure the manufacturers of the United Kingdom more than free intercourse between the United States and Great Britain would benefit them.

There's considerable thought in the suggestion for genuine students of political economy.

Congressman Holman has had printed his speech in the congressional record, in which he reviews, in detail, the appropriations made by the last congress and by its predecessor. No river and harbor bill was passed last session, and without this bill included, the appropriations of the session just ended have been $54,682,909 less than those of the preceding one, and but for laws enacted by the Fifty-first congress, the requirements of which had to be met, the further sum of $79,527,602 could be deducted.

A HOTEL.

The Michigan State Capitol Converted Into One By Republicans.

And Furnished Luxuriantly at Public Expense.

The history of the republican party in Michigan for several years back shows a degree of official extravagance that would be almost incredible if the records were less authentic. But the official records which disclose this riotous waste of public money were kept by the republicans themselves, and can not be gainsaid.

[illegible] but a few years ago with all sufficients substantial, and even elegant furniture. Victory at the polls had been easy with republicans [illegible]

The successful candidates, when in office, seemed to feel no particular obligation to the people, for their party rather than the people had installed them in power. Their chief effort was rather to secure, at the public expense, every comfort, ease and convenience for themselves, and the greatest immunity from personal expense possible.

To attest this, examine the reports of the board of state auditors. After the state capitol had been equipped with furnishings, republican officials began filling it with furniture for their private use. Many of the principal offices were provided with expensive folding beds and each bed provided with hair mattresses, covers, bed linen and downy pillows; commodes, dressers, bed-lounges and couches; reclining chairs, rockers, cushions and foot rests; toilet sets, cut-glass goblets, nickel tea kettles, silver table knives, decorated plates, corkscrews and napkins; toilet soaps, soaps for the bath and medicated soaps; costly rugs and beautiful vases. All these were purchased and purchased at extravagant prices for the unwarranted, extravagant and luxurious use of state officers in their offices.

The purchase of such things at public expense for an entirely unwarranted use, was a gross violation of public trust. But it is not the only cause for complaint. The prices paid for these articles were outrageous as well. The beds purchased cost from $100 to $123; about as much as the total value of the furniture in thousands of tax payers' homes. Sofa beds, bed lounges and bed cots were purchased with tax payers' money at from $35 to $55 each; dressers at $52, while the full suite of the most fortunate farmers ranges from $15 to $20 only; single chairs as high as $35; tables and card tables from $15 to $120 each, and carpets by the mile at $2.75 per yard. Careful boards could easily have purchased all supplies—purchased in such quantities as the republicans used—at wholesale prices with discounts for cash. Thousands of dollars would thus have been saved.

Taxpayers, you whose cash surplus is a minus quantity and whose homes are often destitute of the common comforts of life, how do you like the way you have been compelled to furnish luxuries for officers and clerks who receive from you salaries usually much in excess of what they could obtain in private employment for harder labor and longer hours?

It is fair that public offices should be well equipped and that public servants should be well paid, but it is humiliating to have state officials and department clerks make a hotel of the capitol. Such is the example set by republican officials. The lesson taught them in 1890 should be repeated and emphasized in such terms as will leave no room for doubt as to the intent of the honest, intelligent voters of Michigan to rebuke lawless extravagance. And the just fate of republican usurpers of the people's rights will serve as a warning to their successors in offices of public trust.

78 PER CENT.

The Saving Made by Gov. Winans in the Expenses of the Executive Office.

Michigan's democratic governor sets a good example of official industry and economy. The following statement shows the expenses of the executive office for the four fiscal years during the administration of C. G. Luce, as allowed by the board of state auditors:

Printing and binding	$105 23	$94 09	$115 50	$58 47
Postage	207 12	164 00	245 00	209 00
Stationery	238 36	237 57	278 86	264 51
Bal. general allowance	545 53	403 19	687 14	409 01
Total	$1,097 07	$898 76	$1,325 00	$940 99
Total for four years				$4,279 42
Average annual expense				1,069 85

The first full fiscal year of democratic rule ended June 30, 1892. The charges allowed for the same items during this year amount to $238 23. The following comparison by items shows the effect of official industry and economy:

AVERAGE EXPENSE.	Luce.	Winans	Differe
Printing and binding	$93 07	$51 47	$41 60
Postage	196 28	40 00	156 28
Stationery	289 86	55 34	234 52
General allowance	518 75	141 42	460 33
Average total	$1,097 96	$238 23	$841 62

In his own office, while attending to all business promptly, efficiently and satisfactorily to all, Gov. Winans has conducted the affairs of his office at a saving of 78 per cent. to the taxpayers.

Caught Napping.

The Minneapolis platform says: "We believe that all articles which cannot be produced in the United States, except luxuries, should be admitted free of duty." Why not have import duties on necessities as well as luxuries, if the foreigner and not the consumer, pays the tax? The effort made to catch the vote of the poor by pretending to tax the rich by a tariff on luxuries, is an admission that the tariff is a tax which the consumer pays. The effect of free sugar for the past year also proves that the tariff is a tax. The price of sugar to the consumer has been reduced by just the amount of the tariff removed. Free sugar has been an excellent eye opener.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

Over twelve years I was afflicted with a very serious female difficulty and for the last sixteen months was under treatment of three of the very best physicians that money could employ. Under their skillful treatment I gradually grew worse until they decided they could render me no permanent help. One of my friends persuaded me to try a bottle of Dullam's Great German Uterine Tonic, and after taking three bottles can say I am in better health than I have been for twenty years and am now sixty years old, but feel as young as at thirty.

It is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. THE TACK TRUST.

By the Grace of McKinley It Advances Prices at Will to Americans, But Sells Cheap to Foreigners.

The Iron Age of July 14, 1892, said that trusts "almost universally advance prices whenever the business is sufficiently consolidated to warrant such a course." This is somewhat at variance with the teaching of the New York Tribune and other high tariff papers that feel called upon to defend the legitimate offspring of "protection," but that it is true is evident from a consultation of the files of the Iron Age in regard to prices of iron and steel goods in and out of trusts. Those out of trusts show a general and steady decline. Those in trusts show no decline in prices, unless the trusts are losing their grip on the market, but ordinarily show great advances in prices, while the profits in many cases are enormous.

The prices of nails, cut nails, wire, sheet, lead, steel rails, cutlery, etc., will illustrate this point, but the advance in the prices of tacks noted in the last Iron Age July 21, will make it pertinent to consider the subject of tacks in this connection.

About 1881 a great tack trust was formed, called the "Central Tack Co.", with headquarters at Boston. All, or nearly all tacks made in the United States are made in New England. There were then about forty-five manufacturers—mostly smaller ones. They were all included in the trust, which closed many of them. Prices were advanced greatly and the trust made big profits for two or three years despite the fact that it paid considerable sums to the new factories rapidly called into existence by the high prices, to keep them idle. After four or five years there were eighty or ninety manufactories and the trust could not subsidize them all and had to go to the wall. Prices took a headlong tumble of about 50 per cent., and for several years the process of evolution was at work in this industry, closing up all factories that could not stand the severe competition, or annexing them to larger and more favorably situated concerns, so that by 1890 there were a comparatively few manufacturers doing the bulk of the business. But among these few were several of those who officered the Central Tack Co., and who had ever since been dreaming of again making those old profits. Five of these manufacturers—Dunbar, Hobart & Co., of Whitman, Mass.; Loring & Parks, of Plymouth, Mass.; the American Tack Co., of Fairhaven, Mass., and the Albert Field and the Taunton Tack Cos., both of Taunton, Mass.—got together in 1890 and formed the "Atlas Tack corporation," with headquarters at Boston and warehouses in other large cities. These are all large manufacturers and are said to make three-fourths of our total product, which is estimated as being worth over $3,000,000 per year. By closing up some of their offices, and by advancing prices, which a reduced output enabled them to do, they soon began again to reap big profits. Besides previous ones, two important advances have been made since September, 1891, as is shown by the following sample discounts, the price list remaining the same:

All the following papered, dozened and M's.:

Steel carpet tacks, Bright—September, 1891, 80 per cent and 25; June, 1892, 72 per cent and 5; July 20, 1892, 60⅔ per cent and 25.

Upholsterers' tacks, S S.—September, 1891, 80 per cent and 20; June, 1892, 74 per cent and 25; July 20, 1892, 70 per cent and 25.

American cut tacks—September, 1891, 80 per cent and 15; June, 1892, 80 per cent and 15; July 20, 1892, 60⅔ per cent and 25.

Gimp and lace tacks—September, 1891, 80 per cent and 20; June, 1892, ——; July 20, 1892, 66⅔ per cent and 25.

Thus tacks listed at $1 sold for 15 cents in September, 1891, and sell for 25 cents at present. The advance on carpet tacks then has been 66 per cent. inside of one year. It is noticeable that outside manufacturers keep pace, in the matter of advances, with trust prices, showing that there is some secret connection not understood by the public and consumer. Another remarkable fact is that wholesale dealers make no objection to these increases, but, on the contrary, they consider it a "healthy sign," as it enables them to get their hand deeper into the consumer's pocket. As one of them puts it: "We add the same per cent. to the first cost of the goods and if tacks cost us 3 instead of 1½ cents a package, we make just twice as much profit, because a family uses 20 or 30 cents' worth of tacks a year and will buy just as many, no matter what the price."

As is usual with trusts, a tariff of from 33 to 45 per cent. is back of this one to prevent the consumer from importing foreign made tacks or from reimporting American tacks sold for export at 20 per cent. less than to the domestic consumer—the recent price of two dozen papers of tinned iron tacks, weighing 24 ounces per paper, was $2.05 to the American and $2.20 to the foreign consumer. The beauties of our "protective" system surpass all understanding now that we are beginning to appreciate McKinleyism.

CARNEGIE STEEL COMPANY.

A Mammoth Tariff Trust - Responsible For Homestead Riots.

The reduction of wages at Homestead, Pa., and the present trouble there is the result of a mammoth combination of capital to extort money from the consumer and to exploit labor. Single handed the steel mills in and near Pittsburgh were not able to cope with the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers. They could and did make reductions in wages in some of the mills, but they dare not attempt to take the life of the Amalgamated association.

The frequency of the reductions since April 1 last is evidence that the mills around Pittsburgh that now compose the Carnegie Steel Co. were already working in harmony on the labor question and planning to strike the death blow to the Amalgamated association. Here are some of the reductions reported:

April 7, 1892—Two hundred blacksmiths in the axle department of Carnegie's Twenty-ninth street mill in Pittsburgh struck on Saturday against a 10 per cent. reduction in wages.

April 10, 1892.—Fifty of the best paid workmen at the Edgar Thompson steel works of Andrew Carnegie, at Braddock, Pa., were discharged this week.

April 10, 1892.—The Keystone iron mill, of Pittsburgh, Pa., employing 400 men, shut down a week ago to-day for an indefinite period.

April 10, 1892.—The axle-hammer men in Pittsburgh, Pa., are on a strike at present against a reduction in wages amounting from 7 to 9 per cent. The wages of the blacksmiths at this mill (Edgar Thompson steel works) were at the same time reduced from $3.50 to $2.75 a day and their "helpers" from $1.80 to $1.60.

May 1, 1892.—There has been a reduction in the wages of 150 employes of Andrew Carnegie at his Lower Union mills in Pittsburgh. Seventy-five blacksmiths accepted the cut of about 20 per cent. without murmur, but seventy-five hammer men struck. The strike was ordered by the Amalgamated Association to get around action against a man who struck because he went on a strike.

On June 2, 1892, the Iron Age announced the formation of a new concern to be known as the Carnegie Steel Co., Limited, the consolidation to become operative on July 1, next. "The new organization will own and operate the following plants: Edgar Thomson steel works and blast furnaces at Bessemer, Pa., and Allegheny Bessemer steel works at Duquesne, Pa., both now controlled by Carnegie Bros. & Co., Limited; the Upper and Lower Union mills and Lucy furnaces at Pittsburgh; the Homestead steel works, at Homestead, Pa., and the Beaver Falls mills, at Beaver Falls, Pa., all now controlled by Carnegie, Phipps & Co., Limited, and also the plant of the Keystone Bridge Co., at Pittsburgh, which has always been a Carnegie interest." As often happens, the same journal that records a new combine announces a forthcoming reduction of wages. Editorially in the same number of the Iron Age a warning is given to the Amalgamated Asssociation of Iron and Steel Workers, who will meet next week, that they must propose to accept a wage scale "which will show a material reduction over the one that expires the last day of this month."

The Iron Age knew the meaning of what was occurring. It knew that the new trust had designs on the life of the association, and it continued to discuss in June the "precarious labor situation." It knew that Henry W. Oliver and the other big iron and steel men who practically made the iron and steel schedule of the McKinley bill and who announced later that they were well suited with the new tariff schedule, must have had a purpose in reducing voluntarily the duty on steel billets, though they were careful to leave it above the prohibitory point. This purpose began to be manifest when the consolidation of these great companies, representing about $20,000,000 in steel properties, was followed by the fortification of the Homestead works, where steel billets are produced largely and where the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers is strongest. The shabby treatment of this association's officers at the conferences held previous to July 1, and the promptness with which Pinkerton "watchmen" appeared at Homestead with arms, ammunition and provisions, makes it reasonably certain that ever since the making of the McKinley bill schedule, these manufacturers have been deliberately planning the present dastardly raid on honest labor. The intention being to make the reduction heavy enough to compel a strike which would offer an excuse for refusing to treat in any way with organized labor, and then to continue on the aggressive until their former employes would forswear their union and return to beg for their former places not already filled by imported and non-union labor. Routed in this stronghold it would be easy to follow up the association in the other mills of the company, or trust, and soon there would be no Amalgamated association and no organization of labor to offer resistance to wage reductions. The election of Henry Clay Frick as "chairman" of this trust, the man who had had greater success than any other man in protected Pennsylvania in "handling" labor, and who, as Rev. McIllyar, of Homestead, said a few days ago, was the one man in Pennsylvania most hated by laborers, is significant as is also the disappearance from Homestead of those two great friends of labor, Messrs. Carnegie and Phipps. In short, this trust, like hundreds of others, is a conspiracy to "cow" the workingmen and to defraud the consumer.

A Screw Loose Somewhere.

The Carnegie Steel Co. authorities say that if all the men in all their mills strike it will be an easy matter to get men to fill their places. Perhaps this is so but what a reflection on McKinley's measure which was to provide work for all at high wages! There must be a screw loose somewhere when 15,000 or 20,000 men in the highly protected iron industry, are so anxious to get work that they will underbid other iron workers. But perhaps it is due to dull times which have caused the weekly production of pig iron to decline over 4,000 tons since June 1, and of course McKinley cannot be held responsible for everything.

—On one side put the alleged tariff benefit to you. On the other side put the extra cost of home articles of necessity—this year it amounts to nearly 60 per cent. of first cost. Draw a balance, and tariff cost will swamp tariff benefit. Against the tariff cost in every family, there is not the smallest per cent. of benefit from an increase in wages. The whole scheme is a fraud. Labor is imposed upon every day of the year by the republican politicians. There are no compensating benefits in a tariff which, in one mill, makes Carnegies and men who have to fight for their homesteads.—Toledo Bee.

—While protectionists are bearing down workingmen's wages in Pennsylvania they are energetically forcing up the price of binder twine to the farmers in Iowa. The farmers up there make vigorous protest against the advance of two cents a pound on twine. Have they no gratitude? Are they not blessed with a high protective tax on seed wheat?—St. Louis Republic, July 1892.

AN ARMED MOB.

More Trouble at the Mines in Tracy City, Tenn.

The Convicts Driven Out by Free Miners, Placed Aboard Cars and Sent Away Under Guard — One Is Killed.

MINERS REVOLT.

COWAN, Tenn., Aug. 15.—Free miners of Tennessee have again asserted their independence. Saturday morning the stockades sheltering the convict miners at Tracy City were stormed, captured, their inmates driven out and the buildings burned to the ground.

At 5 o'clock Saturday morning a committee of miners awoke E. D. Nathurst, superintendent of the mines for the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, and asked him that the miners be allowed as many hours work in each week as the convicts. Mr. Nathurst replied that he would submit the matter to the company and do what he could. The committee then left and Mr. Nathurst, knowing that an oath-bound organization had been formed some weeks ago for purposes unknown, at once began to suspect trouble. He went to Deputy Warden Burton, and together they began to circulate among the miners who were gathering in groups and try to influence them to keep quiet. Their efforts were of no avail.

After the convicts entered the mines about 400 armed men walked into the stockade, and after clearing it of everything of value set it on fire and burned it to the ground. They then marched to the mine and ordered the convicts brought out, took charge of them and the guards, loaded them in box cars, and ordered Conductor Finch and Engineer Bolton to leave immediately. Being covered by guns they were obliged to obey. Next the telegraph wires were cut and a guard was placed over everything in the yards to prevent it from carrying the news down the mountain. The train arrived at 1 p. m.

Capt. Burton with twenty-five guards has the 350 convicts in charge. Between Sewanee and Monteagle the convicts cut the train in two and ten or fifteen made a break for liberty. Several shots were fired. Matt Wilson (white) was killed and Tom Smith (colored) wounded. Six or eight made good their escape.

GONE WITH THE CASH.

James E. Gilman, of Boston, an Embezzler to the Amount of $150,000.

BOSTON, Aug. 13.—James E. Gilman, a prominent commission merchant, has been missing two weeks, and an examination of the books of Gilman, Cheney & Co., of which firm he is senior partner, discloses an embezzlement of $150,000. Gilman has a wife and family in Newton. He lived in regal style and was reputed wealthy. The firm Friday afternoon went into insolvency. Frederick N. Cheney, the junior partner, is president of the Boston chamber of commerce. Gilman is alleged to have taken with him a large part of the trust funds of William Walker's estate, of which he is executor, rumor placing the amount at over $100,000.

PUT ARSENIC IN A WELL.

One Person Dead and Two Others Fatally Ill as a Result of the Deed.

LAUREL, Del., Aug. 12.—Mrs. Ruslon, her 6-year-old daughter, her bachelor brother and three laborers were poisoned Wednesday night at Oak Grove, a small village near here. The little girl and all the stock on the farm are dead, while the lady and her brother are fatally ill. The woman's divorced husband is supposed to be the author of this fiendish crime. The poisoning followed drinking water from the well, which was heavily dosed with arsenic.

To Receive the President.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—President Harrison, unless the present programme should be changed, will come to this city on his return from Loon Lake and be given a great reception. The date of his coming has not been fixed, but it will be some time during the first week in September. It is probable that he will remain two or three days in town. As to the details of the reception nothing has yet been definitely arranged. It will probably assume the proportions of a great mass-meeting in Madison Square garden.

Given a Military Funeral.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—With measured tread to the solemn music of muffled drums 4,000 representatives from naval, military, civic and patriotic organizations yesterday joined in the funeral procession of Charles W. Riggin, boatswain's mate of the United States steamship Baltimore, who was killed in the streets of Valparaiso during the row which came near embroiling this country in a war with the little republic of Chili.

Drowned in Turkey River.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Aug. 13.—A picnic crowd from Castalia were on their return home and while fording Turkey river below the mill in Clermont a rig containing five young people was overturned and the occupants thrown into the water. Bert Shroyer, aged 19, and Florence Morrison, aged 12, were drowned. The horses were also drowned.

Bold Theft of Tobacco.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—A cool thief with a truck and a fraudulent order, carried away twenty-five bales of tobacco from the Rotterdam steamer Diadem. The theft was not discovered until Wednesday, when a truckman called for the goods. The goods are valued at $12,000.

LADIES

In delicate health, the result of irregularity in the natural functions of any of the life peculiar to your sex, it you will write me, I will send you full information in regard to my cure, together with a few samples of the genuine testimonials I have received from thousands of thankful women. The Mrs. J. Pastille have stood the test of 18 years in a very extensive medical practice, and have never failed to give beneficial results. Sample 12 cents, full box 50 cts. Do not fail to learn more of them at once. Dr. H. H. Jackson, 163 State Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The following letter is but a sample of the many which are constantly being received by me. The name and address will be given any lady asking for the same.

"Dr. H. Jackson,

Dear Sir:—I cheerfully recommend your Mrs. J. Pastille to all ladies suffering from delicate diseases. Having myself been bed-ridden for months, and could get no remedy to relieve me, I was induced to use your Pastilles, which I soon found helped to recover, and after using about two boxes I was well and sound for which I thank God. I have since directed very many ladies to the use of your Pastilles with perfect success. The cause of them should be known to every suffering lady."

THE WESTERN WONDER.

A Budget of Interesting News and Personal Gossip From the World's Fair City.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15th, 1892.

DEAR HERALD. At last Chicago is asserting her right to be called a summer resort. Although we are having warm days, our nights are very cool, and altogether delightful.

[illegible] grounds. And the expectation runs high as to the grand dedication of the buildings on the first of October. When I made my last trip to the grounds I was astonished at the wonderful advance made in the work on the mammoth buildings. Unless some unforseen calamity befalls the contractors the work will be completed ahead of time.

The amount of building that is going on all the time now, getting ready for the fair, astonishes even the older inhabitants of this city and the new comers are speechless with amazement. Great six, seven and eight story buildings have been torn down to mak way for sky scrapers that will add to the respect of our foreign visitors.

A few nights ago I took my little family and started over to see the great spectacle, Pain's "Last Days of Pompeii," and had my first view of Rockefeller's great gift to Chicago, the Baptist University. A good view of the institution is had as we whirl past it on our way to the vast ampitheatre in which the Pompeiian pageant in given. Last year I got as far as the fence of Pain's enclosure when "A Night in Perkin" was the attraction, but got no farther and was obliged to be satisfied with that portion of the fireworks which could be seen from the outside. I determined that I would see the whole of the affair this year and did so. It would take a whole page of your paper to give an adequate description of the magnificent show, and all I will say is that any of your friends who make a visit to this city while the attraction is running should be sure to see it.

Another of the great attractions of this attractive city is the cyclorama of the great Chicago fire. In passing the circular building on Michigan Avenue, which contains this beautiful work of art I have [illegible] see it, and compare its worth with the other noted panoramas of Chicago. It was a warm day and I had been trying to keep cool, and had managed to do so, but when I reached the center of that circle of flames and stood on the roof of the old shed near the Rush Street bridge I could keep cool no longer. The illusion is so perfect that the atmosphere seemed to grow exceedingly hot, although in reality the building is quite cool and comfortable. In a minute or two the great drops of perspiration stood out on the noble brow, and I had to borrow a fan to keep from rushing down and jumping against the painted water that looks wet enough to swim in. Joking aside, the Cyclorama of the Chicago fire is a grand work and is a wonderful aid to one in realizing the terrors of that baptism of flames. Visitors to Chicago should not fail to see it.

Henderson's annual spectacle at the Chicago Opera House is running with the usual success of these summer burlesques. Or, I should have said, with more success. The play has been running three months and still the standing room only sign is out each night.

The new Schiller Theatre on Randolph St. will soon open as a standard high class comedy theatre. No trashy farce comedy will be tolerated in it. Sunday evenings will be devoted to German plays.

The number of shows and attractions for the delectation of our country visitors which are either planned or on the way to completion is simply astounding. Visitors to the World's Fair will have enough to see next year to last them a life time. And the way money will be coaxed out of unwary pocket books will be a caution. Every trick and device that unscrupulous men can dream of will be brought into play to fleece the lambs. The lambs will either have to put time locks on their pockets, or put all but the cash necessary for the day in a safety vault and then see that the cashier and president of the bank are locked up so that they cannot skip out.

Political excitement does not run high yet, but there is stir enough to show that in this city the saloon keepers and gamblers still rule, and as for National affairs, well, the consumers continue to pay the McKinley tariff out of their daily earnings. Winter is coming and the coal bills will soon commence coming in and then we will have more of the benefits of a protected monopoly. Protect the rich and take the life blood out of the poor. How men do love their fellow men!

July 30th, after a long illness, Mrs. J. B. Kerr died at the pleasant home on Jackson Boulevarde, so long occupied by herself and husband. Mr. and Mrs. Kerr left Tecumseh in 1878 for their new home in Chicago. During her two years of residence in Tecumseh Mrs. Kerr made many warm friends, and retained her esteem for them to the last. Although a great sufferer she retained a clear and unclouded mind until death claimed her. The burial took place in Valparaiso, Indiana, her birth-place and childhood home.

When Mr. Kerr came to Chicago he embarked in the drug business on the corner Jackson and Desplaines streets. He was extremely successful and soon amassed a good fortune. A few years after he established a drug business on the corner of Lake street and Bryan Place, where he was also successful. Finding that two such establishments took too much of his time, leaving none for recreation and amusement, he sold the Desplaines establishment and for three or four years has confined himself to the Lake street store and to the [illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Swick are now domiciled in a cosy and elegant flat at the corners of Grand Boulevarde and 41st street. Mr. Swick has opened an establishment on 43rd street, near Berkely Ave., and is doing better than he expected. Now Frank has all the comforts of home, and is doing nicely at his art work.

Mrs. M. K. Elliott has given up her position in the civil service department and accepted an offer of the Republican committee for a series of stump speeches during the coming campaign. If nothing happens Mrs. Elliott's friends will hear her before the election is over.

Fred Spaulding now has a good position in the registry department of the postoffice.

Sam McClure has just returned from a visit in Iowa. He thinks he likes Chicago best.

Fred Wheeler (oldest son of Capt. Jas. C. Wheeler, of Detroit), who has been in the employ of Morrison, Plummer & Co., of this city, (wholesale druggists for over five years, being foreman of a department in their laboratory for over three years, has given in his resignation. Fred is going to Detroit to embark in business for himself, with his father as partner. He has invented several devices for simplifying the manufacture of druggist's supplies and the Chicago firm hate to lose his services.

I still have inquiries about the possibility of having a Tecumseh folks picnic this season. I think it would be nice, and would like to attend one, but the thing is, the trouble and expense of getting it up would all fall on me, and I am wondering if the glory would overbalance the worry.

The Tecumseh colony extends hearty greeting to Levi Hayden, Benedict, and, wish himself and fair young bride all the joys that life can give. Levi, follow in the footsteps of your father. Make hay den while the sun shines over the mead, and come and see me when you visit Chicago.

Oh, but wouldn't I like to visit Tecumseh on the 25th! I can fancy the noise and hurley burley. Ask Levi to set up his phonograph in a good place, set it running and after the band reunion is over come over here and let us hear it second hand. I hope that the day will be all that can be asked for and that nothing will occur to mar the festivities.

With kindest regards for the dear old home I remain. Yours truly,

LAVERN F. WHEELER.

Reunion of the 18th Regiment.

COMRADES:—The 25th annual reunion of the 18th Mich. Vol. Infantry will be held at Pittsford, Mich., Aug. 26, 1892. Business meeting at one p. m. Rev. Elvero Persons, of Co. C, and others will be present and address us. The comrades and citizens of Pittsford will give you a cordial welcome. A general good time is expected.

Train No. 15, (vestibule) west, on the L. S. & M. S. R. R., will stop at Pittsford; also No. 8, east. This will give those from the east about twelve hours for reunion. Camp-fire in the evening.

Comrades of the 18th Mich.—Thirty years have come and gone since we were mustered into the U. S. service; many have fallen out on the long march of these years; our lines are thinning, but let us again close up our ranks and come out and make the 30th anniversary the grandest reunion ever held, by the Regiment.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

Tecumseh society has been enjoying an epidemic of weddings during the sultry days of August. We have the pleasure of chronicling two hymeneal events this week, both of which were largely attended and passed off with much eclat.

MOORE-HECK.

On Thursday last the nuptials were celebrated at the Baptist Church which made Mr. Robert S. Moore and Miss Grace Heck husband and wife. The Church was beautifully trimmed for the occasion with plants and flowers and the auditorium was nearly filled with invited guests. The ceremony [illegible]

Capt. Will Hayden, F. W. A. Fitzsimmons and Herbert Baker officiated as ushers. Miss Mary Crowell was maid of honor; Misses Margaret Spafford, Lyda Crowell and Harriet Conklin acted as bridesmaids. J. R. Hosmer officiated as best man.

Promptly at the appointed hour, 12:30, the bridal train passed up the east aisle to the altar in the following order, Miss Ella Jackson playing the wedding march: The three ushers, Baker, Fitzsimmons and Hayden, then the bridesmaids, Misses Margaret Spafford, Lyda Crowell and Harriet Conklin; next the maid of honor, Miss Mamie Crowell; then the bride, leaning upon her father's arm. At the same time the officiating clergyman, followed by the groom and best man, passed up the west aisle.

The bride was attired in rich cream white Lansdowne, trimmed with silk lace, with orange blossoms in her hair, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Mamie Crowell wore yellow silk; Miss Lyda Crowell white silk mull, Miss Conklin light lavender crape, Miss Spafford, red silk. The groom and best man were attired in the conventional full dress suit of black. The nuptial knot was briefly but very happily adjusted by the reverend brother, and the bridal party then retired. The contracting parties, relatives and invited guests proceeded directly to the residence of James H. Heck, the bride's father, where a reception was tendered to a brilliant company and an elaborate wedding dinner was served. Many bridal gifts, both of a useful and ornamental character, gladdened the hearts of the newly wedded pair, which will long serve as souvenirs of the happy day on which they relinquished single blessedness and began the real, earnest work of life together. They took the afternoon train to Detroit and proceeded thence to St. Ignace by steamer, where they will enjoy a brief honeymoon and then return to Tecumseh with the expectation of making it their permanent home.

The bridal couple are both well known and are universal favorites in Tecumseh society. The groom is the brother of Mrs. C. E. Williamson and occupies a responsible position as assistant in Mr. Williamson's grocery store. The bride is the daughter of James H. Heck, one of our most prominent citizens. The general verdict is that it is a splendid match, and the young couple can rest assured that if good wishes, kind words and beautiful gifts can make wedded life a success, theirs will be a happy matrimonial journey.

JANSSEN-ANDERSON.

Last Monday afternoon the residence of Webster Anderson, Esq., on Pottawatamie street, was the scene of a brilliant and happy event, when nearly one hundred guests assembled to witness the marriage of his daughter Gertrude to Mr. Bernhard H. Janssen. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. K. Spencer, of Adrian, as Rev. Babbitt, the pastor of the family, is absent on his summer vacation. The house was neatly decorated with vines and flowers and was a veritable bower of beauty. The nuptial ceremony was pronounced at 5:30 p. m. and the usual congratulations followed. An elaborate wedding supper was then served and a couple of hours were passed in social converse and merriment, to the delight of all present. The bridal gifts were many and beautiful, which may serve to soften the bride's regret at leaving her old home. The wedded pair drove to Adrian in the evening, where they took the train for the East. After enjoying a few days' sojourn at Lake George they will take up their permanent residence in New York City.

The groom is comparatively a stranger here, having visited Tecumseh but a few times. He is secretary of the Mathushek & Son Piano Co., a large music house, and enjoys a lucrative business in the city of his home. The bride has passed all her earthly years thus far in Tecumseh and has made many warm friendships which will last as long as life. As she leaves the parental roof to seek a new home in a distant city many fond hearts will feel a pang of regret at her departure, but these regrets will be mellowed by the best wishes and heartiest congratulations of all.

THE DEVIL'S TRIP TO DEVILS LAKE.

Last Friday morning, three hungry and task-worn disciples of Guttenburg, accompanied by a like number of friends were standing on the platform of C. J. & M. depot surrounded by various packages containing refreshments bait etc., anxiously awaiting the train which was to whirl them away to the famous summer resort of Lenawee County, at Devils Lake, where they expected to fish some, enjoy and refresh themselves a great deal, and in any event to use all the bait. The awaited train arrived and the trip to the Lake was completed without incident. On arrival at the Lake we took one of the little steamers for our cottage at Manitou Beach, where [illegible] on our way [illegible] picturesque summer homes among the most romantic of which is the one owned and occupied by Chas. Burrides of Tecumseh; this truly charming little cottage is situated on a commanding eminence on the eastern shore of the Lake, in the midst of lovely shade trees, with a broad flight of steps running from its wide verandah to the pebbly beach some fifty feet below. Surely the judge must here find repose from the cares and burdens of our common lot.

It may be of some interest to state that Devils Lake and Round Lake with which it is connected by a channel covers about 2,500 acres; it is surrounded by lofty hills and well shaded shores along which here and there nestles a modest farm house. It is a beautiful body of water, truly, and a place where one may drink in that rest that comes not with slumber. But to fully appreciate the beauties of this bit of nature's handiwork, one must see it in all its moods; in the bright light of the noonday sun when the waves sparkle and glimmer like myriads of pearls when old Sol, a big red globe, sinks behind the forest hills, throwing out over the Lake a great ruddy shaft of light, and at eventide when the music and laughter of the cottagers float out with pleasing cadence across the starlit waters. We had this opportunity and were consequently and necessarily enthused.

Beardsell's resort is complete in every particular, with three steamers, roller coaster, bath houses, and a tobozgan slide which zips the bather way out into the cool blue water. The whole concern is lighted with electricity generated on the grounds, and taken as a whole is a mammoth institution. Allen's Landing on the other side of the Lake is one of the most quiet, beautiful and sightly places on the Lake and we can testify to the excellence of the hotel and its cuisine.

It is now our duty as well as pleasure to acknowledge the kindness of some of our Lake acquaintances. Mr. Emerson, owner of the trim little steamer Flora, gave us two delightful excursions on the lake, and they were fully enjoyed. Next year he expects to conduct a hotel at the Lake and will undoubtedly meet with the success his genial kindness deserves. There are more uncles and aunts in the vicinity of Devils Lake than in any other section of country in the state. They are all good kind old folks but space forbids that we give them personal mention; we must acknowledge the kindness of Uncle Hank Harvey, who understands the secret of catching grasshoppers and who let us into that mysterious art. A year or so ago some sports offered a dollar a hundred for all the hoppers he would get them. "I went at it" said Uncle Hank, "made about half a dozen screen cages, filled them with hoppers, and I am telling you right here that I flooded the grasshopper market the first time I went down, and don't you forget it. They paid me for a couple of hundred and stole the rest." The bait did not last and we left Devils Lake earnestly hoping that it might again be our pleasure to visit it.

Local and Miscellaneous

Robert Stretch was at home one day last week.

Ed. Baird, of Dayton, Ohio, returned home Tuesday.

Charlie Bell, of Ypsilanti, was in town over Sunday.

Bert Tribou, of Detroit, spent last Sunday at the old home.

Satterthwaite Bros. have a new sidewalk in front of their store.

C. A. Sharp has a new card in to-day's paper to which we call attention.

Lamont C. Bidwell was in town last Saturday and is remaining this week.

Thos. Elliott's new house is enclosed, and the plasterers will soon be at work.

The new sidewalk in front of the post office is a dandy. It fills a "long felt want."

The schoolhouse in District No. 5, is undergoing extensive repairs during the vacation.

Misses Mabel and Pearl Sturtevant, of Morenci, were visiting at Henry Nyland's last week.

Rev. C. E. Conley, of Detroit, filled the Baptist pulpit last Sunday, both morning and evening.

The Republican County convention to nominate a county ticket, will be held on Monday, Sept. 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Winans, of Toledo, are spending the present week at her father's, B. L. Baxter's.

Mr. C. B. Wood, of Jackson, is in town this week in the interest of the Hurley Institute of Ypsilanti.

J. F. N. Bowen is attending the Democratic State convention in session yesterday and to-day at Grand Rapids.

Justice Burridge and family have been occupying their Cedar Point cottage at Devils Lake for the past week.

Mrs. E. D. Chilson and family returned last week from their lake trip with Capt. Chilson on the steamer Marquette.

Mr. and Mrs. Orange Gilman, of Nebraska, are the guests for a few days of Mrs. Gilman's father, J. D. Hayward of Raisin.

The Tecumseh Celery Co. will have a big celery crop this year. It is a few days late, but the quality will be equal to the best.

Mrs. R. B. House of Springfield, Ohio, came up to attend the Janssen-Anderson wedding and is romaining a few days to visit other friends.

Tribou LeBaron drove up from Toledo last week with his "one hoss shay". He is spending the present week with friends and relatives in Tecumseh and Macon.

Co. C. attended service at St. Peter's church last Sunday afternoon, accompanied by the Young Mens' band. The front of the chancel was decorated with the national colors. The church was well filled and the services, conducted by the Rector, Rev. J. Phelps, were appropriate and impressive.

Mr. Charles Lewis, of Adrian, the young man from whom Dr. Catlin removed a fatty tumor two weeks ago was in town the first of the week. His wound is nearly all healed and the swelling and stiffness accompanying it are daily decreasing. He still walks with a cane though not from necessity. It is almost unnecessary to say that both he and his friends are greatly pleased at the result of the operation. The case is an addition to the Doctor's laurels. Drs. Tefft and North assisted at the operation.

Clarence Sweet visited in town over Sunday.

Come to Tecumseh next Thursday and see the big balloon ascension.

Five hundred musicians will probably be in line in the big parade next Thursday.

Miss Vernie Wiggins, of Adrian was visiting at her grand-father's, A. D. Hall's, last week.

Our citizens will have their hands full to entertain the crowd that will be here next Thursday.

Martin Willie Saxton of Dundee, aged eleven years, will walk a rope here on Band Reunion day.

Chaffee was hired to make balloon ascensions with his new air ship, and other attractions arranged for were a ladies' bicycle race and a base ball tournament.—The Observer.

The Petersburgh Sun is thirteen years old this week, counting in the time it ran under the heading of "The Journal", during which period it lay, months at a stretch, insensible from coma of the brain, brought about by prolapsus revenue. Finally A. P. Failing had the nerve to undertake its fortunes, and is making a success of the business, and printing a prosperous paper.—Adrian Press.

This is the way a brother editor expresses himself, and they are our sentiments, exactly: Much as we would like to print every available item of news, it is undoubtedly true that some facts are missed every week, owing to the inability of the editor, who is also collector, advertising contractor and thin spacer, to learn of them. We will appreciate as a downright favor, the handing in of personal news especially, and other items of general interest. Don't wait for an introduction to the editor. He is public property.

The Brooklyn Exponent of Aug. 4th says: Calvin Edwards, one of the old pioneers of Lenawee county, who moved into the country at an early day, building the first frame house in Franklin and helping to build the first church, died at his home in this village Tuesday afternoon. He was 88 years old and had been in feeble health for a long time. On Monday morning, about 2 o'clock, he fell, in attempting to get out of bed, and sustained a concussion of the brain. The funeral was held this morning a 10 o'clock from the residence, Rev. J. H. Fleming officiating. Interment will be made in the Franklin cemetery.

The HERALD force returned from Devils Lake Tuesday morning, having enjoyed a delightful outing of four days. The ton of fish they intended to ship home was disposed of to speculators and the proceeds invested in steamboat rides, the water-parachute, holy-booster, and other means of transit. The cottages are nearly all occupied with jolly people full of music and fun. The steamers Flora and G. A. R. have lots of friends who keep them busy. We were sorry to find Capt Louden, of Adrian, at his cottage in very poor health and unable to enjoy a spin on the water. We dealt with Hank Harvey, and enjoyed his early history of fishing parties. We hope to see Ed. Imerson and family in the Bresee Hotel next summer, and enjoy their hospitality more than four days.

Six Adrian wheelmen started out early last Monday morning for a spin of one hundred miles to Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti and return. They took breakfast at Tecumseh and then sped on to Saline. Two fell out on the return journey but four of them completed the full trip and arrived home in safety Monday evening.

Yesterday morning Co. C departed for the state encampment via the Lake Shore to Dundee, from there over the Toledo & Ann Arbor to Howell Junction, thence to Island Lake on the D. L. & N. The company takes this year about 50 men in line to camp with a full compliment of officers, cooks, etc. The best wishes of all patriotic Tecumsehites go with them.

The World's Fair buildings will be dedicated on the 21st of October instead of the 12th. Congress having passed a bill to that effect. October 21 is the exact anniversary of Columbus' landing, allowance being made for the correction in the calendar made by Pope Gregory. The change of date of dedication was made in the interest of chronological accuracy, and also to oblige New York City, which will have a Columbian celebration on the 12th.

A large number of people witnessed the defeat of the Adrian ball team Saturday, by the Woolen Mill nine. Score 16 to 15. The home battery was Hollenbeck and Gillen. It was the most exciting and interesting game played here this season.—Clinton Local.

The boys here feel deeply, on account of what happened, and they lay it to their pitcher, who curved his eye, instead of the ball, in order to get a double concentric view of one of Clinton's handsome young ladies.—Adrian Press.

It is getting very dry.

If you fail to come to Tecumseh next Thursday you will always regret it.

EASTERN STORMS.

Great Damage Done in New York and Massachusetts.

Lightning Causes the Death of Several Persons and Burns Many Buildings — Streets in Boston Turned Into Rivers.

IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The showers of rain which came to the city early Thursday evening greatly relieved the sweltering denizens of the town. The downpour continued at irregular intervals for some hours and was accompanied by an electric demonstration late in the evening. Severe electrical storms have prevailed at various points [illegible] and in New Jersey. In Beaver Dam, Orange county, during the storm Wednesday night the house of John Edwards was struck by lightning and Edwards' daughter and grandchild and Harvey Edwards, a relative, were killed. Others in the house were severely shocked. A dog crouching under a table was killed. Barns were burned and cattle killed near Ellenville. A severe electric storm passed over Ulster county, N. Y., Wednesday night. In Kingston a number of buildings were struck by lightning, and fully a dozen barns were burned in adjoining towns.

The persistent warm wave again made people uncomfortable Thursday, although the succession of local thunder storms mitigated the severity of the heat somewhat. The maximum temperature was 94 degrees, which was reached at 3 p. m. The following deaths from the heat were reported Thursday: Henrietta S. Conklin and Rev. Thomas Mulvaney, Brooklyn.

FLOOD AT THE "HUB."

BOSTON, Aug. 13.—The terrific thunderstorm which swept across eastern Massachusetts Friday morning broke all records as a producer of rain and lightning. In Boston the fall of rain in the first ten minutes of the shower measured .55-100 of an inch, and the total fall for the three hours during which it rained was 2.56-100 inches. Many stores were flooded in Boston, the heaviest sufferers being H. H. Cotton & Co., carpet dealers, whose stock was damaged to the extent of $15,000. Tremont street, in Boston, was in some places flooded from curb to curb, while all were temporarily transformed into rivers.

The lightning was unusually severe in Boston and vicinity. From the returns now in the record of the lightning's work in three hours is as follows: Number of dwellings and stores struck, 27; number of barns, 6; number of persons killed, 2; number of persons injured, 15. Fortunately there were not many serious fires resulting from the lightning's work, the barns suffering the worst.

The fatalities occurred at Monument Beach about 6 o'clock. One bolt struck two cottages. In one lived Rev. S. S. Seward, of New York. In this cottage the cook was just getting kindling for the fire and was in the basement and was struck, falling forward to the floor. She was found afterward with the ax in her hand. She had just been cutting the kindling wood. The bolt, it is supposed, struck the tower of the cottage, then descended to the basement, doing its fatal work there. It jumped to the next cottage, 8 feet distant, where it tore the woodwork and ripped off clapboards, and, entering the house, killed Mrs. George Alden, a young woman whose husband is a fin dealer at Brockton. Mrs Alden was in one of the chambers engaged in dressing one of her children at the time of the stroke. Mrs. Alden was 28 years old and well known in society circles of Brockton. The cook at the Seward cottage was Ellen Eagan, of Green Point, L. I.

A son of Mr. Seward was in the tower of the cottage at the time of the disaster, but was not injured beyond receiving severe shocks. The interior of both cottages was badly damaged, but no fire resulted. The other cases where persons were injured were scattered all over the suburban cities and towns, but none of them were serious.

GRASSHOPPERS IN OHIO.

Huron County Being Devastated by the Pests—Entire Fields of Oats Destroyed.

NORWALK, O., Aug. 15.—Grasshoppers in countless throngs are doing an immense amount of damage in this county (Huron) and adjoining counties to oats and other growing crops. So destructive have the pests been that whole fields of oats have been destroyed. Farmers have plowed them under or turned cattle in the fields. Garden vegetables and other green things are subject to their ravages.

Marriage of Admiral Dot.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Victoria hall, Lexington avenue and Fifty-fourth street, was the scene of a unique wedding Sunday night, when midgets were made man and wife. They were Leopold Kahn, better known to the profession as Admiral Dot, and Miss Lottie Naomi Swartwood. The ceremony was according to the Jewish ritual.

Tolles Turned Out.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—In the British house of commons yesterday the motion of "no confidence" in the conservative government of Lord Salisbury was carried by a vote of 350 to 310, thus bringing in the change of administration and Mr. Gladstone in power.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Election of Officers at Denver—Boston Gets the Next Conclave.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 12.—The twenty-fifth triennial conclave of knights templar at their session here yesterday elected officers as follows:

Grand master, Hugh McCurdy, Corunna, Mich.; deputy grand master, W. Larue Thomas, Louisville, Ky.; grand generalissimo, Reuben H. Lloyd, San Francisco; grand captain general, H. R. Stoddard, Bryan, Tex.; grand senior warden, George M. Moulton, Chicago; grand junior warden, Rev. H. W. Rugg, Providence, R. I.; grand treasurer, H. Wales Lines, Meriden, Conn. (reelected); grand recorder, W. B. Isaacs, Richmond, Va. (reelected).

It was decided to hold the twenty-sixth triennial conclave at Boston. Ninety-six votes were cast for Boston and seventy-eight for Cincinnati.

The knights templar grand encampment finished the work of the twenty-fifth triennial conclave and adjourned Friday after having installed the newly elected officers. Grand Master McCurdy made the following additional appointments, which, with the officers elected Thursday, make up the full list of officers of the grand encampment:

Sir Rev. Joseph M. McGrath, D. D., Illinois, prelate; Sir William B. Mellish, Ohio, grand standard bearer; Sir George C. Connor, Tennessee, grand sword bearer; Sir H. M. Orahood, Colorado, grand warden; Sir John A. Sloan, Missouri, grand captain of guard.

A YOUNG LADY'S FATE.

Miss Inman's Neck Broken in a Runaway at Marshalltown.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., Aug. 15.—Miss Phœbe Inman, daughter of a prominent farmer in the eastern part of this county, met a shocking death Friday night. While returning from Le Grand with a horse and cart the horse became frightened and ran away. Miss Inman was thrown out in such a manner that her head was thrust between the spokes of one wheel and she was whirled around and dragged for 20 rods, her neck being broken, one ear torn off, and otherwise mangled. She was to have been married soon.

Shot His Father and Himself.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15.—The little town of Smithville, in Clay county, 30 miles from this city, was the scene of a terrible double tragedy Saturday evening. Peter McCauley, a farmer living a short distance from Smithville, came into town, got drunk, became quarrelsome, and was arrested for disturbing the peace. Shortly afterward the son came in, and while his father was in the custody of officers shot at a head. He then turned the revolver upon himself and committed suicide.

Fatal Railway Disaster.

PEORIA Ill., Aug. 15.—The engine of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy train which left here at 7:55 on Saturday left the track 3 miles below this city. Engineer George Lane, of Galesburg, was instantly killed and Fireman John Mannell probably fatally hurt. Both men live at Galesburg and are married. The accident is thought to have been caused by spreading rails.

Fire in Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 15.—At 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon fire broke out in the livery barn of L. B. Smith, and within one hour had destroyed a whole block of buildings, comprising seventeen dwellings and three barns. Total loss estimated at $40,000; insurance about $10,000. Three firemen received serious injuries by a falling wall and were taken to the hospital.

UGLY STRIKERS.

Buffalo Switchmen Go Out and Resort to Violence.

Incendiary Fires Destroy Much Valuable Property—Trains Blockaded—Non-Union Men Assaulted and Badly Used Up.

DISORDER AT BUFFALO.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 15.—There is no further disguising the fact that the strike of the Erie and Lehigh Valley switchmen is a serious matter. Whether it would have proved so very serious to the railroads to have 150 or 200 men leave their posts of duty without warning is not now the question. Property belonging to the railroad company has been destroyed by incendiary fires, [illegible] and the peace officers called and sent to the dumps, the movement of trains has been seriously interfered with, and the lives of innocent persons who were in no way connected with the strike and had not even heard of it have been endangered by the derailment of a passenger train on one of the roads.

There had been more or less trouble Saturday between the strikers and their sympathizers and the men who were doing the strikers' work, and a few desultory assaults had occurred. Things began to put on a more serious aspect at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, when a series of incendiary fires broke out simultaneously in the Lehigh valley yards. Eighteen or twenty freight cars, filled with wool, cotton, hay and various other merchandise, two passenger coaches and two watchmen's houses were burned. The fires occurred at places where the firemen could not successfully stay the flames on account of an absence of water, besides the difficulty of access to the fires. The water tank adjacent to the coal trestles was smashed and an engine that was taking water there was wrecked by a string of runaway coal cars that had been turned loose from the trestle.

Three men are at the hospital badly hurt. One was assaulted at 3 o'clock Sunday morning, two others at 11 and another at 3 Sunday afternoon. The man who was assaulted at the Western New York & Pennsylvania crossing was on his way for the wrecker at the time and was turning a switch. The strikers had turned switches and thrown six cars from his train before that. He was struck on the head and when he was taken to the hospital was completely dazed and did not know what had occurred. One of the men was assaulted at the passenger station and two at William street.

One of the most cowardly things done was the throwing of switches under passenger train No. 17 at William street at 7:50 o'clock Sunday night. Two passenger coaches were thrown from the track, but the conductor does not think anybody was hurt, though many were badly frightened.

The strikers say they are determined to win the fight and they assert the roads are losing heavily by not having men to perform the work of the strikers. They say the Erie is thoroughly demoralized on account of the strike and that every side track on the Buffalo division is completely blocked.

SEVEN SOLDIERS DROWNED.

Ordered Into Deep Water in a Swimming School Before They Could Swim.

BERLIN, Aug. 12.—Seven soldiers were drowned at Neisse, in Prussian Silesia, while practicing in the military swimming school. The men were ordered to go into the water beyond their depth, the preceptor supposing them to be sufficiently practiced to be able to swim. This proved not to be the case and they sank without making any sign that they were drowning. The fact that they were drowned was not suspected for some moments, until they failed to come to the surface. It was then too late to save them.

ALL ARE DEAD.

An Austrian Clerk Kills His Family and Himself.

VIENNA, Aug. 13.—A clerk in this city named Johann Singer, who had been out of employment for some time, and who saw no means of supporting the woman with whom he was living and by whom he had three children, determined to kill them and then commit suicide. The means employed was burning charcoal. He started the fire in the room in which the woman and children were asleep, and inhaling the fumes they soon died. Singer himself remained in the room and died shortly after his victims.

A Michigan Mine Flooded.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 15.—The Standard coal mine, with an output of 50,000 tons annually, located just west of this city, was flooded by an overflow of water Friday. The mine is lost for all time. The loss on machinery is $6,000. Seventy-five miners, nearly all of whom have families to support, are thrown out of employment. The mine was one of the most prosperous in this section of the state.

Knights Shaken Up.

CLINTON, Ia., Aug. 15.—At noon Saturday a special passenger train of nine coaches, loaded with knights templar returning to their homes in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and neighboring states, met with a serious accident here, in which no lives were lost, but fifteen persons were injured, one possibly fatally.

HIS REASON.

I'm in love, and you ask why, old fellow?
By Jove, man, but how can I tell—
Unless it, may be, is her beautiful eyes
That are starry and tender like—well,

Like the pure eyes of angels in pictures—
But no, now I think, it's her mouth,
With lips just like curled crimson rose leaves,
Warm and sweet with the breath of the south.

Then her hair—ah! her hair in the sunshine,
It's like copper and gold in its sheen,
And she braids it in some way that's perfect,
And it crowns her small head like a queen.

Perhaps it's her chic way of dressing
She is always so faultlessly sweet,
From the crown of her low Paris turban
To the small varnished shoes on her feet.

There was never another dressed like her,
Nor carried herself with such grace,
Nor smiled in so winsome a manner,
With such archness and joy in her face.

[illegible]
So now I will readily own that I'm changed
Just one look into some woman's eyes.

PLANTIN' 'TATERS.

A Job Which Sam Pomeroy Cordially Hated.

How Joe Crane Showed Him a Pleasant Way to Get Rid of It—But Then Hayin' and Harvestin' Are to Come.

When I was fishing down on Barley run Doc Barnes came in one day and said he had just been up to Farmer Ben Pomeroy's and Jim Crane's taking some stitches in Ben's boy Sam and Jim's boy Joe. The circumstances that led to his call up in that neighborhood, as near as I could get it from authentic sources, were substantially as follows:

Fourteen-year-old Sam Pomeroy was industriously planting potatoes in a back field on his father's farm that forenoon when thirteen-year-old Joe Crane came along.

"Plantin' taters, Sam?" said Joe.

Sam said he was.

"What do you git fer doin' it?" asked Joe.

"Don't git nothin' fer doin' it," replied Sam. "Fer not doin' it I get licked."

Then there was silence for a moment. By and by Joe said: "It's too wet to plant 'taters. They'll rot."

"Don't seem to strike my pap that way," said Sam, and he planted along. Silence for a spell. Then Joe said:

"Tha's a wildcat up here apiece, Sam."

"Go 'way!" exclaimed Sam, straightening up and leaning on his hoe. "Where 'bouts?"

"Jist beyond the laurel patch, nigh the edge o' the Devil's Rut," replied Joe.

Sam pondered in silence for a minute, with his chin on his hoe, and then, sighing, resumed his planting. Joe broke the silence again:

"Can't you sneak your pap's gun?" said he. "I've snuck my pap's."

"Yes, I kin sneak it easy enough," said Sam, leaning on his hoe with one hand and scratching his head with the other. "But pap'll lick me like tarnation fer knockin' off plantin'."

"Tha's two dollars bounty now for the wildcat's ears," insinuated Joe. "An' the hide's wuth two dollars more."

"That's so," said Sam, shaking his head dolefully. "Durn the taters!"

"Tha's a circus over in town next week," said Joe, "an' 'taint fur yit till the Fourth o' July. I s'pose your pap'll give you two dollars, o' course, to take 'em in."

"Not by a jugful, he won't!" exclaimed Sam, dropping the hoe. "Where'll I meet you, Joe?"

"By the rock spring," replied Joe. "I got pap's gun hid up there."

And Joe went back to the woods, while Sam took a circuitous route for home, as his father was plowing on the direct route. In less than a quarter of an hour he and Joe loaded their guns at the rock spring and marched for the place where the wildcat was alleged to be lurking. That there was a wildcat in the vicinity, and a big one, was well known. Some said there were two. One had been seen several times, at any rate, and a number of lambs had been killed and carried off, and poultry yards had been thinned out in a way that denoted the methods of the wildcat. So there was no doubt that one of these destructive prowlers at least was operating in the neighborhood. Men had hunted for it and trapped for it, but it had thus far eluded hunter and trapper. The day Joe Crane appeared to Sam Pomeroy on the potato field he had been looking for a hawk's nest that he believed was somewhere among the old pine stubs around the Devil's Rut when he ran across a big wildcat, which ran up a tree, crouched in the fork, and glared back at him. He had thereupon hurried home, "snuck" his father's gun, and with rare diplomacy induced Sam Pomeroy to "sneak" his father's gun and join in a campaign against the wildcat's pelt and ears.

Joe, as the arbiter of the hunt, sent Sam through the laurel patch when they got there, where he shrewdly suspected the catamount had his refuge, while he himself went around the patch to be ready for the wily game if Sam routed it out. Sam started the big cat and got a shot at it. He broke one of its hind legs, but the wildcat bounded on out of the laurels on three legs. It came out near Joe, and he gave it a charge from his pap's gun, and tumbled it heels over head. It fell, kicking and yelling, right on the edge of the Devil's Rut, and its dying kicks carried it over the edge, and it fell headlong to the bottom of the rut.

The Devil's Rut, so-called, is a canyon on a small scale. It is a seam in the rocks, not over ten feet wide at its widest part, thirty feet deep and a quarter of a mile long. Joe and Sam looked down into the Devil's Rut and could see the wildcat lying there dead. To climb down the side of the opening was an impossibility, and it looked as if the hunt was to be a fruitless one after all.

"We're dished!" said Sam, "fin' I'm a heap worse off than nothin', fer all I'll git now'll be pap's lickin'!"

But Sam was too much of a pessimist. Joe was optimistic. If he hadn't been he would have lost the wildcat's hounty and its skin, perhaps, but both he and Sam would have returned home with more skin of their own than they did, to say nothing of clothes.

It is a great place for wild grapes around and about the Devil's Rut. The vines extend from tree to tree, some of them in continuous stretch for fifty feet or more. It took Joe Crane no longer than two minutes to think out a plan for securing the wildcat and all that it implied. He traced out a vine that had thrown itself through the trees for fifteen or twenty yards from its parent cane. He climbed the trees in succession, cutting the vine loose from the branch vines and tendrils that held it, and at last had it free, a long, strong, natural rope, fully fifty feet in length. The two boys tested its strength by [illegible] from it. It held [illegible] and he [illegible] to its native tree. Joe lowered the vine to the bottom of the Devil's Rut, and went down into the rut, hand over hand upon it. His intention was to fasten the wildcat's carcass to the vine and haul it up. But while Sam was waiting for the signal to pull away he heard Joe shouting something else.

"Hello, Sam!" Joe's voice came up from the Rut. "Drop down here with the guns! Tha's a hole full o' more wildcats!"

Sam couldn't drop down with the guns, so he tied them to a long grapevine and lowered them to the bottom. Then he dropped himself down Joe's grapevine and joined Joe in the Rut.

"Look in yonder!" said Joe, pointing to a big hole in the rocks. Sam looked, and saw four balls of fire, all in a row.

"Each pair o' them balls o' fire," said Joe, "is two dollars fer bounty an' two dollars fer hide. That's tootems four is eight, and this feller layin' over here is tootems two is four, makin' twelve, 'cordin' ta Dubolls. You take the two balls on the nigh side, Sam, an' I'll take the two on the off side. When I say three, let her bim!"

It seemed a good while to Sam before Joe said three, but when the word came he "let her bim," according to directions. Both guns went off at once, and the four balls of fire disappeared, but something else came in sight. Two wildcats bounded out of the hole in the rocks, over the bodies of the two Joe and Sam had shot, and while the report of the guns was still bowling along the narrow passage in booming echoes, and before the boys had time to be surprised they found themselves mixed up on the rocky bottom of the Devil's Rut with wildcats, grapevines, guns and stones in such a way that the impress of it on their minds will be fresh and vivid long after the impressions it made on their bodies have healed up and disappeared.

Neither Joe nor Sam can recall just how they managed to bring the end about, but the appearance of the two wildcats' heads conveyed the impression that it was accomplished principally by the butts of guns. At any rate, when the rush and whirl and yelling was all over the boys found themselves sitting on the bottom of the Rut without much clothing on to speak of, and with scarcely a spot four inches square from their shoulders down that didn't have the marks of a wildcat's claw imprinted on it. As they sat there wiping blood with such bits of shirt and things as still hung to them Joe was the first to break the silence.

"That hole," said he, "was a leetle fuller o' wildcat than I calkilated on. But them last ones makes tootems four is eight more, Sam."

Sam said he "know'd it," but made the apt suggestion that they had better be digging out of there and making for home to get patched up. So they agreed that they had done their share, and would go home and send their paps back after the guns and the wildcats. They hauled themselves out of the Rut by the grapevines and limped homeward.

It happened that not long after Sam Pomeroy had abandoned operations in the potato field and joined Joe Crane in the wildcat hunt, his father strolled over to the field to see how he was getting along. Finding the hoe there alone, Farmer Pomeroy hurried home to see what had become of Sam. Not finding Sam, but noticing that the gun was gone, he started for the woods. In the course of his reconnoitering he at last came upon Sam and Joe as they were making the best time they could homeward, tattered and disabled.

"Jist what I ben a 'spectin'!" exclaimed Farmer Pomeroy. "That gun has gone and busted on you at last! Sarves you right, an' I'll give yer hide a tannin' when I git ye home."

"Don't know about that, pap," said Sam. "You won't find much hide left on me to tan, I'm thinkin'."

Then the boys told the wildcat story, and Farmer Pomeroy helped them home on the double quick, turned them over to their mothers, sent for the doctor, and he and Joe's father went to the Devil's Rut and brought in the wildcats and their guns. After Doc. Barnes had patched Joe and Sam up, he said:

"Potato planting will all be over, Sam, when you get around again."

"So I s'pose," said Sam. "But then comes the grass and the rye. Them wildcats seen me through the plantin' all right. I only wisht that me an' Joe could find another hole full o' more of 'em. That'd help me over hayin' an' harvest, too."—Ed Mott, in N. Y. Sun.

A Famous Carriage.

The carriage which Napoleon I. used in his famous retreat from Moscow, and in which he started out from Paris in the campaign that ended at Waterloo, is now held by the trustees of the Wellington estate, having been captured by the iron duke. It is a two-seated conveyance; top and sides lined with iron; there is also a front "curtain" that can be raised and lowered at will. The wheels are large and heavy and the steps are finished with curious battle designs done in silver. The emperor used the back seat and kept his pillows and blankets under it. The back of the front seat was used as a cupboard, and was provided with all sorts of culinary articles and a small spirit or oil stove.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

CARLETON, Mich., Aug. 25, 1890.

To whom it may concern: "After an acquaintance with Dr. O. J. Fay extending over a period of eighteen years, I can cheerfully testify to his sincerity of purpose, integrity and high social and professional standing in this, the county of his residence. Having used the New Treatment for Consumption in my family for coughs and colds, I find that it possesses more real merit than any other medicines we have used for these complaints, and heartily recommend its use as a family medicine.

The Baptist Sunday School went to the Lakes Tuesday.

The Episcopal social is held this week at Mrs Laura Tuttle's.

E. VanDeMark and W. C. Rogers went to Ann Arbor Tuesday.

Mrs. John Hause is visiting her sister, Mrs. Bradley, at Climax.

Mrs. W. W. Demuth went to Battle Creek Monday to visit her sister.

Mrs. Ed. Smith entertained friends in honor of Lizzie Rod last Saturday.

Mrs. Chas. Burroughs and son spent last Thursday with friends in Manchester.

this week, after a visit of three weeks here.

Chas. Burroughs is attending the State Convention at Grand Rapids this week.

Lew Gray, who has been working for Will. Kather, returned to Jackson Monday.

F. D. Lancaster and wife returned last Saturday from their trip to Albion and Grand Rapids.

Mrs. Susan Fisher and family will leave here in a few days for their new home at Ann Arbor.

Mrs. J. E. Wipple and daughter Mary returned last Friday from a four weeks visit at Battle Creek.

Ed. Smith went to Port Huron Monday. He will also attend the State Convention if possible.

W. H. Silvers started for Cleveland Monday morning. He went to Detroit intending to take a boat from there.

Dr. Emma McCollum, who has been at Cleveland since her graduation in '91, is now in Battle Creek and is said to be very successful.

F. W. Wainwright and family leave this week for Fox river to the first of the week and will spend a few days with Mrs. Eleanor Gilchrist.

Mrs. Frank Lee was prevented by sickness from returning home last week as she intended. She started for Sunset Monday morning.

Rev. Stevens preached at the M. E. church in Deerfield last Sunday morning. The pastor here was called to the bedside of a son of Rev. Perrin, who is attending the seminary.

Miss Augusta Bruce left town last Friday for Perrysburg, O., where she expected to remain until Wednesday of this week, when she would leave for Columbus City, Ala.

Miss Lizzie Rod, of Washington, D. C., is visiting at J. B. Hause's. She will remain here until the last of next week, when she will go to Chicago for a few days before returning east.

The ball game last Saturday between Clinton and Saline resulted in a score of 16 to 9 in favor of Clinton. The Britton Club will play our boys here next Saturday and a splendid game is looked for.

Town is afflicted this week with a steam merry-go-round and a party of campers of uncertain nationality. It is difficult to decide which is the greater nuisance, though public opinion seems to favor the latter.

Fred Tag, who is visiting his uncle in Sharon, met with quite an accident Monday. He was on an oat stack and seeing that it was about to tip over he slid off and struck his face in such a way as to break his left jaw.

Members of the M. E. church are discussing the fact that Rev. Stevens' stay here is drawing to a close. He has been here five years, the extreme limit allowed by Conference, and the town's people in general as well as his parishioners regret the necessity that compels a separation.

Will Barnsdale, after watering his horse in the river Wednesday, stepped out on the thill to check him. The horse started, throwing Will back on the crossbar, then ran a little distance and freed himself from the buggy. He was caught in front of Rogers' carriage rooms. William Mair's team also ran away Wednesday, but fortunately no serious damage was done in either case.

Special G. A. R. and W. R. C. Train to the National Encampment, Washington, D. C.

On this occasion the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y will sell excursion tickets at very low rates.

A special train will be run over the Old Road division Sept. 13th, by the way of Cleveland and Pittsburg, giving a daylight ride over the mountains of Pennsylvania.

The considerable members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. from points north, who wish to go on this train, a through car will be run on the afternoon train over the Jackson Branch Division and attached to these cars train at Lenawee Junction.

For rates, time cards, apply to local ticket agents, or write to A. J. Smith, G. P. & T. A., Cleveland, O., or to W. S. Brown, T. P. A., Hillsdale, Mich., for any particulars.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make a little health go a long way. Its curative power is largely attributable to its strengthening and nutritive properties by which the energy of the system is restored. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

ADDIIONAL LOCAL.

Late Friday afternoon while the horse back races were in progress at Moore's resort, Wampler's lake, Thomas M. Cambarn, Superintendent of Franklin, drove from the hotel into the highway. Mr. Cambarn's wife and mother were in the back seat, and though one of the horses crashed into the buggy, so as to overturn and damage the seat, spilling out its occupants and leaving the horse's fore-quarters in their portion of the buggy, no one was injured. How such an accident happened without serious injury or loss of life was the question of hundreds who rushed to the scene. The races were a part of the program of the eighth

The great curse of the American people is indigestion and constipation. The best medicine to cure them is

...CELERY TEA...

It tones up the liver and overcomes constipation. It purifies the blood, and produces a fine complexion. Those who have used it, claim that it excels all others on the market. If you wish to be convinced buy a box for 25c. and try it. If you do, you will make it a household companion. Do not neglect this opportunity. As an inducement for all mankind to use Celery Tea, we publish the following rebus, which gives all an opportunity to obtain a cash prize as well as value received in the box of tea. For the correct solution of this REBUS

WE WILL GIVE
$200.00
IN CASH

Divided into 105 Cash Prizes, as follows:

First Capital Prize	$30.00	Third Capital Prize	$10.00
Second Capital Prize	$20.00	Fourth Capital Prize	$5.00

Also Sixty-Five Prizes of $1.00 Each.

Also to the Person Sending us the Last Correct Answer WILL BE AWARDED THE

Last Capital Prize	$20.00	Third from Last Prize	$5.00
Second from Last Prize	$10.00	Fourth from Last Prize	$3.00

Also Thirty-Two Prizes of $1.00 Each,
COUNTING FROM THE LAST ANSWER.

Each solution of the Rebus must be accompanied by an empty box in which Celery Tea is put up. You can send in any number of answers, provided each answer is accompanied by an empty Celery Tea Box.

Celery Tea is sold by all druggists for 25 cents per box, or five boxes $1.00. If unable to obtain it in your section, send us the price (stamps accepted) with your answer and we will send it by mail.

W. H. HILL & CO., Mnfg. Chemists, DETROIT, MICH.

REFERENCES—Williams, Davis, Brooks & Co., Farrand, Williams & Clark, Hazeltine & Perkins Drug Co., T. H. Hinchman & Sons, and Lambert & Lowman.

We would like all answers sent in as soon as possible, but contest will be open till September 30, 1892. All persons sending in correct answers will receive a printed list of the prize winners after the distribution, which will take place September 30.

Celery Tea is Nature's specific for nervousness, sick headache, chronic constipation, billiousness, kidney and liver complaint. It will also produce a clear complexion for all who use it. Give it a trial. Every box warranted to give satisfaction.

REMEMBER, you get value received in the Tea, and there are 105 prizes in all, 30 prizes counting from last answer. Try it.

RINGLING BROS. CIRCUS.

The HERALD takes pleasure in announcing to its readers that while the famous Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will not be seen in this place during the present season, arrangments have been made with the railroad authorities by which all who desire to go to Adrian where this aggregation exibits Saturday, Aug. 27, can do so at greatly reduced rates. A visit to this biggest of big shows will constitute a gala day long-to-be remembered, and, besides, it will furnish an opportunity for seeeing the grandest exhibition in the world. Under the largest tents ever constructed will be shown the finest zoological collection on earth, including two great herds of performing elephants, a whole drove of camels, the largest living hippotamus, a magnificent Percheron stallion with a mane nine feet in length, a complete horse fair containing 350 head of high-bred horses, and a circus performance embracing more high salaried preformers than any other two shows can boast, the best bareback riders in the world, and the most exciting chariot and other races ever seen under canvas. A grand street procession occurs at 10 o'clock, when among many other novel features there will be exhibited free, a mammoth high-way locomotive drawing one section of the parade,—a magnificent reproduction of Moscow's Kremlin Tower, with its chimes of sweet sounding bells, and a full mile of other wonders, such as no other show in the world has ever exhibited.

The Prohibition meeting held in Lowe's grove Wednesday of last week was very largely attended. The exercises were opened with singing, followed by prayer, after which the Squires family band of Wayne furnished some beautiful selections. Mrs. Marion Baxter, of Charlotte, delivered a grand and eloquent address, full of truth regarding the evil of intemperance and the duty of the American citizen. Beyond a doubt Mrs. Baxter is one of the finest lady speakers before the public to-day. At noon dinner was served to visiting guests by the W. C. T. U. of Britton and Ridgeway. At two o'clock the meeting was called to order and opened with music by the Squires family band, followed by two recitations that were very pleasing. The address was given by Dr. J. S. Hughes, of Chicago, who spoke on the responsibility of the voters for the existing evils of our government in various ways.

A Brilliant Wedding.

One of the most noteworthy social events that has ever transpired in Dundee was the wedding party of Prof. [illegible] occurred last Wednesday. We condense those particulars from the last issue of the Reporter.

On Wednesday afternoon of this week occurred one of the most brilliant occasions of the season, the marriage of Charles H. Carrick, principal of the Petersburg union school, and Miss Ada Slayton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Slayton, at the elegant home of the bride's parents on Main Street.

Everything seemed to favor and make it auspicious. The weather though warm was cloudless the blue favoring time of Gods—with pleasant breezes to fan the eager expectant faces and enchant the longing ear. The sun riding on its western journey looked smilingly on the scene.

About 900 persons present, including many representatives from neighboring towns and cities, had gathered and grouped in front of the house to witness the ceremony, which was performed in an artistic canopy, erected near the front fence, decorated with beautiful foliage, flowers and ribbons, with a floral bell suspended over the center, not to strike an alarm, but that the marriage take pla e under the sound of its chimes. The Dundee Cornet Band was present and discoursed sweet strains of music.

Three tables were erected in parallels along the west side of the lot, so as to comfortably sit 400 at the feast, with an awning over the whole, allowing the pleasant breezes to pass through, and making it shady and delightful to sit and enjoy the royal provision.

At 2:30 o'clock Mrs. Edith Carr took her seat at the piano and struck up the wedding march. Its sweet strains prepared the company for the event.

Two little girls, Mable Boyse and Mable Skentelbury, and two little boys, Eugene Slayton and Henry Carrick, went in front with bolts of white ribbon which they unstrung, making a delicate line on either side of the carpeted way on which the central party were to pass.

Taylor Janney and wife, Curtis Reynolds and wife, Geo. Pulver and wife, Eugene Richardson and wife (who have been grouped in general friendship for years—with Fred Carr and wife—and attended each others wedding) marched in order, followed by Rev. W. H. Skentelbury and Rev. Chas. W. Carrick with the groom and bride. When the canopy was reached a crescent was formed, with above ladies on one side as bride-smaids and the gents on the other side as brides men. When the march ended Rev. W. H. Skentelbury performed the marriage ceremony, and Rev. C. W. Carrick, father of groom, offered a most affecting prayer for the blessings of heaven to attend the happy pair through their future life, which was felt by all.

After the general congratulations, the company was marched to the splendidly arranged tables to partake of the ample repast. When all were seated, Rev. J. G. Morgan most suitably asked the divine blessing on bride and groom, parents and friends, and all the company, with thanks for the blessings spread. The great company was as effectively attended to as if there had been a few and nothing was wanting to make the occasion royal. A glow of satisfaction seemed to sweep all along the tables and everyone felt it was not only a great but most holy occasion.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Mrs. Mettie Best and daughter Fay from the South are visiting at Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Allen's.

The picnic Saturday in Simmons' grove was pronounced a decided success the brightest anticpations of our youth were fully realized, can we add more? It was not our good fortune to be present.

A genial party of surveyors have been tenting in Ben Reynolds' woods for several days; they are doing this vicinity for the coming county atlas. One of them Charles Ross, is from North Platte, Neb., he has met the Wisner boys and says Owen is building up a fine practice as an M. D., out there.

A disastrous fire occured last Friday at Eli Abbott's. Flames broke out of the horse barn at six o'clock in the evening and rapidly spread to the adjoining hay shed, thence to the large grain barn, making a clean sweep of the three buildings. Mr. Abbot was absent from home at the time. The loss includes 150 bushels of old wheat, 25 tons of hay 25 acres of grain, a lot of chickens, most of the farm tools, harness, and etc. it was insured we understand for $1000. The fire originated in the hay loft of the horse barn and is a profound mystery.

THE THREE LINK PICNIC.

The first annual picnic of the Odd Fellows of Lenawee County occurred on Wednesday of last week on the County [illegible] attendance was not as large as it would otherwise have been, but the affair was a very pleasant one for those who participated. We append a brief synopsis of the days proceedings taken from the Press.

The Adrian City Band led the procession to the grand stand, where, at 11 o'clock, the gathering was called to order by Geo. S. Poucher and the ode of the order was sung. Prayer was offered by the chaplain, Rev. I. W. Lowman, of Blissfield. The Adrian City Band rendered one of its finest selections, after which W. W. Burch, Noble Grand of Adrian Lodge No. 8, welcomed the bretheren of the county to the picnic grounds.

Rev. I. W. Lowman gave the response in the course of which, in commenting upon the benefits of the order of Odd Fellows he asserted that until christendom practiced what it preached, would hold the order of I. O. O. F., as exemplifying very fully the teaching of Him who spake as never man spoke. Odd Fellowship would stand as long as there was a brother of the race who needed a helping hand. He was glad to show to the world, not only the record of the society but convince all that its charities were not wholly locked up in the mysteries of the lodge room. He had found that the religion of Odd Fellowship was to practice what it preached. If preached as it should be, very little would be left to do for the betterment of mankind except conversion to christianity. Mr. Lowman was glad in his heart that he was an Odd Fellow.

At this point the assemblage adjourned for dinner which was spread in the various buildings on the grounds.

The exercises of the afternoon were opened with music by the Misses Bay, of Ogden and Miss Parker of Palmyra, who rendered a song in a manner that charmed the audience.

Nettie a wee daughter of Steadman Westerman, sang a selection that greatly pleased all present.

An address was then given by P. G. M. Geo. W. Westerman followed by a very fine oration from Grand Secretary E. H. Whitney, of Lansing. The venerable D. D. Sinclair, made a few interesting remarks. Of the five charter members of Adrian Lodge, he is the only one now living.

After further music the exercises closed with the election of the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—Dr. F. E. Andrews, of No. 8, Adrian.

Vice presidents—Adrian, No. 8, E. L. Mills.
Fairfield.—No. 269, J. M. Robb.
Blissfield—No. 258, H. Scott.
Riga—No. 361, Geo. P. Albring.
Morenci—No. 73, G. W. Gillis.

Treas—P. G. Master, Geo. W. Westerman of No. 8, Adrian.

Recording and Corresponding Secretary, G. S. Poucher of No. 8, Adrian.

Committee on By-laws:—D. D. Sinclair, of No. 8; Fred. Bay, No. 258; Alva Mackey, No. 269.

The time and place of holding the next annual picnic were left with the executive committee.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 25, 1892.

Cleveland and Morse will make a strong team in Michigan. Nothing but over confidence or mismanagement on the part of the Democrats themselves can beat this combination in the Wolverine bailiwick this fall.

Judge Morse is unquestionably the strongest man the Democrats could have placed at the head of their ticket, and the other candidates are so distributed in the two peninsulas that the ticket may be regarded as one of the best the party has ever put up.—Grand Ledge Independent.

Every man who voted for the Mills bill is "a rabid free trader bent upon destroying American industries"—every one but Knute Nelson, the Republican candidate for Governor in the State of Minnesota. He is all right because "the McKinley bill has a longer free list than the Mills bill."

The Democratic State Convention at Grand Rapids last week put a remarkably strong ticket in the field. Judge Morse will be a winning candidate and he will make an able governor. Both in personnel and in geographical distribution, the ticket is admirably made up, from top to bottom.

The action of Gov. Winans in declining to be a candidate for renomination was a most disinterested and patriotic act. He congratulates his competitors to Judge Morse after the Judge's nomination, and he will be found in the fore front of the fight during the coming campaign.

The response to the nomination of Judge Morse for governor is one of universal commendation. He was a gallant soldier, having left an arm on the battle field; he is an eminent jurist, and a progressive, brainy man of affairs, who will reflect honor upon the governor's office. His election is reasonably certain.

The Democratic National Committee have established a western branch at Chicago and put Don M. Dickinson in charge to manage its arduous duties. This action means that a determined fight is to be made for Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa. And a better man than Mr. Don could not have been selected to put through the job successfully.

The nomination of Judge Morse, the brave, steadfast, patriotic, able and brilliant soldier Chief Justice of Michigan, for the office of Governor, was a spontaneous call from the masses. No such call has been issued from the people in behalf of a candidate of any party within the history of Michigan conventions.—Saginaw Evening News.

This much is certain about Judge Gresham's position. He may or may not indorse the principles and policies of the People's party and may or may not vote its national ticket. But he certainly is dissatisfied with the Republican party and will not give either vote or influence towards the election of Benjamin Harrison. And this means more than the loss of 5,000 votes for Harrison in Indiana.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The nomination of Judge Morse is especially gratifying to the Democrats and all others who appreciate a great brainy and able man at the head of affairs. For two years the people have had the best Governor ever residing in the state. For eight years they have had on the supreme bench a one-armed veteran, whose judicial ability has been conceded on every hand and whose fame as a jurist is of national reputation.—Adrian Weekly Press.

Judge Morse, the Democratic nominee for Governor, is deservedly a very popular and highly esteemed citizen. He is an old soldier whose services to his country are indicated by the loss of an arm. A more worthy gentleman or more deserving citizen could not have been placed in nomination for the honorable position of Governor of the State of Michigan. The Democracy has shown its wisdom in the choice. There is little doubt that the Judge will receive quite a liberal support from many good Republicans who cannot see their way clear to support Rich, the ex-Railroad Commissioner.—West Bay City Post.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

They Meet in Semi-Annual Conclave at Kansas City.

The Town Gay with Decorations—Thousands Already Under Shelter in the Tents—Work of Committees Well Done.

CONCLAVE OF KNIGHTS.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 22.—Camp George B. Shaw, where the uniform rank, Knights of Pythias, go into their semi-annual encampment, was transformed Sunday from a silent city to tenantless tents into a scene of bustling martial activity. Com-

[illegible] the day's settling down in their quarters and accommodating themselves to the necessities of camp life. Accommodations for 10,000 knights have been prepared, a tented city has sprung up in a week and over 3,000 tents are ready for their occupants. Every arrangement is complete. Never before has there been such an attempt here to care for a big crowd, and the city is almost overtaxed by the burden.

The encampment of the knights, for which the people of Kansas City have made elaborate preparations and which many thousands of strangers will come here to witness, is really only an incident of the meeting of the supreme lodge of the order. While the territory now occupied by the order is not at present coextensive with the earth, it claims jurisdiction throughout the civilized world. As the official title of its highest legislative body indicates, it is "the supreme lodge of the world." In other grand lodges or ranks of the order are creatures of the greater body, including the uniform rank, in whose gorgeous splendor the importance and dignity of the parent organization will for one week be lost sight of.

The supreme lodge numbers over 112 members, and includes not only representatives of the forty-eight grand jurisdictions of the United States but also of Canada, British Columbia and the British maratime provinces—fifty-four grand jurisdictions in all. The supreme lodge will meet Tuesday and continue during the greater part of two weeks, holding its sessions in Scottish Rite hall in the Ridge building on Walnut street. Besides the usual routine business of the lodge a number of questions of unusual importance will be disposed of. Among these are the right by outside insurance associations to use the name of the order. Special attention will be given to the Pythian Life association of Omaha and the Hines memorial fund, being a proposition to erect a monument to a deceased member of the order who was burned to death in trying to save another pythian's life.

WIPED OUT BY FIRE.

The Business Part of the Town of Geneva, O., Destroyed by Fire—Loss, $175,000.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 20.—Fire broke out at Goodrich & Co. in Geneva, 45 miles east of here, in the rear of a drug store on West Broadway, and quickly spread to adjacent buildings on either side. The local fire engine, manned by a volunteer company, was run out and a fractious team attached to it, which became frightened and ran away, disabling the engine and leaving the town to the mercy of the flames. Dispatches were sent to Cleveland, Painesville and Ashtabula for aid. It was daylight when the Cleveland engine arrived and by that time the destruction was widespread. The engines called from Ashtabula and Painesville were at work and the flames were prevented from spreading further. The three hotels and almost all the business places between the Lake Shore railroad track and Main street were completely destroyed. Altogether twenty-four buildings burned, comprising business houses mainly, part of them occupied as dwellings in the upper stories, and four residences. The estimated loss is $175,000, on which there is $75,000 insurance. It was reported that the fire was started by an incendiary.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

SINGLE TAX IN THE FEDERAL DISTRICT.

Report of the Committee to Investigate the District of Columbia Assessment.

If the national government should assume the entire cost of the district government only the landowners would be benefitted, since they could still demand the full rental of land regardless of the fact that it had been relieved of taxation. The effect of such liberality toward the federal district on the part of congress would be to increase enormously the few large fortunes and to drive a great number of citizens into narrower quarters. Indeed the report declares that it would have a tendency to make it more and more difficult for [illegible] to reside in the district and to compel [illegible] to reside elsewhere and [illegible] moderate salaries. The single tax lesson is then driven home by the report in this fashion:

Analysis shows that the rental value of land does not arise from any expenditure of labor or investment of capital by the owner of the land. The value which the owner of land may create by the expenditure of labor and capital is a value which attaches to buildings or improvements. The value which attaches to the land itself comes from the growth of the whole community. It is this growth and improvement of the community itself which has given to land in certain parts of the federal district a value amounting to over three million dollars an acre. If the owners of this land had left their land idle, if they had been absentees or idiots, this value would have attached to the land to the same extent and in the same manner. It comes from the growth of population and general improvement, and is primarily due to the fact that this particular place has been selected as the site of the National capital. Thus, every one who adds even temporarily to the population and business of Washington does something to add to the value of the land, something to increase a fund which may be taken to defray all the expenses of government without levying any tax on legimate property or improvement, or which will in any way increase the cost of living. No matter how he lives, so long as he lives here, every resident must directly or indirectly contribute to the rental value of land. In this way every resident, and, indeed, every sojourner, may be said, in what he pays for the use of land, even though it be for a single night's lodging, to pay a just tax, sufficient to provide for the legitimate expenses of the local government and to make the most ample public improvements. But if the individual landowners are permitted to put the proceeds of this tax in their pockets and taxes are then levied that fall on use and consumption, the body of citizens are really twice taxed.

Having made the single tax argument, the committee concludes that the principle of confining the assessment of taxes in the district to the annual value of land would do essential justice, but as the assessment of land by its annual rental value involves a radical change in American custom, the committee concludes that it would be sufficient to assess upon the selling value and exempt all improvements from taxation.

Mr. Johnson's colleagues agree with him in his argument, and in his conclusion, but the report states that when the proposition was made to recommend the insertion in the new district appropriation bill of a clause providing for the assessment of taxes solely upon the selling value, Mr. Johnson's colleagues dissented, and the recommendation accordingly provides for the assessment of taxes upon improvements as well as upon land values.

The clause to be inserted in the appropriation bill, however, provides for the assessment of real estate only upon the amount it would bring if sold under ordinarily favorable circumstances.

Appended to the report is a table showing percentage of increase in the value of lands and in the value of improvements, and the percentage of increase in the total assessment, and the percentage of land values to total assessments in Washington city from 1880 to 1893. The estimate for 1893 is based upon the careful examination of twenty-seven typical blocks. It shows an increase of 160 per cent. in land values and of 7 per cent. in improvements. The proportion of land value assessments to the total assessment in all these years varied from 48 to 53 per cent. In the tentative assessment for 1893 it is 73 per cent.

Another table shows the same facts as to the whole district. Other tables show comparisons of the proportion of value of the improvements to total value in business blocks and occupied by small houses.

How Jim Puzzled the School-Master.

James McPherson was a boy of some intelligence, with a father an ardent protectionist, and an uncle an uncompromizing free trader of the Manchester school. Naturally, as Jim's father and uncle lived in the same house, Jim got a pretty fair idea of the stock arguments on each side: but what he never could make out was how labor benefited by either policy. His father sternly maintained that in a protectionist country there were better wages, while his uncle just as strongly maintained the same in regard to free trade countries. Now, Jim thought to himself, there can't be such a striking difference between them in any case, or there could not be any necessity for such an endless amount of argument about the subject. At any rate, he thought he would ask the school-master: and one day a favorable opportunity occurred when that gentleman was instructing Jim's class regarding the value of population. "Every additional head of population," said the school-master, "represents a clear gain to the state or to the community as a whole, of many pounds, and adds to its total wealth."

"Who gets the wealth, sir?" asked Jim.

The school-master looked with surprise at a boy who took an interest in economic questions which, as a general rule, did not interest his pupils. "The wealth," said the school-master, "is taken by those who earn it, and who by their industry and frugality deserve it."

"Have you much wealth?" said Jim, looking into the face of his master, who the whole neighborhood knew was a model of industry and frugality.

A troubled look passed over the face of the school-master as he replied, "My occupation is not directly productive, but as every man can not educate his own children, a school-master by doing so leaves others more time to produce and thus keep the carpenters, tailors and factory hands in production and adds to national wealth."

Jim didn't see that this was an answer to his question, so he tried again, "Do all carpenters, tailors and factory hands in this world in that year any population gives to the state?"

"Yes," said the school-master; "in a degree of course they do, but their share is much smaller than that which goes for interest and rent."

"Why?" said Jim.

"Why?" said the school-master, "why? Because population means more laborers, and more laborers mean more competition, and more competition means less wages."

"Then competition does not give value to labor?" said Jim.

"No," said the school-master; "on the contrary, competition reduces the value of labor."

"Yet it gives increased wealth to the community. Who gets the value population gives?" said Jim.

"Those," said the school-master, "who possess certain advantages which labor must use to live, and for the use of which labor makes a large return."

"Are there many people possessing such advantages?" asked Jim.

"No," replied the school-master; "they are in one sense numerous, but compared to population as a whole, they are few, very few.

"Are those few persons industrious, temperate and frugal? Do they take the wealth because they earn it, and by their industry and frugality deserve it?" said Jim.

"It by no means follows," said the school-master: "those few persons possessing certain advantages gain wealth by the possession of those advantages, and may be neither industrious, frugal, nor temperate."

"And they get the largest share?" said Jim.

"Yes," said the school-master.

"It does not seem fair," said Jim.

"It is a state of things," said the school-master, "that it is not our place to grumble at: the advantages are natural opportunities, principally land, which a few people have obtained and which entitles them to the value given by population."

"Then if population does not give value to labor it only gives value to land," said Jim, "because labor can not do without it: and the man who owns the land gets the greatest share of the value."

"If you could prove that, my boy," said the school-master, "you could make out a case for the followers of Henry George, whose works, by the way, I have not read. Unfortunately for his theories, population gives value to many things besides land."

"Permanent value?" said Jim.

"Yes," said the school-master.

"What things?" said Jim.

"Well," said the school-master, "let me see. Here are the boys' hats for example. If a store keeper had a lot of hats, and population suddenly increased, hats would become valuable."

"That is not permanent value," said Jim, "but merely temporary. As population increased competition would increase, and wages go down: they would start making hats, and the value of hats would decrease; but the value of land would go up. Is there anything besides land that population gives a permanent value to, that is what I want to know?"

"Well," said the school-master, "it may be so: we need not discuss it."

"Don't you think," said Jim, "that, if land takes the greater part of the value population gives, those who by their industry and frugality deserve it should get a larger share than they do?"

"That would mean," said the school-master, "the handing over of those natural advantages which private individuals now hold to the community for their general advancement, which can never be."

"Why?" said Jim.

"James," said the school-master, severely, "things have come to a pretty pass when a boy of your age can not take his teacher's word without asking why. We will go on with the next lesson."

PETER PICKLE.

In a reported increase of land values in Baltimore, the Boston Journal discovers cause for congratulating the inhabitants of that city as "sharers in the general prosperity that has existed during the present republican aeministration." Apparently, the Journal supposes that the value of land is actual wealth. So it is, potentially, to the owners of the land: but, when it is remembered that every dollar which land owners receive is a dollar taken without consideration from some one else, it becomes clear that land value is not wealth to those who yield it up. It is wealth as slave values were wealth. What the slave owners got, the slaves lost: what the land owners get, the landless lose. Land value is not merely a kind of wealth in which all do not share: like lottery prizes, it is a kind which is supplied principally by people who get no share at all. The Boston Journal should confine its congratulations to those inhabitants of Baltimore who are enriched by the increase in Baltimore land values. It must be irritating to the others: plundered men do not like to be congratulated.—The Standard.

The taxation of land according to its value exclusive of improvements and monopoly privileges, would cure inquality of taxation.—Workman and Farmer.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

SHORT WHEAT CROP.

The August Reports Are Very Unfavorable—Fruit Suffering.

The August crop report shows an estimated reduction of the total wheat yield in Michigan of 1,767,345 bushels. It says:

There has been a gain in the central counties of 49-100 bushels per acre, but there has been a falling off of 1.40 bushels in the southern counties, so that the total yield is now placed at 18,845,379 bushels. The total number of bushels reported marketed in July at the mills and elevators was 687,611 bushels, and for the twelve months August-July 16,749,915, which is 1,239,234 bushels more than during same period last year and is 89 per cent of the 1891 crop.

Oats are estimated to yield thirty-three bushels per acre in the southern and northern counties and thirty-two bushels per acre in the central counties. The condition of corn is 78 per cent, in the southern counties, the condition of potatoes is estimated at 91 and 91 per cent, in the above locations respectively, the comparisons being made with average years. The hay crop is estimated at 100 per cent of an average crop. Apples are reported to promise but 24 per cent of an average in the southern counties, 53 in the central and 36 in the northern counties.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-seven observers in different parts of the state for the week ended August 13 indicated that typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria and pneumonia increased, and inflammation of the brain, membranous crup, influenza and measles decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-four places, scarlet fever at twenty-four, typhoid fever at thirty-five and measles at three places.

Dove to His Death.

In a fit of bravado Patrick McQueen, the most expert swimmer on the Detroit river, climbed to the top of a 70-foot schooner's mast in Detroit and dove from there to the water below. Half way down he seemed to lose control of himself and turned several times in midair, striking on his back in the water with terrific force. He was quickly picked up and his back found to be broken. He died a few hours later.

A Mine Flooded.

The Standard coal mine, with an output of 50,000 tons annually, located just west of Jackson, was flooded by an overflow of water and the mine is lost for all time. The loss on machinery is $6,000. Seventy-five miners, nearly all of whom have families to support, are thrown out of employment. The mine was one of the most prosperous in that section of the state.

Killed in Jackson Prison.

William Cuddy, a contractor, of the firm of Phipps & Cuddy, at the Michigan state prison in Jackson, was killed at that institution by Henry Blackman, who is in for life for murdering his wife and his family. Blackman attacked Mr. Cuddy once before, and was severely punished for the deed. He has been declared insane.

Fatal Runaway.

While James Monaghan, of Detroit, was driving in Port Huron, his team suddenly got frightened at the electric street cars passing and ran away. Mr. Monaghan was thrown against the curbing with such force that his skull was fractured and he died in a short time. He was about 48 years old and leaves a wife.

A LITTLE GIRL'S EXPERIENCE IN A LIGHTHOUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Prescott are keepers of the lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and half bottles was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at J. J. Orr's drug store.

"Why do you irritate mamma so, George."

"Because, my dear, I hope some day to make her speechless with indignation."

We have sold Ely's Cream Balm about three years, and have recommended its use in more than a hundred special cases of catarrh. The unanimous answer to our inquiries is, "It's the best remedy that I have ever used." Our experience is, that where parties continued its use, it never failed to cure.—J. H. Montgomery & Co., druggists, Decorah, Iowa.

When I began using Ely's Cream Balm my catarrh was so bad that I had headache the whole time and discharged a large amount of filthy matter. That has almost entirely disappeared and I have not had headache since.—J. H. Sommers, Stephney, Conn.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers in medicine.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent).

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19, 1892.

A little political excitement was injected into the August dullness by the unexpected arrival of Mr. Thomas H. Carter, chairman of the republican National committee, in Washington early this week. What did he come for? [illegible] paper man on duty tried to find the answer to, and [illegible] certain that any of them succeeded, although

He called at the residence of Secretary Elkins, but that gentleman was out of town; he called at the White House, but nobody was there but the doorkeeper and the servants; he spent an hour or more in the office of Col. W. W. Dudley, who has so far declined to take any part in the campaign, and, in accordance with a hoary-headed custom that ought to be broken up, he called at the General Land Office, of which he was the official head for a few months, and was the recipient of a gold watch and chain, purchased with money contributed by the employes of that office.

Those who are trying to keep on with the political procession, have placed Tennessee in the doubtful column, which appears to be unusually large and continually growing, since the announcement of the independent candidacy of Gov. Buchanan was received. The claims of the people's party men are on the increase; they now say that they expect to carry at least ten States and to elect no less than 100 members of the next House.

It is already apparent that Washington is to be more lavishly decorated for the G. A. R. National encampment than it has ever been for a Presidential inauguration. In addition to the decoration of private buildings along the route of the parade, which will be general and profuse, the commission in decoration has adopted a plan for the erection of forty four arches at the intersections of the twenty-two streets which cross Pennsylvania Avenue between the Capitol and Washington circle, one for each State, and a colossal [illegible] arch, ninety-five feet high across Pennsylvania Avenue, in front of the Department of Justice. Preparations are also under way which promise to make the electrical street illumination the most brilliant ever seen. It is [illegible] probable also that the encampment will give a name to the beautiful and extensive lawn just south of the White House that will be a decided improvement on that of the "White Lot" by which it has always been known. It is to be used during the encampment for holding reunions, and on the 19th of September it will be dedicated with imposing ceremonies as "Grand Army Place," and it is expected that the new name will supplant the old. Washington is on its mettle, and proposes to show the rest of the country how well and how easily it can entertain the half million people who will attend the encampment for a week. The leading business men of the city are on the various committees which will see that every visitor has a comfortable place to sleep and plenty to eat, and that no extortionate prices are charged for anything.

Representative McCreary, of Kentucky, stopped in Washington while on his way home from the east long enough to notify the State department that he accepted his appointment as one of the United States Commissioners to the international monetary conference. Speaking of the conference he said: "Naturally people where I have been have talked of the conference, and, regardless of their political opinions, have spoken of it as a matter of great importance. It is quite evident that there is a very general expectation among the business men of the country that it will prove of value to the country. They appear to feel that if an absolute settlement of the gold and silver standards of currency is not reached by this conference that progress will at least be made towards such a settlement at some time in the near future. The date for the meeting of the conference will not be determined upon until the new British government shall express its pleasure in the matter, which it is expected to do at once."

Post Office Officials expect no trouble forwarding the mails on account of the railroad strikes, as the strikers have never interfered anywhere with the mails; on the contrary, they have in a number of notable instances prevented others interfering with mail trains and have assisted in getting them through on time.

For The Campaign.

The twice-a-week St. Louis Republic will be mailed each Tuesday and Friday, from now until November 30th, 1892, for only forty cents. It is a great semi-weekly paper, and will be indispensable during the campaign. An extra copy will be sent free to November 30th, to the sender of each club of five, with Two Dollars. Send for a package of sample copies and raise a club. Address, The Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

☞ It is rumored that Addison will soon be made headquarters for the Mackinaw road.

UNIVERSALIST MEETINGS.

Rev. Gorton, of Pennsylvania, spoke at the Universalist Church last Sunday morning and evening. His morning subject was "Peace, holiness and seeing God." Text—Hebrews, 12:14.

He held that man can not be at peace with others till he is at peace with himself, and that the enduring foundations of peace are purity, unselfishness, justice and love, and when these principles have universal dominion, war, with all its savagery and barbarism, will be at an end, and universal peace, love, good will, helpfulness and brotherhood will prevail.

[illegible] can not possess these [illegible] absolute holiness, that this is a spiritual quality that can belong only to the spiritual and intelligent soul. He contended that praying, singing, religious exhortation, attendance upon religious meetings and observance of religious ceremonies were not holiness, nor were they evidences of holiness, but, at best, when intelligently and rationally used, only means to the attainment of holiness.

He held that holiness consists in healthiness of the whole man—physical, intellectual and spiritual—and consists in the wholeness, perfectness and complete development of the entire man.

He held that thus we become like God, and thus we see God, by becoming like Him—see him with the illuminated eye of the spirit, and shall never see Him in any other way—and do not have to wait till we die and enter another world to see God, but can see him here and now.

In the evening he spoke on the dignity and divineness of human nature, from Cor. 2:14 and 15:46.

He showed that the word "natural" in the text was an improper translation and should have been translated "animal" and the same word is so translated in some other places in the New Testament. Thus the word relates not at all to the rational soul, but to the physical body, with its appetites, passions, propensities, needs and desires.

He showed that the entire so-called orthodox scheme of doctrine and of salvation rests upon the theory that man is a fallen being—naturally sinful, depraved, lost and ruined—and that if man is not a fallen being, then this "whole scheme" is false and useless and must be abandoned.

He then showed that man is not a fallen being—the race is not fallen, is not naturally sinful and lost, but quite the contrary. All men are created in the image of God—are naturally religious, or naturally capable of religion. Human nature is not only as good and sound and upright as it was at the beginning, and in the first man, but it is better to-day than ever before, because human nature itself is progressive and continually improving. He held that therefore our great need is not conversion but education, development and growth, and that whoever has been rightly educated will never need to be converted, and that right education is of infinitely greater importance than conversion, as that term is generally understood.

Next Sunday Mr. Gorton will preach in the morning on "The narrow way that leadeth to life and the broad way that leadeth to destruction," and in the evening he will preach on "God's love and man's salvation."

Death of Mrs. E. H. Bateman.

Many hearts will sorrow and many eyes dim with tears, when it is known that Mrs. Bateman, the gifted artist, [illegible] character, the lovely and lovable woman, is gone from us to return no more forever. The end, not unexpected for many days, came suddenly yesterday, a few minutes after the noon hour. As she was lifted up to take medicine she leaned forward, gazed longingly out of the window, exclaiming "how beautiful! how beautiful!" and sank back into unconsciousness from which she did not again rally.

Mrs. Bateman had not been in health for a year or more, but her indomitable courage and ambition kept her up and she would not own to herself or her friends that she was ailing. [illegible] has been confined to the house and most of [illegible] and uncomplaining. Her [illegible] complication of heart and lung trouble, of which her father and two sisters have died.

Mrs. Bateman (Elizabeth Kinsley) was born in Chautauqua county, New York, of good parentage. Her grandfather was a revolutionary soldier; a fine portrait of him, done by herself, is in their gallery, and his old war rifle stands beside it. She had the appearance of a woman of 40 but had passed her 50th birthday. Her marriage with Capt. C. T. Bateman took place in Michigan, while both were quite young and while Mr. Bateman was yet in college. In all his subsequent educational work she was his helpmeet, as she has been hers in her busy studio life. She was with him on the tented field and in the hospital and the stories she could tell of camp life would make an interesting volume.

Mr. and Mrs. Bateman came to Toledo from Sturgis, Mich., where Mr. Bateman was superintendent of schools, twelve years ago, since which time they have both been successfully devoted to art teaching and order work. Mrs. Bateman's pupils came from towns far and near and her circle of friends was thus an extended one. She had worked with pencil and brush from her childhood and the crowning success of her life was the praise and commendation she received last summer from eminent critics in the galleries of Paris, where she was privileged to copy from the masters. She came home equipped for her best work and full of enthusiasm; but the weak hand was obliged to lay by the brush and the eyes that sought and knew and loved the beautiful are closed upon it all. What her going away means to the bereaved family, to the home of which she was the life and inspiration, and to hosts of friends all over the country, cannot be said. It is too deep and too sacred for expression. In her art she was reaping the rich reward of years of faithful study and diligent application. The end has come for her, but her influence and her work will live long after the busy, skillful hands and active brain are fallen to dust.

For the bereaved husband the tenderest sympathy is felt. Husband and wife have been comrades and partners in life's labors, as well as congenial companions in marriage. Two children, Walter, of the printing firm of Vrooman & Bateman, and Bret, a lad of 16, yet in school, are left to mourn and miss the tender and affectionate mother. Mrs. Jennie Simmons, of Dundee, Mich., who was with her sister through her illness, a brother in the west, and two brothers in Ionia county, Mich., are the remaining members of a large family.

The funeral services were held at the home, 321 Eleventh street, at 10:30 Tuesday morning, Aug. 9th, 1892, and were beautiful, impressive and comforting. Rev. Dr. Jennings officiated, reading the scripture: "The Lord is my Shepherd," and then, by request, Edwin Arnold's exquisite poem, "He and She." He then gave an appreciative sketch of Mrs. Bateman's life, paying just and high tribute to her ability in both literature and art, and to her social geniality. He mentioned the many times the New Century club and reading circles had met in her pleasant home, and the enjoyment of these occasions was greatly due to her gift of hospitality. It was the tribute of a friend, to which the many dear friends who listened could say heartily, amen and amen.

The casket was covered with flowers and the rooms were sweet with their beauty and perfume. Tenderly the precious dust was carried to its last rest in Woodlawn. Relatives and friends from Detroit, Dundee and Milan, Mich., were present.

Thy busy days are at an end, thy tasks are done—
Thou canst not tell us, gentle friend,
What trophies thou hast won.

The Chicago Fire.

The near approach of the World's Fair awakens increased interest in Chicago and her wonderful history. Today Chicago is probably the finest city in the world architecturally, and all practically built within twenty years. The most thrilling and wonderful chapter in the world's history is the one telling of the great fire and the subsequent rebuilding. It reads like a tale from Fairy Land. The new and magnificent Cyclorama of the Chicago Fire just opened in that city shows in a most surprising manner the city during the great fire, with its thousands of acres of red-hot ruins, thousands more of a surging sea of flame, and countless thousands of panic-stricken people fleeing for their lives, is the most grand, awe-inspiring and realistic scene ever produced by man. The whole effect is greatly intensified by the introduction of novel mechanical and electrical devices, making the whole situation seem like reality. This remarkable exhibition is located upon Michigan Ave., near Madison St., and will remain as a prominent attraction during the World's Fair. Our readers should make a note of this great work and not fail to visit it.

MISS INEZ FITZGERALD.

The art gallery, which is centrally located on Monterey street, is beautifully decorated with the most exquisite specimens of Miss Inez Fitzgerald's work, from the tiniest miniature to the life-size portrait or imperial Cabinet. As an artist this lady possesses the inborn love of all that is beautiful in nature and art, which enables her to produce pictures of genuine artistic worth. The pureness of amber and a life-like expression mark all her portraits, and it is this semi-transparent effect that has made them their splendid reputation, placing Miss Fitzgerald as a leader in the photographic profession. Old pictures are enlarged, copied and re-colored, giving vigor of expression and softness of tone. It will be to the material advantage of the public to call on [illegible] when in need of anything in [illegible] assuming bearing, polite and courteous to all, and possesses a host of friends in Gilroy and vicinity.

We clip the above from the Gilroy, Cal., Gazette, which will interest our readers, as Miss Fitzgerald was formerly a resident of Manchester and Tecumseh where she left many warm friends. A photo of the artist, her studio and her father would be 'right in line.'

The Smith Family.

The Smiths are an industrious and progressive adjunct to the the human race. You will always find them adding to their name, devising means for improvement, and making the world better. Hence the multipicity of the name, and the great numerical strength of the Smith family.

This was added to at the county clerk's office on Thursday evening, when F. A. Smith, of Fayette, was married to Mina Smith, of Morenci, Justice E. J. Smith officiating. At the same time Doc Smith and Ed Smith, the latter from Clinton, were in the building, and should have been called in for witnesses. However, County Treasurer Wiggins and Loss Parsons attached their signatures to the paper announcing that Miss Mina Smith's maiden name had been smashed to Smithereens, and that F. A. was no longer a single Smith.

The matter was done up in fifteen minutes actual time. After 5 o'clock the licence was issued by Deputy County Clerk Gahagen, E. J. Smith had been summoned, established his Smithsonian institute, pronounced them man and wife, kissed the bride, collected his fee, and the bridal couple were on their way to the Wabash depot to take the train home.—Adrian Times.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 25, 1892.

Local and Miscellaneous

Come to town to-day,
And hear the brass bands play.

Miss Bertha Smeltzer is visiting relatives in Toledo and Detroit this week.

H. C. Spaulding, one of Dundee's leading business men, was in town Tuesday.

Lenardson & Son, of Britton, have a new card on the first page this week. Read it.

Rev. J. F. McCulloch, of Adrian College, occupied the Baptist pulpit last Sunday.

The publication of the Council Proceedings is necessarily postponed until next week.

A merry-go-round will be in operation to-day at the south-west corner of Military square.

Mrs. Will Myers, of Illinois, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Heesen this week.

Miss Maude Dove, of East Buffalo, was the guest of Mrs. Horatio Keyser the first of the week.

Rev. James Gorton will occupy the Universalist pulpit again next Sunday. Morning and evening services.

Mrs. Horatio Keyser started Tuesday for Onondaga, Ingham Co., for a week's visit with friends in that place.

The premium list of the Lenawee County Fair is out and contains several new features. The fair will be held five days this year, beginning Sept. 26 and ending Sept. 30th.

David A. Wells will publish in the September Forum an explanation of the Real Meaning of a Tariff for Revenue, in which he sets forth the Democratic doctrine, in a style meant for a scholarly and thorough campaign document.

Chas. E. Pratt, who is now traveling for the Detroit Tribune, was in town Tuesday in the interest of that paper and favored the HERALD with a call. Mr. Pratt is an excellent man for his present position and is doing a good work for the Tribune.

Wm. T. Owen, who has been in feeble health all summer, departed this life on Wednesday of last week. The deceased was 80 years old in June last, and has been a respected resident of this village for over twenty years. The funeral was attended at his residence on Thursday afternoon, when a large concourse of neighbors and friends assembled to pay their respects to the departed.

A jolly company of Toledo society people, five gentlemen and five ladies, arrived in town Saturday noon, with a four-horse team and tally-ho coach, bound for Sand Lake via the overland route. It was the same coach that came through here last summer, but a different party. The party took dinner at the Lilley House and after a rest of a couple of hours, they started for their destination. They remained at Sand Lake over Sunday and returned home on Monday via Adrian.

Harper's Weekly, published August 24th, will contain a complete set of illustrations from photographs of the riots in Tennessee and around Buffalo. There will be also a graphic and entertaining description of Pekin, the capital of China, copiously illustrated. This will be the seventh instalment in the important series "The Capitals of the World." Among many other attractions in the same number there will be an article on "Buffalo Bill in London," with a number of striking illustrations by Frederic Remington.

Dr. Ernest Gamble is spending a few days at home.

Do not fail to attend Anderson & Co's Cloak opening.

Anderson & Co. have a change of card this week.

Miss Nellie Conklin was at home from Toledo over Sunday.

Mrs. Geo. Halsey, of Addison, is visiting friends in Tecumseh.

Dr. L. G. North is building an addition to his dwelling house.

New Dress Goods and Cloaks just opened at Anderson & Co's.

To all the visiting bands who will be with us to-day, thrice welcome.

Vern Hoesen was at home last week ... vacation.

Clarence Conklin is home from Ypsilanti for a two week's vacation.

Miss Florence Hyde is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. E. Russell, at Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Cowley, of Hudson, were visiting friends in the village last week.

Miss Etta Potter, of Saline, was the guest of the Misses Beamish a part of last week.

Mrs. C. T. Cummins, of Chicago, has been spending a few days with her Tecumseh friends.

Miss Metta Carter, of Bryan, Ohio, is the guest of Miss Helen Anderson for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. Andrew Howell, of Detroit, was the guest of Mrs. Geo. S. Tiffany a portion of last week.

Two celestial co-eds and their three big brothers will be Ann Arbor students the coming season.

C. T. Cummins and Tru McKinney, of Chicago, have been spending a few days with Tecumseh friends.

Mrs. Wm. Humphrey and Mrs. T. S. Applegate were calling on Tecumseh friends Monday afternoon.

The HERALD goes to press Wednesday evening this week, so all hands can enjoy the big show to-day.

Geo. Marsden has rented his house on Union Street, to T. D. Rogers, who will take possession next week.

S. W. Anderson and I. S. Osborn got back from Denver last week. They both report a very enjoyable trip.

We are indebted to our friend Wm. Totten for an occasional copy of the Daily Resorter, published at Petoskey.

Mrs. M. A. Hazlett, the gifted speaker of Addison, is preparing to do service for the republican party again under the auspices of the central committee of the State.

On Thursday, Sept. 1st., a grand excursion to Petoskey will run over the Michigan Central road from Jackson, at $5.00 for the round trip. Trains leave at 10:50 a. m.

The Ladies' annual social of the Baptist church will be entertained at the church parlors, next Thursday evening, Sept. 1st. Supper from 5:30 to 7:30. All are cordially invited.

LaMotte Lovett, of Oak Park, Ill., arrived in town Saturday and remained till to-day to visit Zack Cook's and DeWitt Talman's familes and other friends. He is still running a drug store at Oak Park and is doing well.

The excursionists who visited camp at Brighton Sunday from Adrian, were left in Milan on the return, and waited several hours, being obliged to do some judicious telegraphing before they could get home on a freight, which arrived at 2 o'clock Monday morning.

J. A. Foster, one of the old residents of Adrian, attended a union temperance meeting at 5 P. M. Sunday afternoon on Monument Square Park. While sitting on a park bench he suddenly expired without a word. He was the oldest photographer in the city, and about 70 years of age.

A characteristic New England town-meeting will be described by Anna C. Bracket in the September number of Harper's Magazine, who will show that this peculiarly democratic institution bears a distinct "Aryan Mark," and that its origin may be traced to a remote antiquity. The article will be attractively illustrated by A. B. Frost.

We called at the Bresie cottage, at Devils lake, last Sunday and found lots of friends enjoying a fish dinner, Chas. and Grace Spafford, Mrs. Reeves and daughter, of Ann Arbor, Bert Osborn, wife and sister, Misses Hathaway and Kline, of Addison. We would have got left, but Ed. Imerson run the Flora from the Beach to the train in just 20 minutes. The Flora gets there and we enjoyed the trip immensely.

The Homestead Strike will receive in the September number of The North American Review the ample attention which that periodical always gives to important events. It is to be discussed from three points of view: The Congressional view, by Congressman W. C. Oates, Chairman of the Investigating Committee; the constitutional view, by the Hon. George Ticknor Curtis; and the Knight of Labor's view, by T. V. Powderly.

There occasionally comes a time, when the coroner is a bigger man than the sheriff, and the man of mortality may serve papers on the snatcher of live bodies, with impunity. Such an emergency arose last week, when Dr. White, of Clinton, coroner, swooped down upon deputy sheriff Stevens, of Tecumseh, with a service of papers, containing a "Hark, from the tombs!" Adrian Press.

Capt. A. D. Lawrence visited at North Adamg last week.

It requires most of one's time now to attend the picnics.

An eight pound boy arrived at Gus. Rowland's yesterday.

Miss Jennie Smyth, of Chicago, is visiting Nettie Southworth.

Miss Luella Shipman, of Ypsilanti, is visiting Ella Jackson this week.

A new side walk in front of the Opera House is the latest improvement.

Mrs. W. H. Babbitt is visiting relatives this week in Cleveland Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi C. Hayden returned from their wedding trip on Saturday.

Prof. and Mrs. L. M. Kellogg, arrived ... vacation.

Dr. and Mrs. G. D. Perry returned home from their Boston trip last Friday.

Lamont C. Bidwell is continuing his visit in Tecumseh through the present week.

All Leaders of the Michigan and Ohio Bands are requested to be at the meeting at 4 o'clock.

Farmers have begun their fall plowing, and they find the ground very dry in some localities.

J. W. Jackson and V. L. Sanders are busy putting up the new town hall at Devils Lake station.

"Temperance Hall" is the way the signboard reads over George Hodges' wagon shop at Addison.

The water works well is "going down" every day. The indications all favor an abundance of excellent water.

It is said that Britton will soon be blessed with a saloon. Britton is developing into a second Chicago very rapidly.

Rev. H. J. Smith, of St., Clair, has accepted the call to the Baptist Church, and will begin his pastoral labors here Sept. 1st.

George Knapp received a dispatch from Denver Sunday that his children were seriously ill and he started for that city at once.

The Congregational Church, of Hudson, will soon have a new spire to replace the one which the lightning knocked over a few weeks ago.

Morris Conklin and wife of Elmwood Ill., arrived in town Tuesday and wil remain until Monday next. The band reunion brought them out here at this particular time.

The Lady Maccabees of Glen Hive, at Macon, will give a social entertainment on B. H. Pennington's lawn, Wednesday evening, Sept. 7. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

About all Lenawee County will be out of doors to-day. The Farmers' Picnic at Devils Lake and the Band tournament at Tecumseh will both draw crowds.

The W. C. T. U., will hold a Monthly Tea Meeting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Osgood on Saturday afternoon Sept. 3rd instead of Friday; a cordial invitation is extended to all, and please remember the date.

The Reunion of the past and present County officers of Lenawee County will be held at Putnam's Landing Sand Lake next Thursday, Sept. 1st. A good program has been arranged and a fine meeting is anticipated.

A dusky vender of polishing material did the town Tuesday. The next time you want a "fifty cent box" of the same just get three cents worth of common whiting and color it with aniline for a disguise.—Addison Courier.

Private advices show that Co. C boys enjoyed their life in camp first rate, and regretted to be compelled to break up. We shall endeavor to give an outline next week of the daily routine of life in camp.

Mrs. John Crowell and family shipped their goods and left to-day to establish their future home at Glenville, Ohio. Mrs. Crowell and her children leave a large circle of friends who wish them happiness in their new home.

The thirty million dollar gold train stopped for water, at Hudson, last week. Guards patrolled the track on both sides and completely discouraged the Gazette "devil," who had designed to rob the train, get married and ever afterward live like a white man and a gentleman.—Adrian Press.

The official catalogue of the entries and exhibits at the fourth annual International fair and exposition at Detroit, has just been issued in a very attractive form. It is prefaced with historical and descriptive sketches, and contains a guide to places of interest, with a directory to the responsible mercantile houses of the city.

A private letter received Monday from Corporal Scove Walker, written at camp Winans, said: We arrived in camp Wednesday evening, after an all day's ride, tired and hungry, and eat an awful dinner. This is the day after the battle. I was taken prisoner in a cornfield and ordered to be shot at sunrise, but I was not up in time and so missed it.

The obituary mention, printed elsewhere in to-day's paper, of Mrs. C. T. Bateman, will be read with sorrow by many of our patrons. Prof. Bateman was connected with the Tecumseh Schools many years ago, and his talented wife had an extended acquaintance here and in neighboring towns, who will deeply sympathize with him in his bereavement.

A special Excursion train will run to Detroit next Tuesday, over the Lake Shore, for the benefit of the Maccabees.

Frank Bryan returned the first of the week from a lake trip which he enjoyed very much. It consisted of a trip from Detroit to Ashtabula and return with Capt. E. D. Chilson on his freight propeller. She went down loaded with iron ore and returned to Marquette.

Geo. W. Thorp, a son of the late Wm. T. Thorp, died at his home in Eastlake Manistee Co., Mich, on the 18th, inst., of congestion of the lungs. He was 25 years old, and was married. The remains were brought to Tecumseh for final burial, by Ed Prichard. Upon arriving here Saturday morning they were taken in charge by Undertaker ... and buried ... in the cemetery vault. The deceased made many friends during his residence in Tecumseh, who will learn of his untimely death with sincere regret.

—It is poor economy to put off attending a Normal or Collage because of hard times. It would be equally wise to put off planting corn because of the expense of the seed. In gaining an education time lost now is lost forever. The expense of attending some of our excellent higher institutions, such as the Fayette Normal University, of Fayette, O., is now so low that any one may find a way to meet it. Do not wait until another year. Attend now. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

"Dear Father—We are well and happy The baby has grown ever so much, and has a great deal more sense than he used to have. I remain your daughter, Molly."

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Recommended as the Best. IX
LE MARS, Plymouth Co., Ia., May, 1889.
I suffered from temporary sleeplessness from overwork for two years, for which I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and can recommend same as the best medicine for similar troubles.
F. BORNHORST.
SOMERSET, Ohio, Nov. 11, 1890.
My wife was troubled with nervousness, which so affected her mind that I became very much alarmed, as a mental derangement was hereditary. After using Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic one day she could sleep soundly, her lamenting ceased, and I can say that her mental condition is very much improved.
JOSEPH A. FLAUTT.
TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 7, 1890.
I certify that Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic has had a wonderful effect. Prior to using it I had epileptic fits two or three times a day and I have been subject to them for the seven years. MRS. M. GOLDMAN.

RIOTOUS STRIKERS.

They Derail an Erie Passenger Train, But No One Is Hurt.

Numerous Encounters Between Switchmen and Soldiers—Railroads Seem to Have the Advantage—Engineers Will Not Strike.

THE RAILWAY WAR

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The second week of the railroad strike has opened. Three features are most prominent. An army of 5,000 soldiers is quartered in the city and county; an attempt, only partly successful so far, is being made to lift the freight blockade, and the danger of a strike of kindred organizations is no less imminent. [illegible] strikers made another attempt to wreck a train on the Erie Saturday night. The day express, leaving New York at 8 o'clock with four coaches and a parlor car, was the train they selected. The train left Linden on time and was running at a high rate of speed when the locomotive jumped the track and went plowing into the sand. The coupling-pin between the engine and first car broke and saved the train. The cars ran on for nearly a quarter of a mile before the emergency brakes were applied. The locomotive keeled over on its side and was not badly damaged. The fireman and engineer escaped with slight injuries. The passengers were badly frightened, but were not hurt. A locomotive from this city went after the train.

The cause of the wreck was found to be a fish plate, which had been wedged between the main track and the switch in such a manner that the wheels of the locomotive were raised off the tracks. Five suspicious characters were seen loitering at the scene when the train stopped and quickly started away when the trainmen approached. The Erie has offered $1,000 reward for the apprehension of the persons derailing the train.

Numerous encounters occurred at the docks after midnight between the militia and longshoremen. The latter are greatly wrought up over the action of the soldiers in making free use of their bayonets. They threaten to burn the docks and elevators if the militia is not withdrawn.

A lot of strikers attacked the picket guard of the Thirteenth regiment in the Central freight yards shortly after 11 o'clock. They were armed with coupling pins. Capt. Curtis ordered his men to charge on the mob, and the sight of the bayonets drove them away. No one was hurt.

The strikers were encouraged by the complete suspension of work in the elevators. About 1,500 grain shovelers quit work out of sympathy for the switchmen. They had no grievance, being satisfied with the wages paid, and are not employed by the railroads. They went out to complicate the tie-up and embarrass the railroads. The strikers deny that any of their number have offered to return to work, but it is known that seven strikers waited on Superintendent Voorhees and asked to be given their old places. He told them to report to the yardmaster at Erie street.

John A. Nevins, a striker, was caught in the act of throwing a switch when a train was approaching over the Lehigh Valley tracks near Dingen street. In a couple of minutes the engine would have gone through the open switch. He was made prisoner by a soldier, who turned him over to the police, and he was taken to headquarters and locked up.

The improvement in the situation is only slight, but it favors the railroads. Under cover of the protection of soldiers the Central, Lehigh and Erie began to move a little freight. And the perishable freight that could be got in position was started east. The volume was not large, but it was sufficient to give the roads cause for elation and they now assert more positively than ever that the strike is broken and that in a couple of days they will be handling freight with usual dispatch.

On the other hand there appears to be very reasonable grounds for the rumor that the strike will spread to the east and the switchmen from Buffalo to the seaboard will quit work. This is likely to be ordered at any moment, but at the same time it appears unlikely that the firemen will go out. It is quite certain that they will not act hostile at least, and H. Walter Webb is confident that they will not go out at all.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 22.—P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, returned here from a trip to Toronto and Buffalo. Mr. Arthur said that his visit had nothing whatever to do with the strike and that the engineers would not participate in the present trouble. "It is necessary," he remarked, "to communicate with the chief executive of one planning a strike. As yet I have had no communication from any source looking to such an action. The engineers will not come out through sympathy with the switchmen, nor even with the firemen, unless they have any grievance of their own. They go out with their engines. I know of no reason why they should participate in the present trouble."

A Policy of Retaliation Adopted by the United States Government—What the President Has to Say in His Proclamation.

FREE PASSAGE DENIED.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The proclamation suspending the right of free passage through the St. Mary's canal of any and all cargoes or portions of cargoes consigned to Canadian ports was issued Saturday afternoon to go into effect September 1 next. The following is the text of the proclamation:

Whereas, [illegible] and other purposes," it is provided that, with a view of securing reciprocal advantages for the citizens, ports and vessels of the United States on and after this first day of August, 1892, whenever and so often as the president shall be satisfied that [illegible] lock connected with the navigation of the Saint Lawrence river, the great lakes, or the waterways connecting the same of any vessels of the United States, or of cargoes of passengers in transit to any portion of the United States, is prohibited, or is made difficult or burdensome by the imposition of tolls or otherwise, which, in view of the free passage through the St. Mary's Falls canal now permitted to vessels of all nations, he shall deem to be reciprocally unjust and unreasonable, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to suspend by proclamation to that effect, for such time and to such extent—including absolute prohibition—as he shall deem right, the right of free passage through the St. Mary's Falls canal so far as it relates to the vessels owned by the subjects of the government so discriminating against the citizens, ports or vessels of the United States, or to any cargoes, portions of cargoes, or passengers in transit to the ports of the government making such discrimination, whether carried in vessels of the United States or of other nations, in such case and during such suspension tolls shall be levied, collected and paid as follows, to-wit: Upon freight of whatever kind or description, not to exceed two dollars per ton; upon passengers, not to exceed five dollars each, as shall be from time to time determined by the president; provided

1. That no tolls shall be charged or collected upon freight or passengers carried to and landed at Ogdensburg or any port west of Ogdensburg, and south of a line drawn from the northern boundary of the state of New York through the St. Lawrence river, the great lakes and their connecting channels to the northern boundary of the state of Minnesota.

2. All tolls so charged shall be collected under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury, who may require the master of each vessel to furnish a sworn statement of the amount and kind of cargoes, to the number of passengers carried and the destination of the same, and such proof of the actual delivery of such cargo and passengers at some port or place within the limits above named as he shall deem satisfactory, and until such proof is furnished such freight and passengers may be considered to have been landed at the same port or place outside of those limits, and the amounts of tolls which have accrued had they been so delivered, shall constitute a lien which may be enforced against the vessel in default wherever and whenever found in the waters of the United States.

Whereas, The government of the dominion of Canada imposes a toll amounting to about twenty cents per ton on all freight passing through the Welland canal in transit to a port of the United States and levies a further toll on all vessels of the United States, and on all passengers on transit to a port of the United States, all of which tolls are without rebate; and

Whereas, The government of the dominion of Canada, in accordance with an order in council of April 3, 1892, refunds eighteen cents per ton of the twenty-cent toll at the Welland canal on wheat, Indian corn, peas, barley, rye, oats, flaxseed and buckwheat upon condition that they are originally shipped for and carried to Montreal for export, and that, if transhipped at intermediate points, such transhipment is made within the dominion of Canada, but allows no such nor any other rebate on said products, when shipped to a port of the United States or when carried to Montreal for export if transhipped within the United States; and

Whereas, The government of the dominion of Canada by said system of rebate and otherwise discriminates against the citizens of the United States in the use of said Welland canal, in violation of the provisions of article 27 of the treaty of Washington, concluded May 8, 1871; and

Whereas, Said Welland canal is connected with the navigation of the great lakes, and I am satisfied that the passage through it of cargoes in transit to ports of the United States is made difficult and burdensome by said discriminating system of rebate and otherwise, and is reciprocally unjust and reasonable; now, therefore,

I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, by virtue of the power to that end conferred upon me by said act of congress, approved July 26, 1892, do hereby direct that from and after September 1, 1892, until further notice, a toll of twenty cents per ton be levied, collected and paid on all freight of whatever kind or description passing through the St. Mary's Falls canal in transit to any port of the dominion of Canada, whether carried in vessels of the United States or of other nations, and to that extent I do hereby suspend, from and after said date the right of free passage through said St. Mary's Falls canal of any and all cargoes or portions of cargoes in transit to Canadian ports.

In testimony whereof, etc.
By the president:
BENJAMIN HARRISON.
JOHN W. FOSTER, Secretary of State.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 22.—There is intense excitement in official circles over the news received here that President Harrison had imposed the tolls on St. Mary's Falls canal. There were only four ministers in the city. However, the news soon spread through the leading officers of the government, and there is much loud talk indulged in as was a few days ago. It may be that parliament will be summoned to deal with the matter. The commercial men who heard of the matter speak strongly of the action of the dominion government in not removing the rebates on the St. Lawrence canals in the first instance and saving the trouble.

SINGING BY THE WAY.

He sang as the bill the-hearted robin
Sings in a summer day,
Unmindful that any listened
To the music of his lay.
The joy of life and of living
Seemed voiced in the simple strain
That filled the air with such sweetness
As the fields have after rain.

His weary and toil-worn neighbor
Heard, and was glad to hear,
For into his life of labor,
It threw a thrill of cheer.
It lifted his thoughts from sadness,
It charmed away his care,
And the music and its gladness
Brought a blessing, unaware.

We may all be singers, my brothers,
Of songs to help and cheer;
The strain may not be lofty;
There may be few to hear,
But into some life the music
Of the song we sing may fall,
[illegible]
Of sunshine where is chill.

Let the joy of our lives run over
Our lips in a cheerful song,
And the world may have more of sunshine
[illegible] strong.
Sing, for the joy of singing,
And sing your cares away,
And share with others the gladness
That comes to you, day by day.

WITH THE CHINESE.

Tastes of the Inhabitants of the Celestial Empire.

They Have a Fondness for Dishes That Seem Anything But Inviting to an American—Some Queer Dainties.

In passing through Chinese towns the astonishingly large number of cook shops interest and attract the foreign passer-by. One's curiosity is often aroused to know the ingredients of the messes he sees being concocted, but investigation very often ends in some unpleasant disclosure and unless one is possessed of a veritable cast-iron stomach and a nose well hardened to Chinese smells, he had better beware of even a Chinese Delmonico's. These places are unpleasantly pressed upon the pedestrian, however, for the front is invariably open to the street, and in order to tempt customers by the sight and smell of viands the cook prepares his dishes over a charcoal fire in full view and sets samples of his materials and his bill of fare out on a showboard before him. Tables and stools are placed in the rear, and here the hungry wayfarer may banquet off such delicacies as particularly tickle the Chinese palate. Among the common people an ordinary meal consists of boiled rice, coarse greens and a little fat pork, goat's flesh or fish. At the public eating houses dainties out of the ordinary line are to be had, and Chinese cookery is executed with a flourish as it were. All sorts of fish, flesh and fowl, beasts of the sea, air and land are represented in a Chinese menu. The Frenchman is not the only one who has his froglegs and snail soup, for the Celestial, too, revels in these dainties, and many more even more strange. Snakes and eels alike know the fryingpan, and when skinned and dressed appear very much alike. Many varieties of non-poisonous snakes are used for food. Silkworm grubs are regarded as a choice morsel and are stewed in lard and eaten as a relish, and a multitude of other insects are deemed edible. One variety commonly seen in the fish stalls looks like an American locust before it has taken on wings, and a large white grub that inhabits the bamboo sprouts is much sought after in the south. Another variety of edible worm is found at the root of the sugarcane. The cane is generally pulled up, the roots being used for fuel, and the harvesters as they go along pick up these worms and drop them into a little basket which they strap about the waist.

Many Chinese things taste very good, but their food is on the whole, anything but tempting. Their cookery abounds in "made" dishes of complicated construction, highly flavored with spices and herbs, and, on account of the limited use to which the chopsticks can be put, the ingredients are cut up into small pieces. Boiling, stewing and frying are popular methods of preparation, and the cook shops show a variety of nauseating-looking messes whose odors are not to be met with outside of China. The worst I have yet encountered come from the duck eggs that have been kept in wet clay until they are "high," and fermented radishes which bear a strong family resemblance to sauerkraut, and these can best be described by the southern expression—"powerful bad." Although we turn up our noses at John Chinaman's bill of fare, he in turn looks askance at ours and thinks we are disgusting creatures to drink milk and eat cheese, and he cannot be induced to touch butter.

It seems to be the general impression that dogs and cats form staple articles of diet. This is not true. They are eaten to a greater or less extent by the poorer classes only, and vary in popularity according to the district. In the seaports, where animal food is readily obtained, they are not consumed, and in Canton there are only three or four stalls where their flesh is sold, but in country districts many people eat these animals, and rats, also. The Hakkas, a wild hill tribe occupying the mountainous district west of Amoy, go in for cat and dog more largely than any other people and their method of preparing them for culinary purposes is horrible in the extreme. Dog's paws are frequently seen among their meats in the butcher's stalls. Black cats are universally deemed more desirable than white or spotted, and tortoise-shell cats are seldom eaten. A well-known missionary to these people, in relating his experience with these animals, says that his family can always keep a tortoise-shell, while a black cat invariably disappears. Horseflesh is extensively consumed throughout the empire, but is horribly tough, for only old beasts unfit for use are killed for food. Both house rats and a kind of wild rat that inhabits the rice fields are eaten and are hawked about the streets strung up by the tails.

The famous bird's-nest soup is a very rare delicacy and can be afforded only by the rich. It is served as a first course at grand dinners usually. The nests are built by a kind of swallow on high rocks by the seashore, and the material is secreted by glands inside the bird's bill. I think it was Huxley who facetiously remarked that these birds built their nests "all out of their own heads." A native recipe for making the soup reads, with characteristic vagueness, like this: "Take as many nests as are necessary, clean and pick out the feathers, and boil in sufficient water to make a thin jelly. Pour this over hard-boiled pigeons' eggs, and float on the top shreds of ham. Serve sweetened if desired."

The number of edibles in China is legion, and their combinations are simply distracting. The people have a regular intuition for cooking, and every man, woman and child can prepare a good meal out of the most meager supply of materials. Sweetmeats are eaten by young and old, and one can scarcely go anywhere without meeting a vendor of confectionery. Bright yellow cakes of rice and sugar are sold to children at every street corner, and queer tasting bonbons of bean flour, millet seed or popped rice, candied seaweed, melon rind and orange peel are eaten in enormous quantities at New Year's time and other feasts. Every housewife prepares once a year an enormous sweet loaf of buckwheat flour and keeps it on hand to offer visitors with tea. It is as heavy as lead and a villainous compound, and, like the old-fashioned fruit cake of our grandmothers, lasts the year round, and its appearance upon special occasions is inevitable.

Table etiquette such as would please a Chinese host would shock and disgust an American one. Men keep on their hats when eating, and it is quite the "proper caper" to make as much noise as possible in the process of mastication, for the more made the greater is supposed to be the enjoyment experienced. Between courses a basin and towel are passed around, and the guests mop off the face and wash the hands. The more food is consumed the better, for the more the host is honored, and if it seems necessary to refuse a second helping the polite thing to say is: "O, no, I dare not, for I'm afraid you haven't enough." A host in properly exercising his hospitality ust press his guests to eat, and the distressing importunity with which one is urged makes a foreigner feel very uncomfortable.

Because elaborate dinner sets come from China, it must not be supposed that these are used by the natives themselves. They are manufactured for foreign trade only. A native set consists of simply a great number of bowls of different sizes, colors and shapes, chopsticks, and chinaware spoons, about the size of a dessert spoon, with short, curved handles. The chopsticks are of silver, ivory or wood, and are held in the hand much as we would hold a lead pencil. A very slight motion causes their tips to approximate, and pieces of food are easily grasped by them, and they are only used in grasping and shoving, for a Chinaman can no more eat liquids with them than we can eat soup with a fork. The dexterity with which they are used is rashly over-estimated, for food of a semi-solid nature, such as rice, is eaten by placing the bowl to the lips and pushing the contents into the mouth with the sticks, and one viewing a family of the best cultured eating a meal in the most approved fashion thinks it anything but a daint process.

A cup of tea finishes every repast, but it is not such a cup as would satisfy our depraved taste, for the native article is a tiny affair scarcely larger than a thimble. Tea is taken upon all occasions, by both sexes and all classes, and a tea-drinking is a simple yet always formal affair. A native tea set consists of a large pot for water, a smaller one for tea and ever so many tiny handleless cups set in groups of six upon little trays of lacquer or of china. Boiling water is brought in the larger and poured over the tea in the smaller pot and then almost immediately poured off into the cups. The host or hostess then takes a tray in both hands—it would be very impolite to take it in one—and bowing low offers it. The guest selects the very nearest, bows low and receives it in both hands. He must then ask the host to drink with him, and both consume the amber liquid in little sips. In China tea is never drank with milk and sugar, and, though always very strong, never has that "puckery" taste that comes of long boiling. All varieties have a flavor much like our best grades of black tea, for the green tea of commerce is a vile compound not even tolerated on native soil. The real green tea cannot be exported, because it is very liable to undergo fermentation when exposed to the damp sea air. It then turns black, and the substitution for exportation that comes to our market is made by coloring the leaves with Prussian blue and gypsum. None of the exported teas possess their original flavor, for all that are intended for shipping are submitted to an extra drying process at the seaport. This is very injurious, for it drives off much of the flavoring principle and aroma. The "caravan teas" of Russia owe their superiority to having escaped this last port drying, which is so fatal to a fine flavor.—Detroit Free Press.

Why Red Angers an Ox.

The reason why anything of a red color excites and infuriates the ox tribe is because red is the complementary color of green, and the eyes of oxen being long fixed upon the green herbage while feeding, when they espy anything red it impresses their sight with greatly increased intensity. The same effect is doubtless produced upon all grazing animals by a red color, but oxen, being more pugnacious than others, show greater excitement and often attack that which surprises them.—London Answer.

HELD UP AND ROBBED.

Masked Men Capture a Train in Kansas—Wells-Fargo Express Loses Heavily by the Affair.

AUGUSTA, Kan., Aug. 22.—Saturday night the 'Frisco east-bound passenger No. 2, due here at 11:21 p. m., was held up about 2 miles east of town and two valuable safes of the Wells-Fargo express robbed of all the contents by four masked robbers. Before 9 o'clock Sunday morning the outlaws were captured with a part of their booty. As the train slowed up at the Santa Fe crossing about a mile east of Augusta two masked men mounted the locomotive from either side, and covering the engineer and fireman with guns ordered them to stop the train. The train came to a standstill and two members of the robbers' gang who were in hiding uncoupled the express car. As soon as this was done the engineer was compelled to pull out with the car a mile distant from the train.

While two of the highwaymen watched the locomotive crew the others went to the express car door and compelled Messenger Shiff to open the safe, and the robbers ransacked everything, getting between fifteen and twenty packages of money.

The robbery was committed by four farmers living in the vicinity of Douglas, Butler county. Sheriff Nipp was notified, and he soon had Fred Livingston, Ezra Carter, A. A. Bailey and Rollin Moffatt under arrest. It is said there is no doubt about his having the right parties, as masks and considerable money were found with them.

The people are greatly exercised over the matter, as the men are farmers who have hitherto borne excellent reputations.

AFFAIRS AT HOMESTEAD.

More Arrests Will Be Made as a Result of the July Disturbances.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 20.—Secretary Lovejoy, when asked regarding the report that Pinkerton detectives were in Homestead looking for their guns, and that the arrest of the persons known to have them on the day of the riot, will soon begin, a large number of names having been secured, replied that he knew they were looking for their property and that arrests are likely to soon follow. A government employe whose duty it is to inspect the steel made by the Carnegie Company for Uncle Sam's warships was asked: "What kind of material are the men now working in the mill turning out?" "First class," was the reply. "The work being done is perfectly satisfactory, and very little of it has failed to pass inspection."

American Consul Arrested.

CURACOA, W. I., Aug. 20.—Affairs are rapidly coming to a crisis in Venezuela, and in a few days the question will be decided as to whether or not Crespo shall enter Caracas and take charge of the government. Gen. Ybarra, who is in command of the military forces in the capital, is planting heavy batteries at strategic points, and is making every possible effort to organize the local defenses. The American consular agent at Carupano, Senor Crissini, has been arrested and sent to jail by Monago's men.

Declared Insane.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 19.—Henry Blackman, the convict who recently murdered Contractor Cuddy, has been officially declared insane and will be sent at once to the Ionia insane asylum. He said he felt sorry and he could not tell why or how he came to kill Cuddy. He declared he had not premeditated the deed and that he had no intention of killing him. He said he had been more or less out of his mind at times for months. He had nothing against Cuddy and had never threatened to kill him.

Murderer Evans Hanged.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 20.—Charles Evans, the murderer of Sheriff W. H. Cook, of St. Tammany parish, was hanged at Covington Friday in the presence of a crowd of 1,500 people.

Have Signed the Scale.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 22.—The Amalgamated association and the iron manufacturers have agreed upon a scale, and over 10,000 men in the valley will return to work at once.

Three Hundred Houses Burned.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 19.—A fire Wednesday night in the town of Serdovsk, Russia, government of Saratov, destroyed 300 houses and made 2,500 persons homeless.

A MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical and nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and a fine book, containing many marvellous cures, free at Baker & Hall's, who also sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart Cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures fluttering, short breath, etc.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., AUG. 25, 1892.

School begins one week from Monday.

John Hause was in Jackson over Sunday.

Will Richmond went to Buffalo last Tuesday.

Dr. G. W. Kishpaugh, of Holloway, was in town Saturday.

David Haggart, Sr., shot a bear in his yard one day last week.

Mrs. Susan Fisher and family go to Ann Arbor Wednesday.

Chick's corner closed this week.

The Clinton Band attended the picnic at Manchester last Thursday.

Mrs. William Hardcastle, of Evans Lake, died Monday of apoplexy.

We understand that Prof. Daniels has rented D. M. Bainbridge's house.

Miss Lou McDermott is home from Detroit for a four week's vacation.

Mrs. Geo. Lewis, of South Bend, is visiting her father and sister here.

Albert Kishpaugh's house will be ready for occupancy in a short time.

Ella Morey leaves here this week for Baraboo, Wis. for an indefinite stay.

W. T. Eccles and wife were at Wamplers Lake from Friday until Sunday.

Mrs. A. W. Stalker's father came over from Ann Arbor last Saturday, to spend a few days.

Manager Bowen, of the C. T. line was in town Tuesday making needed improvements.

E. T. VanDeMark left here Monday for Angola, Ind. From there he will go to Chicago.

The regular meeting of the Eastern Star Chapter will occur on Wednesday evening, Aug. 31st.

Al. Rowland, of Caro, was at F. D. Lancaster's Sunday. He has resumed work for J. F. Hicks.

Mrs. A. B. VanDeMark entertained a large number of friends last Saturday, in honor of Lizzie Roff.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kies have returned to Clinton after a three week's stay at the Sand Lake cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Randall returned Saturday from a ten day's visit with friends in Saginaw and Oscoda.

Dr. H. H. Brown, of Lyons, was in town the last of the week. He expresses his intention of locating in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cummins, of Chicago, have been the guests of Mrs. Geo. Kies, at Sand Lake for a few days.

Hiram Saxton is up in Tuscola county in the interest of the apple business. Geo. VanDeison expects to go in a few days.

A. C. Huntington's house is nearly finished and is a very handsome place, making a great improvement on church street.

Work was commenced Monday on the bridge west of the factory. People living west of town have to go around by Chas. Clark's bridge.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wood is visiting her brother, A. G. Burton, this week. She is on her way to her home in Chicago, having spent the last four months in Europe.

Miss Laura Clark went to Ann Arbor last Tuesday to see her friend Mrs. M. S. D. Story, who has been very sick for some time. Mrs. Story died Friday, Aug. 19th.

Bertha Semark, eldest daughter of Horace Semark, is very sick with typhoid fever. She has been unconscious for nearly two weeks. Dr. Tuttle is attending her.

E. R. Smith was nominated for presidential elector from the 2d. dist., at the Democratic convention at Grand Rapids last week. An unprecedented honor for Clinton, and one which Mr. Smith carries bravely.

The ball game between Britton and Clinton, on the home ground last Saturday, was not the exciting affair that it promised to be. Britton was evidently sadly out of practice, while our boys got away with them to the tune of 24 to 7.

Bird Hogan, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hogan, died Monday, Aug. 22nd., aged 10 years. The little fellow has been a great sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism for a long time, but lately it was thought he was getting much better, until a few days ago when heart trouble developed which caused his death. The funeral was held at the house on Wednesday at two o'clock.

J. B. Hause attended the funeral of Michael Duane's mother last Monday. Mrs. Duane died quite suddenly on Friday evening. Her son had been milking, and not seeing her when he came into the house, he called and heard a faint reply. Following the sound he found her down cellar where she had fallen and was unable to rise. He carried her up-stairs and laid her on a bed and she soon after fell asleep. She seemed to be in no pain and continued to breathe regularly until 11 p.m. when she died. She was 80 years of age.

Died, Sunday, Aug. 21st, at one o'clock, a. m., Della Lane, aged 21 years, of typhoid fever and diabetes. Her death was a great shock to nearly every one, as it was not generally known that she was seriously ill until the day before her death, her sickness being of such short duration. She left the mill about three weeks ago, hoping that a short rest would benefit her, but she grew worse instead of better, tho' keeping around as usual until a week ago Sunday, since which time she was confined to her bed. Saturday last she began to sink rapidly and it was known that she could live but a few hours. The way in which she met death told more plainly than words can do the strong hope she held and that the profession of faith she had made for the last few years was not such in name only, but the outcome of a faithful, consistent Christian life. The funeral services were held at the M. E. Church Tuesday at 4 o'clock, both the Epworth League and Sunday School attending in a body. The bearers were Mrs. Carrie Reeves, Mrs. Aggie Haggart, Mrs. Ella Niblack, Misses Lizzie Dillingham, Edna Ferguson and Nellie Martin.

In Memoriam.

On Sunday, the 21st day of August, 1892, death removed from this earthly existence Miss Della Lane, a member and also the treasurer of the Clinton M. E. Sabbath School. Therefore the Sabbath School regards it fitting and proper to adopt the following resolutions:

Whereas, It has pleased God to call to Himself Miss Della Lane, one of our most estimable and beloved members, Therefore,

RESOLVED, That by her death the Sabbath School has sustained a loss that words fail to express, and that we mourn the departure of one from our midst whose qualities as a friend and a Christian won our admiration and love.

RESOLVED, That we deem the life of the departed full of valuable lessons and worthy of imitation in its devotion [illegible]

[illegible] that the virtues of our friend will continue as active factors in the lives of [illegible] keep fresh and green her memory, even though her presence in body is with us no more.

RESOLVED, That we tender to the bereaved family in this hour of affliction our most heartfelt sympathy and our condolence and pray the Almighty to be very near to them in this hour of their great trial.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be published in the Clinton Local and Tecumseh papers, and that a copy thereof be placed in the hands of the bereaved family and that they be entered upon the records of this Sabbath School.

RESOLVED, That as a final tribute and token of love and respect, the Sabbath School attend the funeral in a body.

G. BLATCHFORD,
MRS. A. W. STALKER.
Committee.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to friends who kindly assisted at the burial of our father.

Detroit Exposition Notes.

There can be no question of the success of the live-stock show at the Detroit International Fair and Exposition, the unique arrangement of Secretary Sotham meeting with the most pronounced approbation. The new amphitheatre, which was built expressly for the live stock exhibits, has been provided with an unrivalled list of attraction, so as to hold all classes of people interested the entire fortnight, and impressing the live stock exhibit conspicuously on the attention of thousands of people who would not otherwise notice it. In this plan Secretary Sotham has scored another new departure from old time methods, and thereupon has in still another way guaranteed the Detroit Exposition as excelling all contemporaries, and being in the truest sense the American Live Stock Show. The interest shown by Canadians, and the extensive entries made by them, make it truly an International Fair.

In 1891 the Association added to its many attractions that of racing, and invested a large amount of capital in erecting a commodious grand stand and stables for race horses. $10,000 was given in purses for trotters, pacers and runners to compete for, and every class was well filled. The contests were close and exciting and the time fast, giving the track the reputation of being one of the fastest and best half-mile tracks in the country. The management, in view of its success of last year, takes pleasure in announcing to horsemen its programme for the race meeting to be held during the Exposition, August 23d to September 2d, 1892. $10,000 in purses and stakes will be given for trotters, pacers and runners, and the entrance fee only five per cent, straight, nothing additional for winners. Horses can also compete for the $1,400 in premiums to be awarded to standard bred trotters. Especial attention is called to the "Handicap trot or pace 2 1-2 mile dash." Entries for standard and class races close August 18th, and for running races Saturday, August 20th.

The working exhibits in the main building are now fully arranged for and they will constitute one of the most attractive portions of the whole exposition. The most interesting of all is probably the electrical exhibit occupying space 16 by 160 feet and showing a great variety of electrical appliances with a large number of electrical machines in motion.

Another exhibit of very great interest is the printing and binding exhibit of Winn & Hammond, who will run printing presses and show all the machine and hand processes necessary for binding books. In the space occupied by them a daily paper will be printed and distributed gratuitously.

The Detroit Boat and Oar Co. of Detroit have taken a similar amount of space and will employ 2 men in the construction of a steam launch, small boats and [illegible] oars.

The McAlpine Shoe Co. of Detroit will show the process of making high grade shoes, with the most improved machinery.

In addition to these large establishments there are 25 smaller manufactories, including the making and sticking of pins, brush making by machinery, basket making, broom making, saw making and fine scroll sawing, candy making, glass blowing, cigar making, the printing of music, the repairing of [illegible], the weaving of wire cloth, the making of ornamental pottery, of pants, cigars, pianos, harness and others.

The exhibits in the woman's department also far surpass in numbers and interest those at any previous exposition.

Penelope—Why?

THE G. A. R. PICNIC.

The third annual reunion and picnic of the Lenawee county G. A. R. Association, held at Devils Lake Thursday, Aug. 18th, was largely attended. About one hundred attended from Tecumseh, going on the regular morning train on the C. J. & M., and returning about 5 o'clock p. m. on a special which had been engaged. Large delegations were present from Adrian, Morenci, Hudson, Clayton, Addison and other parts of the county.

At 10:30 a. m., the president, J. H. Underwood, called the association to order, at the speaker's stand in Beardsell's grove. The S. of V. Band of Morenci, [illegible] excellent music, after [illegible] was responded to by [illegible] mander B. F. Graves, of Adrian.

After some routine business an adjournment was taken for dinner. This was one of the most pleasant features of the day, the old vets entering into the spirit of the occasion with all the vim and earnestness of camp life.

After dinner the first business was the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Pres.—A. P. Coddington, Tecumseh.
V. P.—Mrs. K. A. Burtram, Addison.
Sec.—J. B. Kessler, Clayton.
Treas.—Mrs. Harriet Salsbury, Adrian.

Then followed the reports from the various posts, corps and camps. These reports show the order in a very prosperous condition in the county, all reporting good attendance at the meetings and much interest on the part of the members.

The general program was a very excellent one of which we have no space to particularize. The addresses of Hon. J. D. Shull and B. F. Graves, the music by S. of V. band of Morenci, and the songs of the Addison Glee Club are worthy of special mention. Unfortunately a portion of the program had to be omitted on account of the near approach of train time. On the whole, it was pronounced by all as one of the best and most enjoyable reunions yet held by the association.

THE FAMOUS REED SISTERS.

One of the distinguishing features of the Ringling Bros. World's Greatest Shows, which will be seen in all their unapproachable completeness at Adrian, Saturday, Aug. 27, is the notable equestrain act performed by the world-famous Reed Sisters, two petite and handsome young horsewomen, whose surprising accomplishments have made them the idols of the principal European capitals during the past three years. No other lady riders have ever won encomiums such as have been literally showered on these graceful and talented young artists. Even their professional rivals accord them the palm of superiority. In their particular line they are superb and unapproachable, and they command the enormous salary of $800 per week. No prettier picture could be conceived than these two young girls, both endowed by nature with rare beauty of face and form, dancing and pirouetting upon horseback with the same grace and abandon as a premire behind the footlights of the mimic stage; or, one above the other, in a living pyramid, defying the laws of gravity and of centrifugal force. The furore they invariably create is in itself something never to be forgotten. The Reed Sisters are however, only one of a myriad features in this colossal, tented exposition, which in its entirety is without a rival.

ESTATE OF LUCY WALKER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 23d day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Lucy Walker, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of William H. Smith, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate with the will annexed, may be granted to Robert C. Rogers, or some other suitable person, the executor named in said will having deceased this life.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 19th day of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

(A True Copy.)
RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

L. C. Hoagland and wife entertained their friends at their farm-house last Tuesday evening. All had a very pleasant time and not till the clock warned them of the lateness of the hour did they take their way to their separate homes.

Jimmie Shay, while coming from Lewis' mill last Friday night with a load of lumber, was crossing the bridge at Pocklington's, when it gave way, precipitating team, lumber and all in the little Macon. Luckily no serious damage was done, other than the laming of one horse for a few days and the cutting of the harness, which was necessary in order to free the horses. Macon better look after her bridges as well as Ridgeway her saloon, eh?

Last Thursday morning death took from our midst and from the family of our friend, C. B. Tripp, his beloved wife, who leaves her husband and two little girls, aged 13 and 8 years. The funeral took place at the house Sunday morning, at 10:30 o'clock, Revs. E. W. Borden and F. G. Strickland officiating. To the stricken father and husband and little children we extend our heartfelt sympathy, and when death shall call them may they meet again the dear mother who preceded them to that brighter land that lies beyond the grave.

Mrs. Nellie Tripp was born at Newark, N. J., July 29th, 1859. She died Aug. 25th, 1892, after an illness of nearly two years. All of her suffering was endured patiently. She died peacefully, for although she manifested much anxiety for her family, desiring to live for them, yet she was reconciled to die, feeling that Jesus was her Saviour. She leaves a husband, two daughters, Jennie and Bertha, aged 8 and 13 years respectively, a father, stepmother, three brothers and three sisters. The funeral services were held August 28th, at the house. The discourse was delivered by Rev. Borden of Britton.

CARD OF THANKS.

I desire to extend my heartfelt thanks to those who so kindly assisted and sympathized with me in my recent bereavement. C. B. TRIPP.

FAMILY REUNION.

Saturday afternoon, August 21st, the pleasant country home of Charles Kniffin was the scene of a very enjoyable gathering. The occasion was the second annual reunion of the Hoagland family. There were nearly eighty guests present—children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren of John and Wilhelmina Hoagland. A large canopy covered the front yard, serving as a protection from the sun

After an hour spent in social conversation and mirth by the young people, and the recalling of the joys and hardships of early pioneer life by the older and wiser ones, the meeting was called to order by the president, T. V. Hoagland. The program was opened by an appropriate quartette, given by the older members of Chas. Kniffin's family, followed by Scripture reading and prayer. The exercises consisted of music, recitations, readings, and a history of the Hoagland family by Mrs. O. L. Vreeland, of St. Johns This last proved to be one of the most entertaining features of the day, bringing back the past vividly to the memory of the older ones, and filling their eyes with tears at the thought of loved ones gone before. After the closing song and selection of officers refreshments were served in abundance on the lawn. All apparently enjoyed them, judging by the gaiety which prevailed at the time. The good-byes were soon said and the party adjourned to meet at the home of Mrs. Louisa Hoagland, for the celebration of their third reunion.

A Prompt Payment.

We clip the following from the Eastlake Weekly Herald of Aug. 26th:

Mrs. G. W. Thorp, whose husband died Wednesday morning, the 17th, received a check Saturday, the 20th, just three days after his death, for $2,000. This is the quickest payment of a beneficiary after death on record. Tally one for the promptness of the K. O. T. M.

At a special meeting of Linton Tent No. 17, K. O. T. M., held on the 23rd day of August, 1892, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, to again enter our Tent and suddenly take from our ranks our well-beloved brother, Sir Knight George W. Thorp, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the wife has lost a kind and loving husband, and this Tent laments the loss of a brother who was ever ready to extend the hand of aid and the voice of sympathy to the needy and distressed of the fraternity; and

RESOLVED, That we, the members of Linton Tent No. 17, K. O. T. M., extend to the bereaved widow and sorrowing relatives our heartfelt sympathy in this, their irreparable loss; and be it further

RESOLVED, That our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that these resolutions be spread at length upon the records of this Tent, that a copy of the same be sent to the widow and that they be published in the Michigan Maccabee, and appear in the daily and weekly papers of Manistee.

Gen. Bidwell, the Prohibition Candidate for President, has made public his letter of acceptance. The letter is quite lengthy; the labor and tariff questions being very lightly touched upon.

The latest story about Mr. Blaine is that he is going abroad to take massage treatment. The hard rubbing he has got from his party hasn't done him any good.

The New York Supreme Court has rendered a decision that will be of interest to bicyclists. In passing on the highway, bicycles must keep to the right, the same as other vehicles.

Cleveland redeemed more bonds than Harrison, yet Cleveland's average annual expenditures were only $[illegible],000,000, while Harrison's annual average is $449,453,000. It is no wonder that he is perpetually scraping the bottom of the Treasury.

The New York World says: Why should it be thought surprising or a matter for special congratulation that English manufacturers occasionally establish a factory in this country? The privilege of taxing a whole nation is calculated to draw.

McKinley has been "taken" away from the West and sent down East to talk high tariff to the people who profit by it. Doubtless the reports of his speeches in that section will be more frequently punctuated with "applause" than they were when delivered from the mortgaged stumps of Nebraska.

John T. Rich is busy fighting the south now. Allen B. Morse did his fighting when it incurred some danger. And when the war was over he returned to his native state and has since that time devoted his energy and ability to building up the country he had risked so much to save.—Grayling Democrat.

The Republican press are making much ado about Roger Q. Mills' remark "I shall never help to make a law which stands in the way of free trade," and yet it isn't so very different from President Garfield's remark: "I am fully persuaded that every revision of the tariff should be in the direction of free trade."

The Memphis Appeal thus states the case from a Southern standpoint: There is no use conquetting with the devil. With a force bill killed and a tariff for revenue only adopted, the distress of the country will disappear. The Southern farmer will be able to recoup his losses. He will pay about one-half for the necessaries of life that he pays now, and his pocketbook will have a chance to grow fat again.

The advocates of McKinleyism may say that it is all the fault of the workingmen; that they ought to be contented and happy and show an appreciation of their blessings; that they ought not to strike against reduction of wages or fret because the protected leaders of republicanism prefer to hire cheap convict labor. But we are confronted with a condition, not a theory. And if the present condition is that of the McKinley pardaise, how is it any better than the worst predictions of what would follow "free trade?"—Boston Post.

It is not unusual to hear it asserted that protection means higher prices to the farmer, to the mechanic and to the manufacturer. In the same breath it is asserted that the cost of living is not increased. How can this be? If protection increases the price of the farmer's products and of the manufacturer's products, why is it that the cost of living is not increased? If protection causes wheat, potatoes, butter and eggs to bring higher prices, does it not cost more for the laboring man to live? Possibly the high tariff prophets assume that the cost of living is not increased because he and his family eat less when prices advance. This may be the explanation, but it is not a satisfactory one.

POCKET CUTLERY INDUSTRY.

The Pride of Protectionists—Both the Manufacturers and the Employes are Foreigners—Libel [illegible]—How the Trust Has Misrepresentation—How the Trust Has Raised Prices and Robbed the Americans of $500,000—The Precious Little That Labor Gets.

Perhaps there is no industry of much importance that shows the stimulating effects of McKinleyism more than the manufacture of pocket cutlery, and there is no industry to which the protectionists can and do point with more pride. The act of 1890 increased the duty from 50 per cent. to from 70 to over 100 per cent. It is now the claim of protectionists—and it is being heralded far and wide—that this industry, [illegible] wages have been increased 10 per cent. in three of the twenty-four factories of this country. Prices of [illegible] have also been advanced, but this a secondary matter with protectionists, the essential idea being to start new industries here, or to assist old ones by cutting off foreign competition. If ever pays our government to propagate artificially any industry this is probably such an industry, and yet let us analyze a little the cost to the nation of such an investment and see who are benefited by it.

The pocket cutlery, like many other industries, was established in this country during the "free trade" period from 1840 to 1860. At that time more than half of the employes were Americans. Since it became highly protected and began to rely upon governmental aid, rather than meritorious goods for success, the industry has been unsteady, and since about 1870 has had the blues, just as a man who is in the habit of taking stimulants to keep up his spirits will have when he is unable to obtain the ever larger doses which his unnatural appetite craves. Wages have been reduced often in this industry, and only four or five years ago reductions of about 20 per cent. were made in most of the shops. Partly because they were driven out by the English and German workmen who were imported to keep wages down, the skilled American workmen have left this business, until to-day out of 1,400 or 1,500 workers in the twenty-four establishments (most small ones) which make pocket cutlery, about 1,100 are English, 200 are German and 100 or 150 are Americans—the latter being mostly boys and girls not doing skilled work and earning only from fifty cents to a dollar per day. The Americans have but little prospects of bettering their condition, for the foreigners now have a monopoly of this industry, by means of their unions—Spring Knife Makers' union, subdivided into forgers, and grinders and finishers unions. Their rules practically prohibit any but English and German from entering any except the unskilled departments. The foreigners are mostly from the Sheffield district in England and are undesirable as immigrants—most of them, it is said, can neither read nor write.

As to the manufacturers they are also largely English, who advocate plenty of protection and who have shown themselves willing to pay for it. In conjunction with the table cutlery manufacturers, they kept two men at Washington much of the time for three or four years previous to the passage of the McKinley tariff act. Their share of this expense was $7,000. They now keep a man at the custom house to prevent undervaluations and fraud. Having secured all they expected at Washington they immediately set to work to get back the money which they had invested there. Their association held weekly meetings to arrange prices and made their first general advance in October, almost before the McKinley act had taken effect. They had paid for their share of this tariff act and saw no reason for denying their proprietorship in it. Hence some of them boldly announced that because of the McKinley bill they had advanced prices from 10 to 15 per cent. In January, 1891, a second general advance was made. This caused such a howl from dealers and the public that the manufacturers ceased to send out circulars advancing prices all along the line at once, and instead have held monthly meetings and made advances by private price lists to individual dealers. These lists appear regularly, the last being on August 6, 1892. One month they will inform a dealer that "they are compelled to make the following changes in prices." The "changes" usually amount to from 10 to 12 per cent. advance on about a dozen styles. The next month a dozen other styles will receive the same treatment. Large dealers say that the advance since September, 1890, amounts to fully 30 per cent. on the total of all knives sold. Here are a few samples of prices of knives sold by the Ulster Knife Co., of Ellenville, N. Y.:

Description.	Price per Dozen
	As to 1890	Aug. 1892
Cheap knife 2 blades	$[illegible]	$2 75 @ [illegible]
Ch. 40 knife 2 blades	2 [illegible]	3 00 @ [illegible]
Pocket knife 3 blade	3 75	5 00 @ [illegible]
Knife 3 blades	[illegible]	[illegible] @ [illegible]
Knife 4 blades	5 [illegible]	7 00 @ [illegible]
Knife 4 blades	7 75	9 75 @ [illegible]
Knife 3 blades	[illegible]	12 50 @ [illegible]

On leading styles the advance always exceeds 20 per cent. and in some cases reaches 60 per cent. The advances are likely to continue until knives begin to be imported in large quantities. On many styles the duty was increased from 50 to 100 per cent., but on some styles the tariff limit has already been reached, that is, a small three-bladed knife, that used to be imported at a cost of $2.25 a dozen and sold at 25 cents each on the street, now costs $2.80 to $2.90 here and sells for 35 cents on the street, and from 35 to 50 cents in stores. On another style, which used to cost $1.80 the duty (100 per cent.) is prohibitive; but the blades and handles are imported separately and the knife is sold here for $2.25. Thus imports have already checked the advance on some styles.

The manufacturers' association is practically a trust so far as regulating prices, demanding high protective duties, and keeping down wages are concerned. Many of the larger manufacturers, however, have been in favor of a much stronger organization, capable of regulating production and of sustaining high prices and profits. A few months ago four of the largest firms agreed to [illegible] the United States Cutlery Co., with a capital of $1,600,000. Their prospectus said: "The business of these companies (manufacturing 65 per cent. of all the pocket cutlery made here) has steadily increased year by year, and the net profits of these companies for a period of over three years are largely in excess of the sum necessary to have paid 8 per cent. dividends upon $800,000 preferred stock." It is also claimed that the new company could pay dividends of 8 per cent. on $800,000 and 15 per cent. on the other $800,000.

[illegible] the [illegible] committee, the combined investment of these four companies was only $400,000. The manufacturers then put on long faces and tried to make the committee believe that the pocket cutlery industry was about to expire under a 50 per cent. duty. It now appears that they were making "largely in excess" of 16 per cent. upon their actual capital ($400,000) and that they are now in shape to make 46 per cent. on this same amount. They add in their prospectus that "prices upon cutlery have never yet reached those which could have been asked by the increased rate of tariff." That their claims are not extravagant is evident from the announcement in the House Furnishing Goods Weekly of August 4, 1892, that "the Southington Cutlery Co., of Southington, Conn., has declared a quarterly dividend of 8 per cent." It is clear that the increased duty was obtained under false pretenses, if not by actual fraud. And these are the class of men who reap the benefits of McKinleyism.

Notice, now, how these spoils are divided between the manufacturers and their employes. The republican press points with pride to three companies—the Canastota Knife Co., the New York Knife Co. and the Thomaston Knife Co., employing altogether about 400 hands—that have advanced wages about 10 per cent. It is true that since 1890 about three-fourths of the employes in these factories have obtained advances that will average between 7 and 10 per cent. These advances have been secured only because the employes were organized and struck, or threatened to strike, for higher wages. Strikes are now on in three other factories. But suppose that all of these 400 employes have had their wages advanced 10 per cent., and that they earn an average of $500 each a year, (the actual average is much less), their total benefit from the new tariff (admitting that it made the advance possible) would thus be less than $24,000. The yearly product of all the factories is worth from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000. The 30 per cent. advance in prices, then, increases the profits of the manufacturers about $500,000. That is, the manufacturers have retained 95 per cent. of the spoils and grudgingly yielded up 5 per cent. to the wage-earners.

The American user of pocket knives has taken $500,000 out of one pocket and made it a present to these foreigners for the privilege of carrying an "American knife" in another pocket. And this in addition to a similar amount bestowed upon the same foreigner under the 50 per cent. duty prior to 1890. If this be the best that McKinley can do for us, it is time we were finding it out—it will be money in our pockets some day.

BEAUTIES OF THE TARIFF.

Sewing Machines Can Be Purchased in London of the New York Manufacturers Cheaper Than They Can Be Purchased at Home.

Here is a new way for Americans to circumvent the McKinley bill so that they may participate in the blessings (relative) that this measure showers upon foreigners. It is well known that hundreds of American made goods, such as agricultural implements, sewing machines, table cutlery, saws, typewriters, cartridges, etc., are sold cheaper to foreigners than to Americans. The manufacturers here form a trust or have a monopoly and they fix prices to make as much profit as possible by taking advantage of tariffs which prevent foreign competition. Now when, as often happens, they can afford to sell in the unprotected markets of the world they lower their prices for export to this point and rely upon the tariff laws to prevent Americans from getting the benefit of these lower prices by reimporting the goods. Up to date the manufacturers have had uniform success, but their scheme has recently received a severe shock, and unless they change their methods somewhat, Americans may, in some cases, be cursed by prices as low as those which disgrace Europe.

An American lady of moderate means was visiting relatives in Europe this summer. She had heard that American sewing machines were sold cheaper there than here and she concluded to bring one back with her if she could escape the duty on it and save enough, after paying freight, to pay her for the trouble of carrying it. She saw the foreign agent of the machine she wished and found that she could save about 20 per cent. by purchasing there, and that she could escape the duty by calling herself a seamstress. She was arranging with the agent when he suggested that as she was going to New York, where he got the machines, it would save trouble and expense all round if she would accept his order on the New York house for a machine—which she could have at export prices—though she need not export it or take any false oaths in regard to it. The plan worked successfully and is likely to be repeated and extended to typewriters and other articles if the manufacturers do not put a stop to these anti-McKinley demonstrations of their foreign agents.

—And, sir, it was Colbert who defined the art of taxation "to consist in so plucking the goose as to get the largest amount of feathers with the least possible amount of squawking." Now, in the history of economic discussion has there been an apter or a more complete definition of a protective tariff?—Wm. L. Wilson, on the Mills Bill.

Purify The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is hereditted and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, vitalizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

Cause of the Russian Famine.

The common saying, "If it had been a snake it would have bitten him," could hardly be better applied than to the failure of W. E. Edgar, in his article on "Russia's Land System; The Cause of the Famine," published in the July Forum, to discover the real cause of suffering among the Russian peasantry. Doubtless shiftlessness has had something to do with the famine; ignorance of improved methods of production has had something to do with it; the money lenders, the petty officials, and the small traders, all have had something to do with it. But these are effects of an anterior cause, and so far as they themselves are causes at all, they are secondary and [illegible] the cause of famine, perhaps, [illegible] man who, with the aid of telegraphs, cables, railroads, steamer lines, commerce, and banking, thought it necessary to load a special ship with a special consignment of food for transportation from America to Russia, in order to relieve the Russian peasantry, should look no deeper than the outward appearance of things for an explanation of the famine, and wholly ignore its great fundamental cause, though in Russia the cause lies nearer to the surface than in any other country, Ireland, perhaps, excepted. Mr. Edgar really touches upon and describes this cause, but with no more consciousness of its significance than a plow-horse has of the relation of the implement he draws through the soil in spring to the corn he eats in winter.

Mr. Edwards notices the existence in Russia of "lords of the land," possessing individually thousands upon thousands of acres; but from that pregnant fact he draws no other inference regarding the famine than that it is largely due to the habit of these "lords of the land," since the abolition of serfdom, of living in cities and towns far away from their estates, and forgetful of the interests of their child-like peasantry. And now that "the lord of the land has returned to his former serfs and interested himself in their welfare," Mr. Edgar supposes that, admonished by the long black winter of starvation now about to end, each class will in future appreciate "each other's value." But he fears that if "the peasant's welfare should be again neglected by his tradltional protector, his prospects for the future are dark indeed."

How an intelligent man could thus come face to face with the relations of the landowning to the peasant classes of Russia without asking himself in what way the lord of the land is valuable to the peasantry, and by what token he is able to be their protector, passes all comprehension. Granted that the peasant is shiftless; so is the lord of the land. Granted that the peasant is ignorant of improved methods of production; so is the lord of the land. Granted that the peasant is extravagant and wasteful; the lord of the land is more so. But the peasant, though he works, famishes for want of what work produces; while the lord of the land, without working, lives in luxury upon the fruits of work. If the peasant were not plundered by the lord of the land, what power would the lord of the land have to relieve him? Sixteen-string Jack stole guineas before he distributed shillings.

How can idleness relieve industry unless it first robs industry? That is a question which Mr. Edgar has never put to himself, or he would have seen in this "lord of the land," whose pity for famishing serfs has so deeply touched him, the real underlying cause of the Russian famine.—The Standard.

Source of Stable Fortunes.

The Real Estate Record and Guide has been investigating the sources of American fortunes, and though its conclusion can not be particularly pleasing to millionaires who fondly regard themselves as "self-made," a very interesting article is the result. The writer observes that under the feudal system land was at first the sole and later the chief source of wealth, and down to the latter part of the last century the only permanent form. Since that time large European fortunes can be traced to land, which retains its importance though agricultural land has largely given place to urban and suburban; but banking, manufacturing and trading have also furnished foundations for great fortunes.

Trading has never been very important, however, except in cases in which the trader has been able to secure for his business the characteristics of a monopoly, like that of the great brewers. In this country the writer finds that circumstances have peculiarly favored monopolies of just that character. Very few fortunes have been made here in the ordinary channels of trade. Though the foundations may have been laid in mercantile business, the "founder, fortunately for himself and his heirs, invested his profits in city real estate, and then reaped a rich harvest as the city grew." The fortunes of our railway millionaire, the writer adds, are essentially of a monopolistic origin, and most bankers' fortunes have been made as intermediaries, under favor of monopoly privileges, between railroad corporations and the investing public. He then lays down this law: "While in ordinary business, expansion of trade means increased competition, such expansion necessarily contributes to the growth of anything which approaches the nature of a monopoly." To the operations of this law, he says, "our American fortunes are nearly all traceable, and they contain a promise of stability such as is not shared by mercantile fortunes."

It is encouraging to find papers like the Record and Guide engaged in examinations of this kind along substantially correct lines of inquiry. The writer assumes that large fortunes are in themselves bad; but since he clearly draws the true economic distinction between fortunes obtained in competitive business and those obtained by means of legalized monopoly—a distinction that runs between wealth and poverty—his error is of little or no consequence. It is strange, however, that he should recognize the effect of land values in making and fixing large fortunes, without instantly seeing the injustice of our land tenures. That the land itself justly belongs as much to one generation as to another, and to one individual in a generation as to others, is a proposition that no man can refute, and that no intelligent and honest man ventures to deny. But its value is often honestly supposed to belong to individuals. What makes land value? Nothing, even as this conservative writer shows, but the profits of competitive labor. As these profits grow, they increase the value of the land upon which and by means of which they are made; and this shifts them from the worker as such to the owner of the land at sight. Ruin by the process that land owners acquire single fortunes, not by their own labor, but wholly at the expense of the competitive worker.—The Standard.

Oliver Twist in Pittsburgh.

Men who become accustomed to living at public expense, ultimately look upon their privilege as a right, and the more luxurious the support they enjoy the more strenuous are they in maintaining it as a right, and the more brazen in asking for more. The Pittsburgh Dispatch tells of a case in point. A fire having swept away the John Harper building in Pittsburgh, a movement was started to have the adjacent street opened to Penn avenue. In behalf of the movement it was urged that it would be a good time to do this immediately after the fire, as the damages on condemnation would be less then than after new buildings were erected. But Mr. Harper opposed the scheme. He was not satisfied to be paid the value which Pittsburgh had already given to his lot, but wanted also the additional value which future growth will give it. Here is what he said: "I suppose the city can condemn the property, but I will oppose it. The widening would take twenty feet and leave a strip of ten feet that would be worthless unless Charles Arbuthnot would buy it. We do not want to give up the property, for in a few years it will be worth a half more than what it is now; and if it is condemned, its value as an investment would not be considered. Mr. Harper should not be personally condemned; he is only a type.

Effect of the World's Fair.

Landlords are charged with being especially greedy, rents having been advanced in '91, in anticipation of the fair business, again advanced by twice the amount for '92, while there is talk of again doubling the advance for '93, one effect of this being that many families of moderate means living in Chicago have been obliged to move out further, to secure homes at rentals leaving them something with which to pay the butcher and baker.—American Machinist.

It would be difficult to get simple logic into a worse twist than the Chicago Tribune succeeds in doing when it avers that the single tax would fall heaviest on farmers because agriculture is the predominant industry. As the single tax relieves all industry of taxation, it takes a very gymnast in sophistry to conclude that such a tax would fall heaviest on the predominant industry. Any mere man would suppose that the predominant industry would benefit most by the abolition of taxation on industry. As the Tribune helps out its bad logic with the assertion that under the single tax farmers "would pay vastly more than they now do," we challenge it to give the particulars of a single case of a working farmer whose taxes would not be less under single tax than they are now, even if the single tax were high enough to take the entire rental value of his land. The Tribune can not do it, and dares not make the attempt.—The Standard.

A tax on land values regardless of improvements will do much toward eradicating the abuses of land monopoly and giving the producer all of the fruits of his toil. It would undoubtedly compel the owner of land to be the user of land. It would take the unearned increment now going into the pockets of the monopolizers, manipulators, speculators and the idle rich classes and pay the expenses of government, thereby relieving labor and enterprise of the burden of taxation which is pressing the life out of them at present. It would stimulate industry; it would discourage speculation; it would lessen taxation: it would prevent land values from being inflated by schemers. —Portland (Ore.) East Oregonian.

Land owners in New York city are congratulating themselves this year upon the action of the tax assessors in increasing valuations only upon land which has been actually improved. Since taxes on improvements are shifted to the tenant they have excellent reasons for their joy. The tenants have not yet been heard from.—Standard.

The best and surest subject of taxation is the thing that perforce stays in one place, that is land.—N. Y. Sun, August 26, 1891.

Newpop's Boy.—"My boy is awfully smart," said Newpop. "He's only three years old, but, gracious, how he can count! He counted his blocks the other day up to twenty-five, and, by Jove, do you know, when I came to count 'em to see if he was right, they came to exactly seventeen!"—Harper's Bazar.

—A little boy asked his mother to talk to him and say something funny. "How can I?" she exclaimed. "Don't you see I am busy baking these pies?" "Well, you might say: 'Charlie, won't you have a pie?' That would be funny for you."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

MICHIGAN CROPS.

Fruit Promises Well, But Rain Is Badly Needed for Small Grains.

As indicated by the crop report of the Michigan weather and crop service the past week has been a favorable one for crops in the northern and central counties, while in the southern section the drought still continues. Harvesting of wheat and oats is progressing in the northern and central portions, and a good crop seems assured. Farmers in some sections are putting the ground in shape for fall sowing. In the southern section, where the drought prevails, small grains are suffering and pastures are drying up. Potatoes and corn are a very poor crop this season and it is the same with vegetables. Apples are a full crop and in the western counties fruit of all kinds promises well.

STATE TREASURY.

Mr. Braadsted's Annual Report Shows the Financial Condition Is Good.

The report of State Treasurer Braadsted for the year ended June 30, 1892, shows that the receipts for the year were $3,210,832.90; disbursements, $3,-193,505; balance in treasury, June 30, $1,241,971.92. The bonded debt of the state now amounts to but $10,992.88. The trust-fund debt, composed of balances upon which the state as trustee pays interest for educational purposes, amounts to $5,445,180.58, and is divided as follows: Agricultural college fund, $400,234.63; normal school, $64,742.62; primary school (7 per cent.), $3,650,-775.82; primary school (5 per cent.), $507,215.58; university, $522,211.93.

GRIEF DROVE HIM MAD,

A Michigan Farmer Insane Because of His Wife's Death.

A sensational scene occurred in the home of Frank Rath, a prominent young farmer at Romulus, whose wife of but six weeks died suddenly of heart disease. Rising from his bed he went to the room where the corpse lay in its casket, and, tearing the lid off, dragged out his wife's remains and with frantic appeals tried to bring her back to life. Failing, he stripped the clothes from the body and was wildly pulling and tugging at the limbs when discovered and overpowered by neighbors. Five minutes later he went raving mad.

Holes in the Ground at Jackson.

Since the Standard coal mine at Woodville, three miles west of Jackson, was abandoned on account of flood, the ground about there has been gradually sinking. The Michigan Central railroad track has sunk several inches at one place. The bottom fell out of one man's cistern, and five great holes have since been discovered, each about twenty feet across. A string with a weight on it was let down sixty feet in one of them, but did not reach bottom. The cause is unknown, but as there is quicksand in the neighborhood it is thought that there may be quicksand under the whole village.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-seven observers in different parts of the state for the week ended August 20 indicated that typho-malarial fever, pneumonia and dysentery increased, and diphtheria, pleuritis, typhoid fever and measles decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at sixteen places, scarlet fever at twenty-eight; typhoid fever at thirty-nine and measles at three places.

THE BAND REUNION.

Lots of Band Music, A Splendid Parade, A Tremendous Crowd and A Good Time Generally.

The rain storm which visited this latitude on Wednesday afternoon of last week [illegible] for the band reunion. The decorations which were put out in the forenoon were hastily taken in after dinner, and people concluded to make the best of it and pray for a change on Thursday morning. Three bands arrived that night on the late trains and were properly provided for at the Lilley House.

On Thurday morning at seven o'clock the village was astir and people began to arrive at that early hour. At eight o'clock, the town resembled its appearance on a busy Saturday. The clouds cleared away, and the national colors appeared on the business blocks at a lively rate. At nine o'clock Chicago street presented a gala appearance. Nearly every business house in town was trimmed with bunting and several private houses along the line of march were decorated in a similar manner. The morning trains on both roads brot several more bands, and the noon train on the Lake Shore brought the final delegations. Between twelve and one o'clock the visiting bands were all provided with dinner at the Opera House. The ladies had provided a bountiful banquet to which the boys did ample justice. During the entire forenoon Chicago street was filled with marching bands of music, and the crowd of spectators continued to increase. At three o'clock in the afternoon it is safe to say that fully ten thousand people had congregated within the village. Tecumseh has seldom accommodated a larger crowd and never in recent years. The number of bands present was less than expected, owing to the storm of the night before, the time when many of them would have to leave their homes. Those here were fine organizations, however, and the parade was worth coming many miles to see.

THE PARADE.

Promptly at half past one the procession was formed on Chicago and Evans streets. H. W. Stevens acted as chief marshall, with Jas. H. Aten and A. W. Slayton as assistants. The line of march, as previously announced, was followed, the procession marching in the following order.

H. W. Stevens—Chief Marshal.

1. Tecumseh Kid Band—21 pieces,—Ed. Gray, Leader.
2. St. Joseph Cornet Band, of Adrian, Prof. C. F. Skinner, Leader.
3. Fayette Normal Band, 25 pieces—C. S. Morrison, Leader.
4. Hudson City Band,—J. E. Morden, Leader.

Jas. H. Aten, Marshal.

5. Munson Cornet Band, 22 pieces, Mr. Snyder, Leader.
6. Exeter Cornet Band, 9 pieces.
7. Wheatland Cornet Band, 16 pieces, H. F. Nokes, Leader.

A. W. Slayton, Marshal.

8. Newport Cornet Band, 17 pieces, Theo. Shippen, Leader.
9. Temperance Cornet Band, 17 pieces, Wm. Mosteller, Leader.
10. Samaria Cornet Band, 15 pieces, H. G. Jackson, Leader.

After completing the line of march the bands played in unison through Chicago street. Following this, Hon. J. D. Shull made a brief address to the bands and assembled crowd. He welcomed the visiting bands on behalf of the citizens and band of this village. The speaker paid a few graceful compliments to the art of music as a means of expressing the refinement and progress of a people. He also mentioned the efforts of Prof. Skinner in keeping up an active interest in the Ohio and Michigan band association, and wished every musician many happy and successful reunions.

After Mr. Shull's address, the bands played an overture, under the direction of Prof. Skinner, which closed the musical programme.

THE BUSINESS MEETING.

At 3:30 was held the business meeting of the association in the Council Building. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, it was decided to hold the next annual meeting (the 9th) at Hudson, between the 16th and 25th of August of next year. The following officers were then chosen:

Guy Maxon, Hudson, Pres and Sec.
Fred Morden, Hudson, Vice Pres.
Prof. C. E. Skinner, Tecumseh, Musical Director.
C. S. Morrison, Fayette, Assistant.

The following resolutions were then adopted:

RESOLVED, That we, as leaders of the bands here represented, tender our thanks to Prof. Skinner and the residents of Tecumseh, for their exertions and kindness in our behalf. Further, that a special vote of thanks be tendered to the ladies for their hospitality and kindness.

Soon after the musical program the crowd moved toward Military square to witness the balloon ascension and parachute drop, which was looked forward to with great interest by all.

THE BALLOON ASCENSION.

Prof. W. H. Hogan, the only survivor of the celebrated family of aeronauts of that name, was to make the ascent. Prof. Hogan had nearly succeeded in filling his balloon, and the machine was almost ready to bear away the hardy aeronaut, when a wind storm dragged [illegible] the fire, thus making a trip out of the question. All who witnessed the efforts and management of Prof. Hogan, are satisfied that he was very anxious to make the ascent, and made every effort to do so. In view of the sad accident in Detroit, on the same day, and about the same hour, the citizens feel well satisfied the ascent was foiled by the wind.

SPECIAL INCIDENTS AND ITEMS.

A most novel feature of the day was the aristocratic "drag" turnout from Adrian. The double decker was dragged [illegible] which were kept under control by the united efforts of driver and footman. The passengers, selected from Adrian's elite society, were fittingly clad in genuine Tally-ho costumes—the driver, footman and follower, in livery becoming their position. A fifth wheel was carried in readiness, and the appearance of the vehicle well warranted this precaution. At the sound of their fog horn all Tecumseh was set agog at so aristocratic and exclusive a turnout, and the tally-ho was the attraction of all eyes during the remainder of the day.

The ten cent dancers were in their glory. The young man with his best girl was exceedingly numerous during the evening. The Armory Hall and Opera House were both crowded until a late hour, and both dancers and spectators evidently enjoyed themselves.

The Lilley House did a rushing business during the entire day, all the restaurants were over run, while the numerous lunch stands were well patronized. The Baptist ladies conducted a dining hall and ice cream table in the lot of the Table Factory and put a nice fund in their treasury thereby. The W. C. T. U. ladies also had an ice cream table in front of the Opera House. The bands were all furnished with a free supper at the Opera House, and there were many baskets full gathered up after the feast.

The merry-go-round near military square was well patronized throughout the day.

The committees in charge of the work preformed their parts well and especially the ladies who had the management of the banquet.

Not an accident occurred to mar the festivities of the day, except the mishap to the balloon, and we cannot but feel that this was a Providential happening which may have averted a sad or fatal calamity.

Taken altogether it was certainly a most enjoyable reunion and the best one yet held by the M. and O. association.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express through the medium of this paper our sincere thanks to those who so kindly remembered us in our late bereavement, for the floral offerings, and to the choir for the beautiful music so tenderly rendered.

MR. AND MRS. WM. BURRELL,
" " " IRVING CLARK.

Card of Thanks.

I desire to extend my heartfelt thanks to Co. C. Band and all who participated in the burial of my dear husband.

COMPANY C IN CAMP.

How the Tecumseh Military Boys Passed their Five Days at Camp Winans. A Few Incidents of Life on the Tented Field.

Another State encampment has come and gone, and Co. C, together with the rest of the citizen soldiery of our commonwealth, is richer in military training and other incidental experiences of another week of actual service in field and camp. The training commenced the very first day, when Co. C and others from Adrian, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti and Dundee, were stuffed into old, dirty, dusty train with guards at the door, and hot boxes underneath, with nothing to eat and little to drink till 4 p m. when they were mustered in camp Winans and allowed to eat. And they ate.

The evening was employed in witnessing the first guard mount and settling the quarters assigned to the various messes. Seven men sleeping on two small straw ticks is known in military parlance as a "mess," and a terrible mess it is too, when a recruit attempts to turn over without command, or without observing the proper cadence. But he seldom does it the second time, and the seven sleepers somnambulate with military exactness and accord. People who have slept alone, or with one bedfellow, can hardly realize the advantage to be gained both in time and space, by the combination of seven when applied to this purpose. Probably in no instance does the modern systematic combination and organization of individuals for a common purpose give better satisfaction, or more economic results, than in the military mess of 7. It has been estimated that seven men, acting unitedly in a small space, and with military precession, can accomplish as much in the way of sleep in two hours as the same number acting alone could in eight hours. In fact, this is the only way the boys could live in camp where the duties are so arduous that only two hours sleep can be had in twenty-four. And thus they slept. And thus they returned home fresh, rosy and recuperated.

The usual routine of camp life was observed this year, and taking all in all, the camp was a quiet, orderly affair. All took good interest to improve themselves in the new tactics, which are very different in many respects from the old, and it is safe to say, that Michigan's troops will make a creditable and soldierly appearance at the great fair next year.

On Friday the 1st. Inft. took its forced march of about 12 miles ending in a sham battle of a mild nature in which no casualties occured except that two of Co. C's men were ignominiously captured, and closely confined by the enemy under a shade tree on wine, lemonade, bananas and cigars, for two hours.

On Saturday the 1st. Inft. and the batallion of the 19th Inft. U. S. A., stationed at the camp, were called in to action to defend the camp against the onslaught of the 3rd. Inft. In several places on the firing line during this engagement there seemed to be little shaming on either side, and several officers barely escaped being wounded by careless and excited men. It was here that private Brewer, Co. D, 3rd. Inft., of Saginaw, received the wound from the discharge of a blank cartridge which resulted in the only death at camp. The gun was accidentally discharged while several men were scuffleing over taking a prisoner, and no blame is specially attached to any one. However, the death of young Brewer on Sunday evening, cast a gloom over the entire camp, and many vets admitted it was the quietest and most solemn evening ever experienced during camp life. It is now predicted among many well up in military affairs of the state, that this year has seen the last of the popular but useless sham battle, where nearly every one loses his head, if nothing else.

Tuesday morning the troops broke camp and were transported via the D. L. & N. Ry. to Detroit, there to accept the hospitality and welcome of the city for the day. Upon arriving at the Lake Shore docks, the boys were treated to a first-class luncheon and cigars. Then the spacious streets of the city resounded with the martial tread of the entire Michigan brigade, parading in column of companies, led by the regulars of the 19th, and a very imposing parade it was. After parade the arms were stacked in the Detroit rink and the troops were quartered and fed in the various hotels at the expense of the city. The boys were then turned loose until the departure of their various trains, when all closed camp life with many pleasant remembrances both of the field and the day's visit as guests of Detroit.

Campaign Song Books.

We have received from the publishers, "True Blue" Republican Campaign Songs, and "Red Hot" Democratic Campaign Songs—two books, each containing a collection of new songs arranged for male quartet clubs, with music and words complete, and just what is wanted for the Presidential Campaign of 1892. Nothing is more effective than stirring and appropriate songs for campaign purposes, and they are furnished in great variety in "True Blue" and "Red Hot." Sold by music and news dealers generally, or upon receipt of ten cents each, copies will be mailed to any address by The S. Brainard's Sons Co., Chicago, Ill. For sale at Coller's.

OBITUARY.

John Sage was born in Livingston county N. Y. March 10, 1805. At 26 years of age he came into the Territory of Michigan and June 8, 1831, bought of the Government the farm on which he so long resided.

In 1832 he went from Tecumseh to the Black Hawk War, serving under General Brown and Colonel McNair.

After nearly two years residence in the Territory he visited his old home in New York and while there, on the 24th of October, 1833, he married Miss Hannah Marshall, with whom he returned to Michigan and at once began housekeeping in the little log house he had previously built. They were partners through the pioneer days for forty-six years, when, on March 7th, 1880, Mrs. Sage [illegible] and integrity gave to each the beauty of goodness.

Of seven children, four of whom were boys, three enlisted in the U. S. service in the late war. Two of them, Revilo and Rufus, died while in the service.

Mr. Sage died on Friday, August 26, being a little more than 87 years of age. The funeral was held at his late home on Sunday. The summer air, cooled by the approaching autumn, stirred the leaves to gentle motion as the sons of the pioneers gathered to lay at rest the last of all but three of those who were not the children of the pioneers within the township. The day was beautiful. The sun shone brightly and now and then a drifting cloud passed over and the foliage on the trees wore the tint of approaching autumn. An unusual stillness prevailed as "earth to earth, ashes to ashes and dust to dust" fell on the ears of those who had for the last time looked on one who had seen the great forest while it was yet untouched by the white man's hand, and then, with his own strong arm brought from its deep shade fields of golden grain and delicious fruits.

Such had been his life; and they laid him to rest until with the companion of his younger days he shall rise and go forth into that land on the shores of which "the waves of eternity break."

On the morning of August 26, 1892, Mrs. Lydia Clark passed to her eternal rest, at the age of 75 years, leaving a husband, three sons and one daughter to mourn their loss. The funeral services were held at her late residence on Maumee street at half-past ten o'clock Monday morning, the pastor, Rev. O. J. Perrin, officiating. The text was taken from the 14th chapter of John, and fitting, tender and comforting were the words spoken.

Mrs. Clark came to Tecumseh thirty-seven years ago and has resided here ever since. She was a kind neighbor, a sincere friend and a loving, devoted mother. The funeral was largely attended and the many beautiful floral offerings indicated the friendship and high esteem in which she was held by all who knew her.

She sleeps in peace, yes, sweetly sleeps;
Her sorrows all are o'er.
With her the storms of life are past,—
She's found the Heavenly shore.

Silently, sadly we laid her to rest.
Born from life's turmoil and care;
With hope and with faith we look on beyond,—
Her spirit is waiting us there.

Only a casket lies buried below,—
A form that we oft loved to see;
The kind, loving heart so dear to us all
From earth's weary sorrow is free.

Lovingly, kindly she labored below
Till life's brief duties were o'er,
Then summoned to cross Death's billowy sea,
She has reached the eternal shore.

Only a drop in the ocean of Time,
And our brief life will be o'er,
Then may we be welcomed to a Heavenly home
By those who have gone before.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions of the W. C. T. U. concerning Mrs. Mary E. Burnett:

WHEREAS, In the Providence of God, we have been called upon to part with our dear sister and co-laborer, Mrs. Mary E. Burnett, therefore,

RESOLVED, That we hereby extend to her bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this, their great affliction, and recommend them to Him who alone can dry the mourner's tear, fill the aching void and make the wounded spirit whole.

RESOLVED, That in her death the W. C. T. U. has lost a worthy and useful member, the temperance cause a firm supporter, and each one who knew her a faithful Christian friend; and though of late she has not been able often to go outside of her own home, we have realized that her heart has been with us and her prayers have aided us in all our efforts to raise the fallen and accomplish the good we are trying to do. And while we shall miss her and mourn our loss we feel assured that with her

"Hope has changed to glad fruition, Faith to sight, and prayer to praise."

FRIENDS AND PATRONS.

The object of this article is to most emphatically contradict the report that was circulated by some misinformed (?) person on Thursday last, to the effect that I had gone out of business.

I had no intention of going out of business, and never have had. In order to more forcibly demonstrate this fact I herewith cordially invite all lovers of Fine Woolens and High Class Tailoring to call and see my entirely new stock of Fall and Winter Goods, which will be ready for display on Saturday, Sept. 3rd. These goods consist of as full a line of Woolen Goods for Gentlemen's Dress, as has ever been shown in Tecumseh, Worsted and Scotch Suitings for Business, genuine Irish Frieze, Montagnac and German Beavers, and Trouserings of both Domestic and Foreign make.

As heretofore, I shall make a speciality of Full Dress Garments, using the best quality of Worsteds, my aim being to turn out more and better work, in this line than ever before.

Thanking you all for favors already shown, I respectfully solicit your patronage for the future.

Yours,
JOHN. C. HAZLETT.

J. H. Bortle, of Saline, was in town Thursday, He "stuck type" in the HERALD office away back in the fifties before the war.

Lt. Will McNair attended camp at Grand Lake. He was the guest of Gen. Ed B. Wood at headquarters. It is needless to say that he was well entertained and enjoyed his week in camp very much.

Frank Rose and family, of Toledo, were in town last Thursday to attend the Band Reunion. He still holds his position as conductor on the street railroad, and has a good job which he is well pleased with.

Lt. Will McNair started for Washington yesterday afternoon, his leave of absence having expired. Mrs. H. L. McNair accompanied him to visit her relatives in Washington, after which she will return to her home in Colorado.

Rev. James Gorton will preach at the Universalist church next Sunday morning and evening. Morning subject: "What must I do to be saved?" Evening subject: "Vision, prophecy and progress."

The reunion of the 18th Reg. Mich. Inf., held at Pittsford, on Friday last, was well attended by quite a delegation from Tecumseh. Among those who took the train here were A. W. Slayton, Mrs. Davis, D. C. LeBaron, H. W. Stevens, J. M. Ingersoll, Miles Baldwin and C. A. McNeil.

The Detroit Free Press, in its new monotype dress, looks as neat and prim as a maiden of sweet sixteen. The new solid lines harmonize very nicely with the body type, while the latter makes a beautiful column, set either leaded or solid. The Free Press can always be found at the head of the procession.

Albert Boyce arrived in town Saturday night from Detroit

Dr. L. M. Jones and wife, of Brooklyn were in town one day last week.

Miss Mea Aylesworth of Manchester, visited her cousin, Miss Minnie Pomeroy last week.

At the coroner's inquest held over the remains of Gertie Carmo, who was killed at Detroit last week, the jury decided that her death was the result of her own carelessness. Prof. Bartholomew said that the accident would not have occurred if the balloon had been properly inflated.

THE HERALD acknowledges a pleasant call from Prof. W. M. Hogan last Wednesday afternoon. He is the last surviving member of the Hogan family, all of whom distinguished themselves as aeronauts. He was much disappointed at his failure to make an ascension here on Thursday afternoon.

The first week of the new year for the Fayette Normal University shows a 15 per cent increase in attendance exclusive of Fayette. Students can enter this excellent institution at any time; and, because of the large body of thoroughly trained teachers, and the complete equipments, may feel sure of finding the classes they need.

The forthcoming Lenawee County Atlas, which is being compiled by Mr. Geo. Cadwell, of Adrian, will eclipse anything heretofore attempted in that line in the State. A large amount of money, labor and painstaking has been expended on the maps of the country, cities, and townships, the accuracy and completeness of which can only be appreciated when compared with the maps in the old atlas. Carefulness, accuracy and completeness have also characterized the compiling of the statistics of the county, which, coupled with the reliability of the maps, will make the work a credit to the county and the publisher, and one which will commend itself to every business man, farmer and artisan in Lenawee's broad domain.

We clip the above from the Hudson Gazette, and it gives us much pleasure to vouch for its accuracy. It will be the most complete atlas of Lenawee County ever compiled. The surveyors are now at work in Clinton and will be in Tecumseh within a week or so.

The Cholera scourge has arrived in London.

W. O. Osborn, of Harvey, Ill., spent last week in Tecumseh.

Misses Helen Anderson and Bertine Brewer visited in Detroit, Monday.

A. L. Brewer has laid a new sidewalk in front of his residence on Union St.

Mrs. S. W. Anderson gave a very pleasant tea party last Friday evening.

John C. Hazlett has a new card this week calling attention to his new stock of fall goods.

It was decided to hold the next band reunion at Hudson. We hope Hudson will feel better now.

School begins next Monday and Harris & Hiteshu have something to say about it in a new card.

Mrs. Mattie Colgate-Root has been spending a few days in town on her return to Chicago from the east.

Miss Fannie Lapham and Miss Gertie Bray, of Adrian, were guests of Mrs. C. H. Ham a portion of last week.

The Misses Carter, who have been visiting at S. W. Anderson's returned to their home at Bryan, Ohio, Tuesday.

Mrs. C. D. Bills, Mrs. S. P. Hosmer and Miss Hosmer gave a reception at the home of Mrs. Bill's yesterday afternoon.

The receipts of the farmers' picnic were about $200 and there were in attendance 992 single rigs and 445 teams.

The Ladies' Social of the Universalist church will meet at Mrs. Judge Stacy's to-morrow, Friday, afternoon and evening.

W. H. Smith's new house on Logan street, is rapidly appaoaching completion. It will be a very neat family dwelling when finished.

The man who gets mad at what the newspapers say about him should feel thankful for what the newspapers know about him that they do not publish.

The Prohibitionists of Tecumseh will hold their caucus to elect delegates to the County Convention, at the Council Rooms to-morrow evening, Sept. 2nd.

Mrs. H. L. Stewart, son and daughter arrived home Thursday from their Southern trip. They visited several cities, their last stopping place being Chattanooga.

Co. C has received an invitation from the Lenawee Co. Agricultural Society to attend the fair one day during the exhibition. Inasmuch as all their expenses are to be defrayed the boys think of accepting.

A rumor is afloat to the effect that there was an engagement existing between Bert Walker, the Adrian balloonist, and Gertie Carmo, and that they were to have been married the first of January. There is probably no foundation for the report.

Rev. W. H. Babbitt arrived home Friday from Colorado Springs, and occupied his pulpit as usual last Sabbath. His parishioners gladly welcome him home and are also glad to know that his health has been much benefitted by his trip.

The body of Gertie Carmo was cremated at Detroit Sunday afternoon in accordance with a wish she had often expressed. There was no solemnity and no religious services. Thousands of people viewed the remains as they lay at her sister's home, and as many as could gain admittance to the chapel witnessed the cremation.

Geo. L. Graves, wife and son, of Milwaukee, arrived in town Saturday, on their return from their European trip. They enjoyed the trip very much and had smooth sailing across the ocean. They remained here until Tuesday evening, when they started for home, accompanied by their son Paul, who has been spending the summer at John Hicks'.

A good story is told about one of the Sir Knights of the Adrian Commandery who took in the late trip to Denver. At a small station up in the Rockies, an urchin appeared in the Pullman car selling home made pumpkin pies. Our friend purchased half a pie for the sum of 25 cents. The pie had been transferred from the pie tin to a pastboard plate. The boy, when delivering the pie cut through the pastboad plate to make it easier to handle. The Sir Knight not noticing the pasteboard bit through the pie, plate and all. It seemed a little tough, but he finally succeeded in devouring nearly the whole piece, together with the plate. Upon turning it over and looking at the crust, he remarked that it was the toughest pie crust he had ever tackled, but pumpkin pies come so high there he proposed to get his money's worth.

A special from Jackson to the Free Press, Tuesday evening, gives the following particulars about the sad death of William Wilson. The deceased was a steady industious man and a good citizen. His family will have the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction:

Wm. Wilson, a machinist employed at the Michigan Central shop, at the junction, was struck by an express about 7 o'clock this evening and was instantly killed. He had worked late and was returning to the Temperance House, where he boarded. He was busy talking when the train approached and stepped in front of the engine. His body was carried to the undertaking establishment, where Coroner Adler impaneled a jury. An inquest will be held on Thursday morning. Wilson's shoulder and leg were broken and he sustained a bad scalp wound, but death was caused by internal injuries. His home is in Tecumseh, and he leaves a widow and four children. He was 40 years old.

P. V. Woodward was in Adrian Friday.

Jno. Anderson was a visitor in Detroit last Friday.

Dr. E. F. Gamble spent the fore part of the week in Detroit.

The regular meetings of the different Masonic Lodges occur this week.

If the children want to know the best place to buy their school books, read Kirchgessner's new ad.

Miss Losna Davidson will start tomorrow for Traverse City, to resume her position in the public schools of that city.

H. W. Stevens and Chas. Bidwell drove to Adrian, Saturday. We have been unable to ascertain whether they took in the circus or not.

Mr. Burt Cooper, of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, who has been making a short visit in town, returned to the metropolis Saturday.

Last Sunday afternoon the remains of Geo. Thorp were transferred from the receiving vault to the family lot. As a mark of respect to the deceased, who was an ex-member of our guards, the company turned out escorted by the Kid band.

Tuesday evening the Misses Anna Bailey and Margaret Clarkson gave a party to about fifty friends at the residence of James Clarkson, in Macon. The party was a very pleasant one for all who attended and passed off with great eclat.

The Kid Clawson wheat is all the rage this year. It promises to take the place among red wheat that the Old Clawson did among white. Those wanting seed of this excellent variety will do well to see A. P. Coddington, who has about 100 bushels which he will sell at a reasonable price.

—It is poor economy to put off attending a Normal or College because of hard times. It would be equally wise to put off planting corn because of the expense of the seed. In gaining an education time lost now is lost forever. The expense of attending some of our excellent higher institutions, such as the Fayette Normal University, of Fayette, O., is now so low that any one may find a way to meet it. Do not wait until another year. Attend now. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The extent o Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

A LABOR OF LOVE.

Searching for the Miners Buried in the Wales Colliery.

Thirty-Nine Taken from the Fatal Pit Alive—All Hope of Further Rescue Abandoned—The Dead Number 107.

WORKED WITH A WILL.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—All night long the volunteer rescuing parties kept up their work at Park Slip pit, the scene of the disastrous explosion at Bridgend, Wales, Friday. They worked with a will, and removed an enormous quantity of debris from the mine. At 6 Saturday morning they had penetrated 300 yards into the main shaft. In all this distance not a sign of life was discovered, but here and there the body of a miner was found, its attitude showing how suddenly death had come to them. Some of the men had died in the very act of using their picks. Ten bodies were recovered of men who did not have a second's warning of the fate hanging over them.

While a band of the rescuers were working their way further into the pit a sound was heard that caused the workmen to suddenly suspend operations. Eagerly listening they waited a repetition of the sound. Soon it came, low and weak, but in sufficient volume to let the rescuers know that somebody behind the fallen rock and earth was alive. With a hearty cheer in response the men again bent to their task with renewed energy.

Word was passed to the pit mouth, and in a short time there was a scene of the wildest excitement about the pit mouth. Women and children who had stood about all day Saturday waiting to see if the bodies of husbands and fathers would be brought to the surface, ran to the pit, and in eager, strained voices asked the officials if the news was true. When assured that some of the men were surely alive, the scene was about as affecting as that of Friday when everybody believed that all in the mine had met their death.

At last the separating bank of rock and earth fell inward, and the rescuers, still crawling, entered an open space in which were huddled together a numbers of the miners who had been imprisoned. It was as though the grave had given up its dead. The rescuers found that most of their comrades had been badly injured and burned.

Mr. Asquite, home secretary, on Sunday visited the Park Slip pit. Mr. Asquith examined the mine machinery, conferred with the officials and questioned survivors. A dispatch says that only forty-one miners have been rescued from the pit and that two have since died. Exploring parties are still searching the mine, though all hope of finding further survivors has been abandoned. The number of the dead is, therefore, placed at 107.

FIFTY YEARS A MISSIONARY.

Death of Rev. William Ware Howland in Jaffna, Ceylon.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 29.—A cable message announces the death on Friday, in Jaffna, Ceylon, of Rev. William Ware Howland, for nearly fifty years missionary of the American board to that island.

[Mr. Howland was born at West Brookfield, Mass., in 1817, graduated from Amherst college in 1841 and was ordained for the work in 1845, after completing a course in Union Theological seminary. Three of his children became missionaries, the oldest, William M. Howland, at Madeira, who died while in this country in 1877. The second, Rev. Samuel Howland, is president of Jaffna college, Jaffna, Ceylon. The only daughter, Miss Susan Reed Howland, is principal of a young woman's seminary in Jaffna, while Rev. John Howland is missionary of the American board in Mexico. Mr. Howland was the oldest missionary in that small field, and had not visited his native country since 1861. He lived to see the Jaffna mission grow until it has nine self-supporting churches and 2,700 members, while there are 135 mission schools and 8,500 pupils.]

A PLAY HOUSE BURNED.

Flames Almost Totally Destroy the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The auditorium of the Metropolitan opera house, which has rung with the notes of Patti and Lyman and Campanini, where great balls and banquets and receptions have been held, was destroyed by fire Saturday morning. The fire broke out after 9 o'clock. It had its origin on the fourth floor, directly over the stage, where the frame said to be the largest in the world, upon which the scenery is painted, is fixed. Just how the fire started is not known positively. The loss is variously estimated at from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Thieves Thrive at Homestead.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 27.—Aaron Walker, of Homestead, had his pocket picked of $120. His stables were also burned and he lost $3,000. The presence of a number of thieves attracted by the wage contest is beginning to manifest itself through a number of depredations which were first charged against strikers, but the charges have been disproved.

Must Leave Labor Unions.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 29.—There is considerable excitement among railroad employes here over the order of President McLeod, issued by him to the effect that all employes of the Lehigh Valley & Central railroad of New Jersey must sever connections with all labor unions. There is considerable talk of striking.

Largest Dam in the World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The contract for building the mighty Croton dam at Cornell, in the town of Cortland, Westchester county, has been awarded to James S. Coleman, formerly street cleaning commissioner. Mr. Coleman's bid was $4,150,573, and for this he will build the largest dam in the world.

Elected Officers.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The American Bar association Friday elected the following officers: President, J. Randolph Tucker, Virginia; secretary, Edward Ottis Hinkley, Maryland; treasurer, Francis Rowle, Philadelphia. Among the vice presidents is President Harrison.

FEAR IN NEW YORK.

A Bellevue Hospital Patient Appears to Have the Cholera.

His Symptoms Similar to Those of the Asiatic Plague—The Great Danger Lies in Immigration—Alarm Increases in Europe.

GOTHAM FRIGHTENED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Anton Potzel, an Australian who arrived here from Hamburg, Germany, two weeks ago, was taken to Bellevue hospital Sunday afternoon suffering from an ailment, some of the symptoms of which resemble those of Asiatic cholera. The fact that he had come from a cholera-stricken city caused some alarm. The hospital physicians were unable to determine whether he had genuine cholera or not, they thought he was suffering from a severe attack of cholera morbus—but to be on the safe side they isolated Potzel in the tent on the river front which was used for typhus patients. He will be kept there until the nature of his affliction is accurately known.

No case of cholera was discovered Sunday on any of the incoming steamers. Health Officer Jenkins and his assistants were on the alert and carefully inspected all pasengers and baggage. He found everything in a very satisfactory condition.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 29.—The proposition of the Illinois state board of health to suspend immigration temporarily from all cholera-infected countries in order to protect the life, health and the commercial and industrial welfare of the country has met with general favor. Twenty-three boards have wired the Illinois state board indorsing the proposition. It has pointed out that Asiatic cholera is an exotic and must be imported in order to afflict this country. From its first introduction in 1832 history shows that its importation has never been effected save through the persons and personal effects of immigrants. It is the consensus of belief among sanitarians and health officials that to suspend immigration now would be to insure immunity from a cholera epidemic.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 29.—Health Officer Duffield has issued an order that no ambulances shall take away from the railroad depots in this city any person found suffering from cholera or diarrhea. Although he does not apprehend any danger, Dr. Duffield has taken these precautionary measures to guard against the possible spread of the disease should it be brought into Detroit by immigrants who may come through Canada from the seaboard.

HAMBURG, Aug. 29.—The official returns show that on Friday there were reported in this city 416 new cases of cholera and 150 deaths. Up to noon Saturday 128 new cases and 55 deaths were reported, but the returns are not complete. Prayers were offered in all the churches Sunday for a cessation of the scourge. Whole households have been sent to the cholera hospital. Relief committees have been formed and appeals for subscriptions issued throughout the city.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The steamer Geoma arrived at Middleborough Sunday from Hamburg, and as there was no sickness aboard the crew was allowed to disembark, but subsequently one of the seamen was seized with cholera and the Geoma was placed in quarantine. The townsfolk are alarmed over the appearance of the disease.

BIG FIRE IN GEORGIA.

Several Business Houses and the Office of the Chronicle Burned.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 29.—A destructive fire broke out here at 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The Alexander Drug and Seed Company, Fleming & Bowles' furniture warehouse, E. D. Smythe's crockery store, Harry Hall's photograph gallery, J. R. Lamar's law office, the store of Thomas & Barton, wholesale music and sewing machines, the residence of Leroy Miller, and the Chronicle office were totally destroyed. Augusta Dorrs, clothing house was slightly damaged. The loss is estimated at $400,000. The entire morning edition of the Chronicle was worked off while the building was in flames. Everything was wiped out in the shape of type and machinery. The files of the paper from 1800 to date and the books and subscription list were saved.

To Reorganize Iron Hall.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 29.—Representatives of 190 local branches of Iron Hall had a meeting here Saturday night and issued a call for a convention of delegates from all the branches to be held in this city September 12 to take steps to reorganize the order. They agreed that all the old supreme officers should be left entirely out of the new deal.

Washington Prohibitionists.

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 27.—The prohibition state convention Friday nominated Judge Roger F. Green, of Seattle, for governor, and A. E. Dickinson, of Walla Walla and E. P. Newberry, Island county, for congress. Four presidential electors and a complete state ticket were put in the field.

Sharpers Gull a Farmer.

TUSCOLA, Ill., Aug. 29.—Three sharpers found another victim here Friday and plucked him for $5,000. Ephraim Dressback, a well-known and wealthy farmer, is the loser, three-card monte was the game and two strangers were the winners.

One Hundred Yet to Be Tried.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 29.—About 100 prisoners are still to be given preliminary examinations at Coal Creek. The troops are being gradually withdrawn from there, but a sufficient force will be left on the spot for an indefinite period.

Close of the Peace Congress.

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 29.—At Saturday's closing session of the peace congress the discussion on the arbitration question was resumed and several resolutions incorporating the original motions were adopted.

Customer—I'm a lawyer and I want to get a suit.
Taylor—You can have it, sir, if you will pay the costs.

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

"Where's Tom?" asked the department clerk. "Taking an outing?" "No," replied the man at the next desk, "he is taking an inning. He's gone to the ball game.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK.

An Engineer's Strange Story of a Little Moth.

Traveling recently from Chicago to New York, I found in the morning upon crawling out of my berth that the train was standing stock still. The porter told me that it had been standing thus for an hour and a half, while I had been sleeping the sleep of the just.

"Freight train done wopsed up on de track ahead," said the porter, "I reckon we don' get out o' here under anudder hour or two."

I dressed and peeped out and saw we were alongside the platform of a country station. I took a good breakfast in the dining car and then went out to stroll up and down the platform.

Presently I went to the locomotive and stopped to admire it. There is nothing much better to look at, for that matter, than the locomotive of one of these through express trains on the great trunk lines. How it throbs as it stands, straining with pent-up power, as if impatient to leap away at fearful speed!

This one was hissing fiercely, while the measured thud of the air pump sounded as if it might be the regular breathing of a sleeping giant.

In the cab sat the engineer alone, waiting. I stopped and gossiped with him a moment about the engine. Then I offered him a cigar, which he took, with thanks, and asked me to come in. I swung myself into his cab.

The engineer—a bright, pleasant-faced man, about forty years old—explained to me the uses of the numerous valves and levers about him. They were all as bright and shining as polish could make them, for the engineer is as proud of his engine as any housewife is of the neatness of her dwelling. I glanced at the two shining steam-gauges with the clock between them, and then I noticed what seemed to be an ordinary white moth, mounted in a gilt frame, hanging against the wall of the cab.

"Is that for ornament?" I asked, pointing at the moth.

The engineer smiled. "Well, partly for ornament," he said, "but a good deal more for sentiment. I put that moth there because it saved my life and the lives of two hundred and fifty people as well."

"How in the world could an insect save human lives?" I asked.

"Well, I'll tell you, if you want to hear the story. I reckon there's time enough before we're able to get out of this."

I settled myself in the absent fireman's seat, and prepared to listen.

"It wasn't such a long time ago," said the engineer; "only a year ago last spring. I was running this very train, and had this very engine—old 449. My fireman was Jim Meade—same fellow I've got now. You can see him over there, leaning up against the telegraph office.

"Jim is a good boy, but he is very superstitious; believes in ghosts, dreams and warnings. I used to laugh at his fancies, but I don't make as much fun of him as I did—not since we saw the woman in black.

"We were scheduled to leave M—— about one o'clock in the morning, and to arrive in S—— at about six. On the night when this thing took place a fearful storm of wind and rain had been raging since early evening, and was at the height of its fury when I started for the round-house.

"It was about midnight, and the wind seemed to sweep clear around and through the building. It was terribly dismal. Jim was there, and the engine was all ready, so, after getting my working clothes on, I ran the machine down to the station. Our train, the vestibule limited, was an hour late. I gave the engine a thorough oiling, and made sure that all was in order.

"As we sat in the cab we could hear the storm raging outside, while the rain, driven by the gusts of wind, beat fiercely against the windows.

"'It's going to be a bad run, Frank,' Jim said. 'I wish we were in S——, safe and sound.'

"I laughed. 'What makes you so terribly glum, Jim?' I asked.

"'Oh,' said he, 'I just feel creepy somehow. Seems like there's something terrible going to happen. I can feel it in my bones.'

"I laughed again. 'You got a little wet coming over, I guess, Jim,' said I. 'And the sound of the wind isn't very encouraging, that's a fact.'

"To tell the truth I was a little nervous myself, notwithstanding my easy way of treating Jim's notions.

"Presently our train came in, long and heavy, consisting mainly of sleepers. It used to make me nervous to know that the lives of hundreds of my fellow-men were in my keeping, but now I think nothing of it. That night I was nervous. What if the frightful storm had made a switchman careless, or if a rail had been loosened by the settling of the track somewhere? On these fast trains a man must rely on the vigilance of the employes; for, in order to make schedule time, he must run at such a speed that often he cannot see a signal before he is upon it.

"But I laughed at myself for my fears as I backed down and coupled on to the train. I set the brakes and found everything in good order.

"By and by the little gong above my head clanged sharply, and with a puff and hiss of escaping steam we were off into the night and storm, rattling over switches, past signal lights and between long lines of cars, till, with a roar and rumble, we rushed over the long iron bridge and away through the hills, waking their slumbering echoes with our shrill whistle.

"Then I pulled the throttle wide open, and the clank and roar soon settled into a hum, for old 449 was doing her best, and we were making fifty miles an hour.

"The darkness was intense save where the headlight, an electrical device, cast its funnel of light into the gloom. Jim had a hot fire, and kept steam up to a high pressure, so that we fairly flew on past sleeping hamlets and still farmhouses.

"At our first watering station I made sure that all was working smoothly, while Jim inspected the headlight. The operator handed out the orders, which showed that the road was clear as far as our next stopping place. On we went.

"The darkness grew more intense, if possible, while the wind shrieked by. The rain became more blinding, till nothing could be distinguished in the gray murk which enveloped us.

"Suddenly, through the mist and rain, I saw, looming right before us, the gigantic figure of a woman wrapped in a long, black mantle, which seemed to flutter in the wind. She waved great spectral arms about in swift, twisting movements. As I sat, looking in horror, the figure vanished with a final wave of her arms.

"I was too much astonished and stupefied to make a move of my hand toward the throttle. At that moment Jim had been bending over the fire. As he looked up he exclaimed:

"'Hullo, Frank, what's up? You look as if you had seen a ghost!'

"I did not answer. My mind was too full of that strange figure I had seen.

"We were now nearing Rock creek, where there is a trestle over a deep stream. I felt more nervous than ever.

"We dashed around the curve and whizzed by Rock Creek station, which is only a mile from the trestle. As we passed I glanced at the steamgauge for an instant.

"A cry from Jim caused me to turn quicly toward him. He sat rigid, his eyes large and staring, his jaw dropped, the very picture of terror.

"He pointed with a shaking finger out into the darkness. I turned and looked, and then began to shake myself.

"There, on the track, was that same hideous figure of a woman, outlined on the background of light from the engine, now motionless, now whirling in a witch dance, but all the time motioning us back.

"'Frank,' gasped Jim, but scarcely above a whisper, 'don't go over that trestle! Don't go, for heaven's sake! Don't go till you're sure it's safe!'

"I suppose I was pretty badly scared. At any rate, I put on the air-brake for all I was worth. I couldn't have resisted the impulse to stop the train.

"As we came to a stop, I could hear the roar of the water in Rock creek right ahead. I stepped out of the cab, and met the conductor coming up.

"'What's the matter? What's the matter?' he asked, impatiently.

"I felt decidedly foolish. There was no gigantic woman to be seen now. Nothing could be made out more than a few feet away in the blinding storm.

"'Well,' said I, 'we've seen something, I don't know what it is—seemed like it was a great black ghost—that was waving its arms and warning us not to go forward.'

"The conductor looked at me curiously. 'Are you crazy, Frank?' he said. 'I should think you were. But we're so near the trestle we'll take a look at it.'

"We took our lanterns and went ahead, leaving Jim with the engine. He looked scared all over. But I tell you we had not gone five rods before we stopped in horror.

"There at our feet lay a black chasm, filled with the roar of the river, as swollen with the spring rains it dashed down toward the lake. The bridge was washed away!

"Only a few splinters of wood and twisted iron clung to the abutment, while now, far out over the blackness, that awful black figure of a woman danced again on the thin air, relieved aginst the shaft of light that the headlight threw.

"It was flinging its arms about as if in wild glee.

"The conductor stared at the chasm and then at me.

"'Was that the thing you saw when you stopped the train?' he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'Well, it's something more than luck that saved us to-night, Frank.'

"We went back slowly to the train, feeling very queer, and thankful, too, I can assure you. Several of the passengers had come running forward by this time. Among them was a young fellow from Chicago, about eighteen years old, who was smarter than the whole of us, as it turned out.

"When this boy saw the woman in black, he turned and looked at the locomotive headlight. Then he ran up toward it. I looked at it as he did so. I saw a peculiar spot on the glass.

"'There's your woman in black!' said the Chicago boy.

"And there it was, sure enough—that same moth miller that you see there in that frame. He was clinging to the inside of the glass. As I tapped on the glass, the creature flew back and lighted on the reflector.

"That's the whole story, sir. The moth, by fluttering on the glass just in front of the electric illuminator, had produced a great black shadow, like that of a cloaked woman, on the darkness in front of us; and when he flopped his wings in his vain attempt to sail out through the glass, he gave his mysterious shadow the look of waving its arms wildly.

"Then when he flew back out of the direct shine of the light, the figure disappeared, of course.

"We never knew just how he got in there, but no doubt it happened when Jim went to fix the light at the pumping-station.

"Anyhow, he saved our lives by scaring us with that woman in black.

"So you see why I keep the moth in the frame. It's to remind me of the way we were saved that night. Yes, you might call it accidental, but I call it providential."

"All aboard," called the conductor of the limited, coming out of the telegraph office with a paper in his hand.

Jim, the fireman, ran and jumped into the cab as I stepped down to go back to my car.—Frederic P. Potter, in Youth's Companion.

BIDWELL'S VIEWS.

Letter of Acceptance of the Prohibition Candidate.

Liquor Is the Menace of Labor—The General Discusses the Principles of the Party as Enunciated in the Platform.

FIRST IN THE FIELD.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 26.—The letter of acceptance of Gen. John Bidwell, of California, nominee of the prohibition party for president of the United States, has been given out for publication. The letter is long and discusses the principles of the party as enunciated in the Cincinnati platform. On the basic principle of absolute prohibition, Gen. Bidwell says that the danger of monopolistic tendencies menacing the government is not so great as that of the destructive results sure to come from the liquor traffic. It is the constant menace of labor, which creates the wealth of the nation, and the traffic is now sapping and impoverishing the very foundation of the national fabric. Passing to the question of woman's suffrage he urges the immediate emancipation of women. The nation that first gives women equal rights with man, he says, will earn a crown of imperishable glory. He fears delay, as England will lead. On the question of finance he says the position of the party that the money should be gold, silver and paper, issued only by the government, is fair and broad. He also advocates the legal regulation of the rates of interest in all the states, believing that it will do much to check the tendency to centralization of the money power.

On the question of labor he says:

In order to relieve the labor of the country of its abnormal and often congested condition there should be the earliest possible revision and restriction of the immigration and naturalization laws of the United States. These laws, so inimical to American labor and the best interests of all, if not so purposely enacted, have doubtless been kept in force for partisan considerations for fear of detriment to partisan interests, till our country has become the almost daily scene of riots, lawlessness and bloodshed, and not infrequently on such a scale as to portend, if permitted to go unchecked, the possible supersession of all authority. The discord between capital and labor cannot safely be allowed to continue. No matter what the cause, it is imperative to remove it. If it is necessary to have organizations as a defense against capital or competing labor such organizations should be authorized and regulated by law.

On the tariff he says:

We must concede that all nations have the right to levy tariffs. As Americans we are in favor of protecting all American interests. The tariff proposed by the democratic party and that of the republican party differ only in degree; both are sufficiently high to be termed protective. To the objection that tariffs have been unequal—that is to say, that under them the rich pay comparatively nothing and the masses nearly all the revenues so derived to support the national government—must be added the further objection that they are blinding and deceptive.

The establishment of a system of income taxation, he says, could work no hardship and do no harm. When the union needed money most during the rebellion the income tax was imposed and worked like a charm. He continues:

It helped them to save the union, and will help to save the nation now in another rebellion—the masses against the classes.

One of its beneficial results, he argues, would be the equal distribution of wealth, which would go far toward healing the discord between capital and labor. He advocates government control, and, if necessary, the government ownership of railroads.

On the question of public schools, made prominent in the platform, he says:

The teachings of the American public school should be in accord with American ideas and with American civilization, which, of course, is a Christian civilization; but they must be strictly and absolutely non-sectarian. The standard of morality must accord with our civilization and pervade all the books and teachings of the public school, which must not in any phase be a school of immorality.

On the question of immigration he says the doors must be closed in self-defense, and adds:

We do not want to war against foreigners; we do not ask foreigners coming to this land of freedom to change their faith; we do not propose to Protestantize or Romanize, or in any manner sectarianize them. But we do insist that they shall not destroy our liberties by any attempt to foreignize or anarchize us or our government; that they should appreciate our liberties and privileges, that are a condition of citizenship; they should learn to speak our national language and to read and write it fairly well.

Gen. Bidwell closes his letter with a resume, adding that there should be taught in the public schools the principles of the freedom of the ballot and the settlement of differences between men by arbitration.

Three Dead as the Result of a Feud.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 29.—In a free-for-all fight at Paint Lick, 10 miles east of Lancaster, Ky., Saturday morning Humphrey Best was shot and killed by John Campbell, who in turn was badly wounded. Two little children were killed by stray bullets. The murder is the outcome of an old feud. Best was the toughest character in the country and had killed four men during his career.

Is a Thriving Church.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The census bureau has issued a bulletin giving statistics of the Methodist Episcopal church in the United States. The bulletin shows that this church has 102 annual conferences, not including ten or more in foreign countries. Connected with these conferences are 2,240,354 communicants.

Trade Is Prospering.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"In all aspects the business situation appears more favorable than a week ago. There has been general though moderate improvement in distribution; manufacturers are more fully employed; several great labor controversies have ended, and crop reports are somewhat more satisfactory."

Falls Short of Last Year.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 27.—The total wheat crop of Canada this year will be 55,000,000 bushels, against 62,000,000 in 1891. The total oat crop will be 85,000,000, against 90,000,000 last year. The total barley crop will be 17,000,000, against 19,000,000 last year.

HEIGHT OF CRUELTY.

Nervous women seldom receive the sympathy they deserve. While often the pictures of health, they are constantly ... To withhold sympathy from these unfortunates is the height of cruelty. They have a weak heart, causing shortness of breath, fluttering, pain in side, weak and hungry spells, and finally swelling of ankles, oppression, choking, smothering and dropsy. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is just the thing for them. For their nervousness, headache, weakness, etc., his Restorative Nervine is unequaled. Fine treatise on "Heart and Nervous Diseases" and marvellous testimonials free. Sold and guaranteed by Baker and Hall.

Ripans Tabules: one gives relief.

FREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION.

The political campaign brings the tariff again to the front. But, after all, the strongest free traders believe in protection to the home, the family, the health. There are many ways of doing the latter, but if one is bilious, dull, poor in appetite, with headache, heaviness and lack of energy, there is no better way than to use a few bottles of Parmelee's Manarake and Dandelion Bitters. They will improve your appetite, aid digestion and brace you up generally. Only 25 cents a large bottle. Sold by dealers.

A PILE OF MONEY WASTED.

People have wasted piles of money trying to cure Piles. A cheaper and surer way is to buy a box of Parmelee's Pile Suppositories for 50 cents, and see what they will do. You can get your money back if they do not benefit you. The proprietors are that sure of them. Sold by dealers.

WHEN YOUR STOCK IS SICK

Use Parmelee's Condition Powders. They are acknowledged the best by all who have used them. Full pound 25 cents. Sold by dealers.

BURNING PETROLEUM AT OIL CITY

Wrought terrible havoc to life and property. Yet Petroleum is one of nature's great natural remedies. It enters very largely into Parmelee's Household Ointment, which is positively guaranteed to cure ulcers, old sores, erysipelas, salt rheum, scratches on horses, hard or cracked hoofs and foot rot in sheep. Sold everywhere and used by every one who knows anything about it.

LOOK OUT FOR THAT FALL COUGH.

Do not allow it to become settled on you for the winter. It will prove a serious matter if you do. Stop it now. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will surely do this. It is guaranteed to. Compare the size of the Hamilton Cough Balsam bottle with other Cough remedies of the same price.

THE CHEAPEST IS NOT ALWAYS THE BEST.

But in the case of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla the two features seem to go together. It is as strong, as effective, as certain in its action, as positive in its cures as any higher priced article of similar nature in the market to-day. It sells for only 50 cents a bottle. Ask for Parmelee's and be sure you get Parmelee's.

A common cold should not be neglected. Downs' Elixir will cure it.

From top to bottom
the house is best cleaned that is cleaned with Pearline. It is done with little labor and with great results—with ease to yourself, and with no possible injury to anything that is cleaned. To use Pearline once is to want it always; you will want it always because it does what you want.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door. First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. PEARLINE sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York. 177

Frank Hogan has been home from Chicago several days. He was threatened with typhoid fever, but is on the gain now.

C. S. Burroughs has been going about with his face in his hands the last week. Cause, inflammation of the jaw, presumably the result of too free advertising of Cuba Gum.

Mrs. Albert Wilkerson, of Dundee, came last Wednesday to visit her sister Mrs. Peter Kishpaugh, she returned home Tuesday accompanied by her daughter Edna, who has been here several weeks.

A party of surveyors are located in tents between E. R. Smith's and the school building. They are making a survey of the town for the purpose of using it in the preparation of a new county map.

Art Smith had a little brush with his mustang last Saturday in which the animal indulged in antics not conducive to safe or pleasant riding. He finally brought up between Chris. Smith's and VanDeMark's hardware where he was quieted down so that his owner proceeded as per previous program.

The Edrose House is receiving a liberal patronage under the new regime and patrons express themselves as well pleased with the entertainment received. The central locat on, the neat appearance, and the air of comfort pervading the whole house, and the prompt attention given to guests, are prime factors in the success of such an enterprise, and will invariably insure it.

As Mrs. Frank Johnson and Mrs. Charles Johnson were returning from Tecumseh last Thursday evening their horse became freightened at a pile of Stone near the bridge west of the factory and jumped to one side, overturning the buggy and throwing both the ladies out. They received several bruises but were not otherwise injured. The horse did not attempt to run but waited until matters were righted and then went quietly home.

A special election has been called by the village council for the purpose of voting upon the question of borrowing a sufficient sum to construct works for the supplying of electric lights to the village. The election will be held on Saturday, Sept. 3rd, at the town hall, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. Clinton has never lagged in the matter of public improvements and without doubt will come to the front with an overwhelming majority in favor of the proposed plans.

A large delegation from Clinton attended the Farmers' picnic at Bridgewater Wednesday. The program was exceptionally good, consisting of an hours' speech by Ex-Governor Luce, several selections by the choir and Clinton band, a recitation by Miss Nellie Martin and reading by Miss Jennie Saley, also a memorial address by Flavius Knight. The foot-race and climbing the greased pole furnished amusement for the crowd. Every one seemed to be determined to enjoy themselves in spite of the unfavorable condition of the weather.

The September number of The Forum contains a masterly article by David A. Wells, entitled, "A Tariff for Revenue, what it really Means." It is the ablest exposition of that question that has yet been published, in so concise a form as to be accessible to every reader. Every voter in the land ought to read it, before depositing his vote next fall.

The high wind Sunday cut up quite a few antics east of our village, moving Wm. Underwood's large barn about a foot on its foundations, besides destroying and breaking over a number of both ornamental and fruit trees, both on his place and his neighbors'.

The Kniffin family held their annual reunion at the old home last week Tuesday. All the members were present. No deaths reported for the past year, and two births. After a literary and musical program and a bounteous dinner all left for their homes, with a total number on the roll of about 76.

Logier Lowe left his horses hitched to a picket fence last Friday afternoon while he went after a drink of water. The animals became uneasy and in fighting the flies loosened the fence from the posts, which let it fall on the neighboring hives of bees, who were so infuriated that they at once went for the horses. This was about 2 o'clock and in about an hour both horses were dead. While trying to free the horses Mr. Lowe was himself severely stung about the face and hands, some 50 or more of the little stingers being picked from his face, which, although terribly swollen, is slowly getting better.

Republican County Convention.

The Republicans held their Convention for nominating a County ticket on Monday last.

The Convention was called to order at 11 o'clock a. m. by Chairman Graves, the usual standing committees were appointed and an adjournment was taken for dinner.

The real business of the session was transacted in the afternoon.

Ballots were taken for the offices of Sheriff, Register and Prosecutor, the other candidates were named by acclamation. This is the ticket as nominated:

Probate Judge—R. B. Robbins.
Sheriff—E. G. Wilson.
Clerk—E. L. Mills.
Register—W. J. Parker.
Treasurer—F. A. Retan.
Prosecutor—J. C. Winne.
Circuit Court Commissioners—J. N. Sampson, G. W. Ayers.
Coroners—J. I. Knapp, J. R. Bennett.
Surveyor—James Blair.

The following resolutions were adopted:

RESOLVED, By the Republicans of Lenawee county in convention assembled,

That we congratulate the Republican party of Lenawee county on the happy auspices under which we enter upon this momentous presidential struggle, and that we reaffirm our loyal and unwavering support to the nominees of the Republican party in the nation, state and county.

That we heartily endorse the principles of the Republican party, as set forth in the national and state platforms, and believe that on those principles the Republican party in the present campaign will march on to one of the grandest victories ever achieved in its history.

Delegates were appointed to the State and Senatorial conventions and a resolution was passed recommending the nomination of Judge Lane for Justice of the Supreme Court.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Tanks containing ice water were placed by the W. C. T. U., at various points in our village, cheering the Band Reunion, thus enabling every one to drink of God's own beverage, excuses being made on a former occasion of the kind for going into the saloons, that a drink of water could not be got elsewhere.

Another Gospel Temperance meeting was held Sept. 4th, in the Presbyterian Church; their meetings have grown in interest, and this was no exception to the rule.

The World's Petition was adopted without a dissenting voice by the Baptist Young People's Union which included several hundred thousand bright and brainy patriots in the dew of their youth.

We may thank Miss Lillian Hollister, President of the Detroit W. C. T. U., and Dr. J. B. Cranfill who incited them to do this strong stroke of work for this great cause.

We are sure that there are no whitle-ribboners who will not learn with sincere pleasure that Lady Henry Somerset has taken passage on the Cunard steamer Etruria, sailing from New York, August 27th, for Miss Frances E. Willard and Miss Anna Gordon, inviting them to be her guests at Eastnor Castle. They are weary and worn; the entire change of climate and of scene, with the sea voyage, may be expected to do them a great deal of good physically, and their complete exemption for a few weeks from public work and the routine of office duties, will be their first approach to the "rest" which has twice been voted Miss Willard at National Conventions by her considerate comrades. The correspondence will be left in charge of Miss Alice E. Briggs, office secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill., and the usual corps of assistants at Rest Cottage. Miss Willard's editorial duties will be discharged to the best of her ability under the disadvantage of absence, while her coadjutors in the office of The Union Signal will do their utmost to maintain the present high standing of the paper. Misses Willard and Gordon will return in good time for the National W. C. T. U., Convention in Denver, Col., Oct. 28 to November 3. Miss Willard desires us to say that she is "most tenderly grateful to that loving, loyal host who in the loss of her nearest and dearest one who have by prayer and sympathy expressed in word and deed, by cable and telegram, letter and spoken comfort and condolence, hallowed with heavenlier meaning than ever before, the hymn we sing so often "Blest be the tie that binds."

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

MACON PROHIBITION INSTITUTE.

Our Prohibition friends had a fine rally last Thursday, at Macon Grange Hall. We regretted our inability to attend, inasmuch as they were to have a picnic dinner, and we know from experience that the picnic dinners, prepared by the matrons of Macon, are well worth attending.

We gather from the Messenger a condensed report of the proceedings.

Chairman Quick called the meeting to order at 10:30, and Rev. Yager of Ridgeway offered prayer.

The Monroe county Glee Club then got everybody as good natured and enthusiastic as Mr. Bragg its leader, when Rev. J. I. Gulick made all alike feel welcome and at home; his reasons for so cheerfully welcoming all so heartily were nicely stated in the spirit of universal brotherhood. The response by Hon. T. F. Moore of Madison, our old Roman in the cause, was forcible and earnest, showing the nature of the principles, we represent as conducive to the spirit of universal brotherhood.

John C. Howell then presented a masterly article on the public school question as met by the 13th plank of the Prohibition platform. Mr. Howell's paper showed a thorough comprehension of the subject and its presentation won him many new admirers.

The Glee Club acted as orchestra till the next act which was the presentation of R. A. Mills' paper, on the first plank of the platform, "Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic." Mr. Mills being in California he was obliged to present his able argument by proxy through the person of Wm. B. Hatch. The article bore evidence of close study and careful preparation, and was greeted with much applause.

The large and increasing crowd now dispersed for a picnic dinner, some scattering about the lawn in true picnic style; some congregating in various vehicles, while the speakers and singers and about 200 others repaired to the spacious tables in the lower floor of Grange Hall.

The afternoon session was opened up with enthusiasm at 2 o'clock by the Glee Club when D. W. Grandon, of The Messenger, read a very forcible paper on our 11th plank, "Speculations in Margins." It was presented in Mr. Grandon's original, independent manner and elicited some spirited discussion. Chairman Quick led off and soon "uncorked considerable knowledge."

The paper on the "Tariff" or the fourth plank was not presented on account of the absence of Mr. Mitchell to whom it was assigned. Some impromptu treatment was indulged in by Hon. T. F. Moore, etc.

In place of the "Tariff" paper A. Easlick presented a paper on the third plank, the "Money Question." This is a question on which Mr. Easlick is authority, and his paper, of necessity too brief, manifested very wide research and a plain, condensation of incontrovertible facts. It is modest to say it was well received, everybody desired to hear more of it. Considerable discussion followed which was largely characterized by prospective conjecture on the practical application of the plank.

The Glee Club got everybody ready for the sixth plank. "Foreign Immigration," by J. Stuart Lather, of Ypsilanti, who spoke very earnestly for about twenty minutes, showing how this illiterate element belonged to no party yet decided our presidential and gubernatorial elections for us. Dr. Loree added some pointed remarks upon the subject.

After the Glee Club had repeated "Levi" by request, Wm. B. Hatch delivered a brief oration on the "Nation's Needs," when Miss Mattie Mills very pleasantly recited in the German dialect how "Hans was reformed by his own dog." Miss Eddy, our other reciter from Adrian, filled the place of Mrs. Knight. She was heartily applauded for her grace upon the stage and lucid enunciation of the productions.

Rev. P. Zeller having to leave before he could present a discussion of the ninth plank, "One Day of Rest," the discussion was informally opened by Rev. Wright of Britton, and continued by Rev. Yager of Ridgeway, and Rev. J. I. Gulick of Macon, and D. W. Grandon. The meeting then adjourned to supper.

At 8 o'clock p. m., the hall was jammed full and Rev. John Russell of New Haven, gave what nearly everyone present said was the best political speech they ever heard.

The Republican attitude on the Force bill seems to be this: "Hush! Keep shady till we get there."

Baby McKee and baby Ruth will have to occupy rear pews for a while. Nancy Hanks is the popular favorite now.

The national flower controversy has been settled by French florists, who are cultivating a flower that is white in the morning, red at noon and blue at night. That is American enough for any one.

Mr. Blaine said: "There is not a section or a line in the entire bill (McKinley bill) that will open a market for another bushel of wheat or another barrel of pork."

Mr. Stevenson said: "In no instance has the tariff opened up to the farmer additional market for a pound of meat or a bushel of grain."

The Republicans are making a great ado over Peck's labor report in New York. They are entitled to all the capital that can be made out of it. The figures on which the report is based were furnished by the protected manufacturers and the names of the firms are kept secret. Now let us hear from the wage workers themselves on this subject.

Where are we now, after Nancy Hanks has made the trotting record 2:05-1-4? How far, or how near, is the beast that shall take off the yet remaining excrescence of five and a quarter seconds and leave the once unhoped-for figure of two minutes the mark of an actual performance? If the advance of the last quarter century shall hold good during the next, the two-minute goal will be reached.

The international monetary conference has received another set-back. This time it is the prevalence of cholera in European cities which adds to the difficulty of selecting a place for the meeting of the conference. Nothing is yet known here about what the Gladstone government of Great Britain proposes doing in relation to the conference. It is now thought that it will be late in October and possibly November before the conference meets, instead of in September, as at first supposed.

The N. Y. Evening Post closes a lengthy obituary mention of the late George William Curtis in these fitting and beautiful words: "He was our Puritan cavalier. His gracious manners masked an iron will. He added nothing to our literature which did not make for kindness, charity and peace; nothing to our politics which does not shame its ordinary levels and beckon it to higher things. There was a fragrant beauty in his life that made all who knew him account the privilege one of the choicest blessings with which heaven had visited their hearts.

The death of George William Curtis, for many years editor of Harper's Magazine, removes from this earthly sphere one of the brightest literary lights of the present generation. He was both a great editor and a great orator. His literary work upon Harper's periodicals since 1852, covering a period of forty years, did much to build up the reputation of those great publications and stamped him as a man of wonderful literary ability and resources. He was a politician also in the best sense of that term and was regarded as the leader of the "Independents," who have become a powerful element in New York politics.

The political situation in the South is thus plainly stated by the Atlanta Constitution: "It is useless," says the Atlanta Constitution, (Dem.), "to talk about division in the South on national issues. We may differ as we please about the details of administrative policy: we may approve free trade or object to it: we may favor State banks or oppose them: we may be for free coinage or against it; but in the face of the overshadowing importance of the force bill issue and the danger of negro domination, the South cannot afford to fall apart or to divide. Nobody knows this better than the farmers. They have had, and they see having, their little third-party recreation: they are kicking up their heels in a strange barley patch: but when the proper time arrives they will fall promptly into line and renew and strengthen the organization which stands for white supremacy."

The Vote of the Independents.

The independents accept Grover Cleveland, the candidate of the Democratic party, as, on the whole, the foremost representative of the reform principle, and will give him a cordial support. Not pretending to approve the views or to tolerate the methods of many who call themselves Democrats, with no sympathy for party bosses or organizations which subordinate principles to momentary success, they still rejoice that within this reinvigorated party the power of all such elements has yielded to the demand for broad statesmanship and far-sighted policy. They believe that the force of truth will consolidate the discordant fragments which form the party, or that it will repel some of the best of both, and encounter support from without, and that the way is open to-day, as it has not been in many years, for an educational canvass in the cause of reform, with strong prospects of an immediate success, which shall be an important service to the nation, and with the certainty that the final triumph of that cause in the civil administration of the government at large, as well as in the laws of taxation and currency, cannot long be delayed.—Harper's Weekly.

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS.

If the tariff tax law benefits labor, why isn't labor cognizant of the fact and consequently quiet and satisfied?

Why does not one of those 285,000 workingmen of New York who have had their wages raised by the new tax law come to the front when the republican editors and orators agonize for them, by way of illustration?

If the foreigner pays the tax on the country's imports, why does a rebate on taxed raw material go to the manufacturer?

Why isn't wool placed on the free list and a bounty paid for its production, same as sugar? We are a long way from furnishing our needed supply.

If a prohibitive tax law expands commerce, why are the greatest gains in trade with other nations, in commodities placed on the free list?

If the McKinley bill has more free trade in it than the Mills bill, as its advocates affirm, why is the Mills bill "an iniquitous creation of the enemies of American prosperity?"

"If" the new tax law neither enhances the price of articles nor shuts out importation, how does it benefit the manufacturer?

Labor is free, and agricultural products are free, in the world's markets; necessarily so, through the law of supply. Why should these productive agencies, subject to natural fluctuations, pay to protect a class of manufacturing monopolists from like conditions?

How many trusts has the Sherman law squelched?

Is a campaign surprise taking form in the northwestern states?

Is Knute Nelson a McKinley protectionist when he voted for the Mills bill and shoulds his action?

Is Levi P. Morton getting punished for ruling against the force bill?

Has Harrison placated Platt?

Where is Mr. Blaine at?—Toledo Bee.

Tariff Reform in the West.

That's a good move of Mr. Pulitzer, of the New York World and Mr. Singerly, of the Philadelphia Record, to raise a campaign fund for tariff reform education in the Western States. The fund is already up to nearly $20,000, and it is likely to double that sum before the subscriptions cease.

One vital advantage of this movement is its purely educational feature. The money won't be stolen by those who handle it or wasted on political deadbeats or used to debauch elections. There will be no "block-of-five" auction purchases with the money. It will be expended solely in the legitimate education of the people by the distribution of documents and hustings arguments. Nobody will get rich in pocket, but the Western people will be likely to get much enriched in tariff and tax information.

The Western States are all in political transition. There is not a single State West of Ohio and East of the Pacific Coast that is not more or less doubtful in the present contest. A steady decline for years in Republican majorities culminated in a sweeping revolution in 1890, and the few elections of 1891 in those States gave only the feeblest signs of return to Republican mastery. They are naturally and strongly Republican on old party issues, but they have been made hewers of wood and drawers of water for protected monopolies until forbearance has ceased to be a virtue.

The Western States seem likely to repeat the memorable political history of a generation ago when they were all swung from their apparently firm Democratic moorings on the slavery issue. Every State West of Ohio was Democratic, and, as a rule, strongly Democratic, on the old party issues of that day, just as they are Republican now on the old party issues of war times; but they were anti-slavery then as they are anti-monopoly tariff now, and the break has come. The anti-slavery Democrats of 1854-6 did break plump over to the Whigs, any there that the tariff reform Republicans bridge over to the Democrats in 1890.

The Democrats of 1854-6 broke over to Republicanism and Americanism and the Republicans of 1890 broke to the Farmers' Alliance; but the old Democrats broke solely because they were anti-slavery, and the Republicans have now broken solely because they are opposed to oppressive war taxes on the necessaries of life and industry in time of peace. They may cease to be Alliance men, as the old Democrats ceased to be Americans, but the old anti-slavery Democrats stood by the Republicans until slavery was dead and buried, and the anti-monopoly tax Republicans will more or less directly stand by the Democrats now until tariff reform shall be made the settled policy of the government.

Such is the promising field in which this educational tariff reform crusade is to be directed, and it will be welcomed on every prairie farm of the West. It proposes equitable taxation for all industries, finance, commerce and trade; it proposes tariff taxes which will assure the greatest good to the greatest number; it proposes to tear protected monopoly and its robberies, and it proposes to end the taxation of the masses for the benefit of special classes. It is not only a most commendable effort, but it is a winning fight. Move on.—Philadelphia Times.

The September Scribner.

The September Scribner contains the unusual number of seven elaborately illustrated articles. It is well known that the late Samuel J. Tilden bequeathed his great fortune to Trustees, with the intention of founding in New York a great library—confiding all details to the discretion of the three trustees whom he selected, Messrs. John Bigelow, Andrew H. Green, and Geo. W. Smith. The Court of Appeals held that the discretion was too general and the will void; thereby partially preventing the carrying out of one of the greatest and most beneficent plans for a public institution ever formed in this country by a private citizen. During the long process of the lawsuit over the will, the lips of the Trustees were naturally sealed as to what were the details of the project; but now that the decision has been reached they are freed from any such restriction—more especially as, by a fortunate arrangement with one of the successful heirs, they are still left in possession of a sum large in itself and sufficient to carry out an important portion of the design. Ex-Minister John Bigelow, one of the Trustees, has now decided to publish in this number of the Magazine, under the title, "The Tilden Trust Library: What Shall It Be?" the facts concerning Mr. Tilden's wishes as to the details of the plan, and also a most important proposal for still carrying out a large part of it by erection of a great library building in the very centre of New York. The scheme, with its elaborate illustrations, is one of the most interesting ever laid before the public.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 23d day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Lucy Walker, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified of William H. Smith, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate with the will annexed, may be granted to him or to L. Rogers, or some other suitable person, the executor named in said will having departed this life.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 19th day of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

(A True Copy.)

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

MICHIGAN'S LIQUOR INCOME.

It Shows a Slight Increase Over That of the Previous Year.

During the past year, as appears from reports of county treasurers filed with the auditor general, there were fourteen wholesale dealers in spirituous and intoxicating liquors in Michigan, paying license to the amount of $14,924, and 2,573 retail dealers, paying $1,178,484 in taxes. The number of wholesale dealers in malt, brewed and fermented liquors was five; licenses, $1,350; retail dealers, 2,487; licenses, $695,525; manufacturers, eighty-six; licenses, $6,844. The total number of dealers was 5,129; licenses, $1,896,157.28. The previous year the number of dealers was 4,353, who paid taxes on the business of $1,704,715.

For Floating Palaces.

The new passenger steamers of the Detroit and Cleveland line, to run between Detroit and Mackinac island, will cost $300,000 each, and will have more sleeping accommodations for passengers than a good-sized hotel. It is likely that the line will be extended to Toledo next season. Passenger boats to cost over $2,000,000 in all are already under contract at lake shipyards for next season. This does not include any craft especially designed for the world's fair.

Watching for Cholera.

Health Officer Duffield has issued an order that no ambulances shall take away from the railroad depots in Detroit any person found suffering from cholera or diarrhea. Although he does not apprehend any danger, Dr. Duffield has taken these precautionary measures to guard against the possible spread of the disease should it be brought into Detroit by immigrants who may come through Canada from the seaboard.

PRESIDENT AND PEST.

The Chief Executive Speaks at Plattsburgh, N. Y.

The Powers of the Government in Cases of Pestilence Portrayed—The Duty of the States in Perilous Times.

HARRISON ON CHOLERA.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 5.—President Harrison and party arrived here from Washington at 12:30 p. m., Saturday. A large crowd with the city band were at the depot upon the arrival of the train. The party was escorted to the Fouquet house, where an elaborate dinner had been prepared. The president made a short speech from the second balcony of the hotel to a large audience. The party left at 1:08 and arrived at Loon Lake about 3 p. m. In his address the president said:

"So great has been that development which has come under the blessing of God, and so great the power of our people that we do not stand in fear of men. Secure in our own consciousness that peaceful disposition toward all the world and secure in the mighty military strength which is found in the courageous hearts and strong arms of her people the nation goes on upon peaceful lines in peaceful pursuits, the care of the home education of the children and the worship of God each in his own way. I cannot quite accept that view of constitutional law which I have seen in some quarters that the power to "repel invasion" extends to the invasion of plague and pestilence. The policy of our government has been to leave to the states the exercise of these powers of quarantine to keep out the disease. The national government has the duty of hearty co-operation. This attitude I have endeavored to maintain and strengthen. I would greatly regret if the state authorities anywhere should fail to accept that offer of cooperation in a friendly spirit. I felt that the extreme suggestion of convening an extra session of congress with a view to resuming to the national government these powers was not in this emergency the best. Time would be consumed in securing the necessary legislation and much more time in the proper equipment of quarantine agencies in all our ports. It seemed, therefore, that it would best serve the public interest and protect the homes of my fellow citizens to promptly cooperate with the state authorities and to exercise those powers already conferred by the law. For performing this plain duty I deserve no man's thanks.

"I deprecate any unnecessary alarm. Alarm that would result in the proper sanitation of our cities, towns and villages is wholesome and commendable, but alarm that becomes terror or panic is unwholesome. Doing all that can be done to let business and social duties proceed without interruption, let us leave the issue of life with the benign God who conferred it."

The president will remain in Loon Lake until he leaves for Washington to be present at the grand army encampment and it is his intention not to do any work whatever, and secure the needed rest, which thus far this summer he has not been able to enjoy.

BITTEN BY A SNAKE.

Mother and Daughter Perish in a Maryland Swamp.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 5.—A fatal encounter with snakes is reported from Frostburg, Md. Mrs. Martha Hardcastle went to the neighboring swamps last Thursday to gather wild berries, taking her 13-year-old daughter with her. A copperhead snake sprang upon her and buried its fangs in the calf of her leg. Her screams brought the daughter to the scene, who attempted to render assistance, but was also bitten. Both died in frightful agony a few hours later. Mr. Hardcastle, it is feared, will become insane from grief.

14,000 HOMELESS.

Awful Conflagration Reported from the City of Misd-Ziola.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 5.—A terrible disaster has been reported from the city of Misd-Ziola, in the government of Wilna. The entire city, which is built of wood for the greater part, has been destroyed by a merciless conflagration. Fourteen thousand people have been made homeless and robbed of their means of support. It is feared that want and the sort of living to which the inhabitants will have to resort will bring the plague, which so far has been averted.

Killed by Falling on a Lead Pencil.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Catherine Horan, wife of James Horan, captain of the canalboat G. Hayden, of Oswego, was instantly killed at Geres Lock, near this city, Wednesday night. She was walking along the deck of the boat and stumbled upon a coil of rope. She fell headlong and a lead pencil which she carried in her hand was driven into the brain through her left eye, a distance of 4 inches. She was dead before her husband reached her.

Steam Yacht Blown Up.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—The Yankee Doodle, said to be the fastest steam yacht in the world, was destroyed Saturday by the bursting of her boiler. Thomas and William McBride, the owners, and William Naulty and Richard Fisher, their guests, who had taken the boat down the river for a gunning trip, had a narrow escape.

Hundreds of Cattle Drowned.

WHARTON, Tex., Sept. 2.—A sudden rise in the Colorado river is alarming people living in the bottoms. Heavy rains are still falling and great damage is apprehended. Hundreds of dead cattle and all kinds of debris are floating down, but so far no human bodies have been seen.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Pimple to the worst Sore.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

D. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE COUNTY OFFICERS REUNION.

A Beautiful Day and a Large Crowd in Attendance at Putnam's Grove, Sand Lake.

Last Thursday was the first day of autumn. It was a beautiful, typical fall day and the county officials and ex-officials assembled in large numbers at Putnam's Hotel to participate in their annual reunion. It proved to be the most enjoyable gathering yet held by the association.

Visitors began to arrive at an early hour in the forenoon and before the dinner hour was reached a large crowd had gathered, who passed a couple of hours very pleasantly in shaking hands and renewing old acquaintance.

Among those present were ex-Judge Andrew Howell now of Detroit; Ex-Judge Geddes; Benj. Hicks and Orsamus Lamb, who served on the Board of Supervisors in 1850; Ex-Sheriff Bennett who was elected to that office in 1850; D. D. Sinclair and N. VanBrunt, who saw eighteen years service on the Board. The ladies lent their presence and charms to the meeting, and taken altogether it was a most enjoyable occasion.

After a sumptuous dinner at Landlord Putnam's, the crowd gathered in the dancing hall to listen to the literary program that had been prepared for them.

Upon calling the assembly to order, the President, O. Lamb, made a few introductory remarks and then introduced Rev. R. Wooden who offered prayer.

The national air, America, was sung by the Onsted choir in which the audience joined.

S. C. Stacy gave a brief address of welcome and Grant Fellows, of Hudson, made a very neat response.

The Onsted choir sang a quartette in fine style.

Rev. J. M. Kerridge, of Adrian, was then introduced and delivered a fine address. His subject was "Prejudice" and it was handled in a way that gave the utmost satisfaction to his hearers.

Hon. A. L. Millard and Hon. Norman Geddes followed with historical papers which were replete with interest. As they possess historical value we have decided to publish them in full. Judge Geddes' paper is given below and Mr. Millard's will appear at some future time.

Impromptu speeches were then called for and Judge Howell responded in some pertinent remarks, followed by D. D. Sinclair and others.

The enrollment of new members was next in order and the following names were added to the list:

Norman Geddes, L. C. Baker, Samuel Morey, Henry F. Barnes, Ed. Bertram, O. Lamb, J. E. Gibbs, Andrew Howell, W. H. Wiggins, H. L. Perry, Ed Crane, Will Wilkinson, N. VanBrunt, Loss Parsons, J. R. Bennett, D. D. Sinclair, A. L. Millard, L. A. Porter, Jno. Maxwell, S. C. Stacy.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—O. Lamb.
Vice Pres.—Loss Parsons.
Secretary—L. A. Porter.
Treasurer—L. C. Baker.
Committee of Arangements—D. D. Sinclair, J. E. Gibbs, J. R. Bennett.

A motion was carried that all papers read before the society should be filed with the Secretary for preservation.

The President declared the meeting adjourned, with an invitation that all might meet again in September 1893.

JUDGE GEDDES' PAPER.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—I have been asked to say something about the early settlement and the early settlers of the neighborhood in which we are met to-day and comply the more willingly because it takes me back to the time when, as a boy, I knew nearly all the people residing in the neighborhood of the lake.

Coming as I did into this then wilderness, a mere boy, 57 years ago this very month, and here spending my boyhood and early manhood, this, to me, is classic ground. This lake, still beautiful, then seemed like a gem, encased in a setting of the rarest beauty. Upon the surrounding lands were large oaks, standing isolated from each other as in a park, planted by a skilled landscape gardener. The forest fires which every year swept over the oak openings, burned up the fallen timber, kept back the growth of all underbrush and removed everything that could obstruct the view or passage, leaving the surface very like a well-kept lawn. The wild deer, of which there were great numbers, could be seen as far as the eye could reach and one could ride or drive over these lands in almost any direction he chose. In fact there were no roads of any account with two exceptions: In 1825 the U. S. government had caused to be surveyed and laid out a military road from Detroit to Chicago. This road, afterwards called the Chicago turnpike, runs through the northern part of this County near the north shore of the lake.

Twelve years later, in 1833, the government caused to be surveyed and laid out the La Plaisance Bay turnpike, starting at Monroe and intersecting the Chicago road at what is familiarly known as the Junction, some five miles west of where we are met to-day. Both these roads were constructed before Michigan was admitted into the Union as a State and it was owing to their being located as they were that the lands through Southern Michigan bordering upon, or in proximity to these great highways, were settled at the time they were.

In 1833 my father (I think within one week after the survey of the La Plaisance Bay or Monroe turnpike, as it is oftener named) purchased from the government the farm, a part of which is now owned by Mr. Edgar Hubbard, a little over one mile south and west of this lake.

It was upon [illegible] which my father, mother and brother lived and died. To me the old farm was marvellously attractive so long as the log house—built by my father in 1835 and one of the best and most comfortable I have ever seen—was permitted to remain, but when that was torn down to give place to the more elegant and commodious farm-house which has been erected in its place, it has never seemed like home and has had very little attractiveness for me.

But, beautiful as was this lake region at its early settlement, my recollection of some of its early settlers, the mere mention of whose names justify, as it seems to me, my claim that this is classic ground, has a far more rosedte hue.

Of those early settlers, who ever deserve to be held in grateful remembrance, I have only time to name Rev. Henry Tripp, Rev. Wm. N. Lyster, James King, Benjamin Workman, Deacon Giles Hubbard, Major Philo Mills, Leander Kimball, N. S. Wheeler, Abram Butterfield, Isaac Powers, John Brears, William and Joseph Camburn, Isaac and James Miller, Thomas, John and Samuel Pawson, Andrew and Benjamin Ayers, Samuel, Paul, James and William Geddes, John Monaghan and John Stephenson, all of whom, having acted well their part here, have crossed the dark river.

Among those I have named there were four men, living upon the southern shore of this lake, for whom I conceived a very great admiration,—an admiration which has increased rather than diminished with my advancing years,—and it is more particularly of these men that I shall speak.

The earliest of these settlers was the Rev. Henry Tripp, an Englishman by birth and a minister of the Baptist Church. In early life he had been a sailor and was for a time in the naval service of the United States, serving under Commodore Decatur in the war with Tripoli, and was afterwards a missionary in Jamaica. But in 1831, when all this part of the County was a wilderness—when the territories of Michigan and Wisconsin combined contained only 31,000 inhabitants, or a little more than half of what Lenawee County alone now has, he located the land upon which Dr. Lyster's cottage now stands, built him a log house, and with his estimable wife, one of the most refined and cultured women I have ever known, lived here for many years. He raised a large family, of whom his two sons, Doctors Joseph Tripp of Adrian, and John Tripp of Franklin, are honored and well known citizens of the County. He told me that when he came in sight of this lake and its surrounding hills he felt that he had found what was for him the promised land—the most beautiful spot he had ever seen—and made haste to secure for himself and family a home on its Southern border.

As illustrative of the hardships incident to the settlement of a new country he told me this story. Needing flour and corn meal, having neither wheat nor corn, he started from home with a yoke of steers hitched to a sled, expecting to purchase wheat and corn in Clinton, but finding none for sale there went to Tecumseh, but was unable to obtain anything there, and went thence to the valley in Raisin, where he succeeded in purchasing five bushels of wheat and seven bushels of corn from Darius Comstock, which he took to what was formerly called the Red Mill, in Adrian. There he found people from Coldwater, from Jonesville and other parts of the State waiting to have their grinding done, each having to take his turn. He waited in this mill three days and nights, living upon cakes which he himself mixed and baked upon the stove in the mill, before he could get his grinding done and start for home, where he arrived after just a week's absence, his family meanwhile not knowing what had become of him,—whether he had been killed by the Indians or had met with some fatal accident. Time will not allow me to say more of this good old man.

The Rev. Wm. N. Lyster, an Irishman by birth and a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, was in personal appearance and in his general make-up the very opposite of Elder Tripp. Delicately formed, brought up in luxury and wealth, he was educated for the ministry in one of the colleges of the old world and was for a time rector of Christ Church in Detroit and of the Church at Tecumseh. But, like Elder Tripp, he became fascinated with the beauty of Sand Lake and its surroundings, purchased and at one time owned nearly all the land around the lake.

The early settlers will recollect him: His Utopian schemes for improvement; his log fence to surround his entire land,—commenced, but never finished,—his rope fence, his French cart without springs, upon which he jolted about the country, preaching in the log farm and school houses. With culture, education and ability, fitting him for what is termed the best society in any country, he was in his manner and in all his life as unpretentious and simple as a child. While he could have occupied a prominent pulpit and received a large salary in a city he preferred the simple, unostentatious life that he led here to that of any other in the world. His sermons were models of persuasive eloquence and his reading of the Episcopal service as impressive as it was faultless.

James King was an Englishman, a graduate of one of the famous universities of that country. Becoming fascinated with the lake, he purchased from the government in 1835, (a part of the farm now owned by Mr. Jessie Penticost) and built a log house, upon an eminence commanding a magnificent view. He was a man of fine presence, of culture and learning, and had mingled with the best society in his native England, and in knowledge of poetry, literature and arts had no peer in all this region. But in that most useful of all arts and acquirements, especially for a man, with a wife and children dependent upon him, the art of making a living on a new farm, in a new country, he was a failure. His accomplished wife, reared, as she had been in luxury and wealth knew absolutely nothing of domestic life, or of its requirements, especially as the wife of a farmer. Spending as she did, much of her time in her boat upon the lake, sketching its lovely bank and surroundings, she doubtless drank in lessons, which her more practical sisters would have been incapable of receiving. But, while feeding her soul with visions of beauty and deriving pleasure from the study of nature, the children became ragged and Mr. King was finally compelled to abandon, what he had designed to make, an ideal home. I have been informed that he subsequently obtained an appointment as a professor in a Canadian College and become prosperous under different circumstances and in a calling for which he was better fitted.

The last of this group of whom I shall speak was Dr. Benjamin Workman. He too, was an industrious, a thoroughly educated man, having had the advantage in early life of the best schools of his own country and of England. Like Elder Tripp, Rev. Lester and Mr. King, he had become infatuated with the beauty of the lake and in 1835 settled upon its shores.

Although a thorough, classical and scientific scholar and blessed with a magnificent physique he too found himself at fault trying to make a living in an occupation for which he had never been trained. But such a man could not well hide himself, even in the then wilds of the lake region, and it was not long before the proprietors of the Constitutionalist, (the first whig paper ever published in this county,) sought him out and employed him as editor. I was too young to know about his success as an editor and cannot state how long he remained in that position, but from the fact that I have been wholly unable to find a single copy of the paper I infer that it was short-lived. He afterwards taught school in Tecumseh and at Springville, and among the most delightful memories I have of school life, is that of attending his school. But like Mr. King he found it difficult to make a living upon a new farm, and after a struggle of a few years removed to Canada, where he engaged in the drug business and became prosperous and was finally appointed Medical Superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane, at Toronto. Some 18 years ago, I spent two delightful days with him at the asylum. He was then a hale old man of 80, with a clear and vivid recollection of his life at the lake, and of his old neighbors and friends. He soon after resigned his position in the asylum and died at Uxbridge, in Canada, at the old age of 85, honored and esteemed by all who knew him. It would be with me a labor of love to speak of these men and of the early settlement and settlers here, more at length, did time permit. In giving prominence to the names of these men, it has been far from my purpose to ignore or disparage any of the other early setlers of this county, many of whom deserve to be held in honorable remembrance so long as courage, enterprise, strict integrity and faithful discharge of the duties of citizenship shall be regarded among the virtues. But I have selected from the names of those early settlers, these. First, because it is impracticable to speak of all; but mainly because I knew these men at a time, when education and culture above, and higher than that afforded by our own common schools, was rarely met with in the country. A graduate of a college was regarded quite differently then and now, and my bovish imagination invested them with a sort of halo which, as I have already said, advancing years has tended to increase rather than diminish.

May their names and deeds ever be cherished as having been the pioneers in discovery of one of the most attractive and beautiful lakes of this great State of Michigan.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING.

The regular annual school meeting of this district, held last Monday evening, was rather a tame affair and reminded one of a Quaker meeting. The room was not crowded, but there were several voters present.

Promptly at eight o'clock the moderator, Dr. Howell, called the meeting to order. Director North read the minutes of the last annual meeting, which were adopted. He then presented his report which was also adopted. The election of one Trustee resulted in the election of Dr. North as his own successor for a full term of three years. Supt. Kellogg then read his report and the meeting adjourned, the whole business having been transacted in about thirty minutes. Below are the chief parts of the annual report:

HAPPILY WEDDED.

Mr. John R. Hialey's commodious home on Pearl street was the scene of a happy nuptial event yesterday afternoon, at which time Mr. Albert B. Boyce of Detroit, led to the marriage altar Miss Anna D. Hialey. Exactly at the hour of high noon, the ceremony, brief but very impressive, which joined two hearts together in unison, was pronounced by Rev. W. H. Babbitt. John Young, of Detroit, acted as best man and Miss Clara Temple, of Ridgeway, as maid of honor. The usual congratulations followed, after which a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to the delectation of a most merry company. Nearly one hundred guests were in attendance. The younger society of Tecumseh was largely represented and these were present from abroad: J. W. DePuy, Will Young and Arthur Dance of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Ross of Adrian; Robt. Boyce and wife and David Boyce and wife of Cambridge. The different parlors were elegantly trimmed with floral ornaments and evergreens, constituting a bower of beauty.

Bridal gifts, in great variety, both useful and ornamental, were the center of attraction, proving the lasting character of the friendships which the young couple had formed. Both bride and groom are favorites in Tecumseh's social circles. Two of our oldest and most respected families are represented in this union. The bride is a graduate of our High School and the groom acquired an education in Anderson's Dry Goods store, which he utilized to obtain a fine business position in Detroit. Among the gifts received was an elegant French clock from his former associates in the store, Jno. Primrose, Gus Cummins and Harry Martin of Chicago, who telegraphed their regrets as the ceremony closed.

The happy pair left on the afternoon train for Detroit, where a nice house is in readiness to receive them and where they will begin the realities of housekeeping at once. As they left the home of their childhood for their domicile in the city, the hearty good wishes and "God bless yous" that accompanied them were an earnest of the connubial joys and worldly success which we all trust may be theirs.

A Narrow Escape.

The following item, clipped from the Los Angeles Express of Aug. 16th, gives a little experience had by Rev. W. C. Burns, which he will not care to repeat:

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 16.—The Sun to-day says there have just arrived from exploration of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado W. C. Burns of Detroit, geological correspondent, and Dr. Dunlap of the sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich. They and Prof. James, a fellow of the Royal Historical Society of London, went over the new stage route to Grand Canyon. In exploring a side canyon they nearly perished for lack of food and water, having expected to return the same day. Enthusiasm carried them on, and they were two days getting back. Food and water were exhausted, and they got only enough from a rock pocket to moisten their lips. The second day Burns and the Professor gave up, too weak to proceed and their tongues swelling. The doctor, having more vitality, pushed on five miles and secured relief, just in time.

G. A. R. and W. R. C. Attention!

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Ry. will sell sell excursion tickets to Washington, D. C., and return, from Sept. 13th to 20th inclusive, good to return until October 10th, 1892, and on Sept. 17th will run a Special Car on the train leaving Tecumseh at 3:15 p. m., to be attached to the Special Washington Train at Adrian, giving a daylight ride through the mountains of Pennsylvania, arriving at Washington on the evening of the 18th.

Fare for the round trip $12.25.

Stop-overs may be made between Harrisburg and Washington in either direction, giving ample time to visit the Battlefield of Gettysburg, etc.

FRIENDS AND PATRONS.

The object of this article is to most emphatically contradict the report that was circulated by some misinformed (?) person on Thursday last, to the effect that I had gone out of business.

I had no intention of going out of business, and never have had. In order to more forcibly demonstrate this fact I herewith cordially invite all lovers of Fine Woolens and High Class Tailoring to call and see my entirely new stock of Fall and Winter Goods, which will be ready for display on Saturday, Sept. 3rd. These goods consist of as full a line of Woolen Goods for Gentlemen's Dress, as has ever been shown in Tecumseh, Worsted and Scotch Suitings for Business, genuine Irish Frieze, Montagnac and German Beavers, and Trouserings of both Domestic and Foreign make.

As heretofore, I shall make a speciality of Full Dress Garments, using the best quality of Worsteds, my aim being to turn out more and better work, in this line than ever before.

Thanking you all for favors already shown, I respectfully solicit your patronage for the future.

Yours,

Messrs. Sheppard & Johnson came to our village two years ago with their merry-go-round and by their gentlemanly method of conducting business they soon gained the confidence of parents and children. They are now located east of the Central School Building and will remain until Saturday night.

Next Sabbath evening, Sept. 11th, at 7:30 p. m., Rev. O. J. Perrin will deliver a lecture at the M. E. Church. Subject: The peril of Dust and Dirt to Our Lives; and how to prevent the Spread of Cholera, should that dread disease descend upon our land. Special invitation to the citizens of Tecumseh to attend.

A false statement is going the rounds of the press to the effect that visitors will not be able to get any drinking water at the World's Fair without paying for it. There will be an abundance of excellent water free to all who want it. Those who wish to drink mineral spring water, piped to the Exposition grounds from Waukesha, Wis., a hundred miles distant, will have to pay one cent a glass for it. The free will be that of Lake Michigan, brought by tunnel from a point four miles from shore, and much better than the inhabitants of most large cities are supplied with.

The fifth annual fair of the Bedford Fair Association will be held on their grounds near Lambertville, Ohio, four and one-half miles north-west of Toledo, on September 27, 28, 29 and 30. Judging from the premium list received the fair promises to be well worthy of patronage.

The Red Clawson wheat is all the rage this year. It promises to take the place among red wheat that the Old Clawson did among white. Those wanting seed of this excellent variety will do well to see A. P. Coddington, who has about 100 bushels which he will sell at a reasonable price.

Information is wanted regarding Mary Murphy, who left Rockwood, Ontario, fourteen years ago for Michigan. If living she is now about 48 years old. Any information concerning her will be thankfully received by her brother. Lawrence Murphy, Holly, N. Y. She is believed to be somewhere in this section of the state.

George William Curtis had been associated with Harper's Weekly almost since its beginning in 1857, and had written the "Editor's Easy Chair" in Harper's Magazine since 1853. The next number of the Weekly, published September 7th, will in a certain sense be a memorial number, and will contain appropriate sketches of his life, character, and services, with a portrait and other illustrations.

An old newspaper, dated Jan. 4, 1800, printed at Kingston, Ulster Co., N. Y. was found by Daniel Fiske, of this city, and his sister, Mrs. J. W. Thurber, of Sand Creek, while looking over some old papers which had belonged to their father. The paper gives notice of the death of George Washington, and was issued during the administration of John Adams.—The Messenger.

As the 2nd. Monday in September is appointed by the Constitution for the annual election of officers, the room of the Tecumseh Library Association will be open next Monday evening, Sept. 12th, at half past seven for the election of officers for the ensuing year. As it is now three years since we have been able to get enough stock holders together to hold an election, it is very much to be hoped sufficient interest may have accumulated to enable us to go on at least constitutionally for another year. A. P. LEE, Sec'y.

Dr. Eugene Tremain returned from Chicago Tuesday morning.

Robt. Hicks says he is well satisfied with his new position in Toledo.

The Democratic County convention will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 20th.

The premium list of the Morenci Fair is at hand which will be held next week, Sept. 14, 15 and 16.

Miss Ella Sutherland, of Lambertville, returned home Tuesday, after a two week's visit at H. H. Wescott's.

Judge Andrew Howell and family, of Detroit, have been spending several days at their Sand Lake Cottage.

Will McCowen started Tuesday morning for his home at Seymour, Ind., having finished his visit in Tecumseh.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a Madam Willard memorial service at Mrs. O. Q. Jones' Friday at 3 p. m. All are invited.

The plastering is about finished on the Hurry School House and the new building will be ready for occupancy by the first of next month.

The name of the Democratic nominee for Commissioner of the State Land office is George T. Shaffer; not Geo. F. or Geo. L. as it appears in many papers.

The political hats at Strong & McNair's have been going off like hot cakes for the past week. The white hat with a black band seems to be the favorite.

Miss Viva Howell returned last week Tuesday from a few week's visit with her sister, Mrs. C. E. Triplett of Washington, D. C. She resumed her duties of teaching Monday morning.

E. G. Wilson, of Raisin, walked off with the nomination for sheriff at the Republican county convention. Ed. will make a strong candidate and a tip top sheriff too, if he gets there.

The Democrats of Tecumseh are requested to meet in caucus at the Council Rooms on Thursday, Sept. 15. at 7:30 p. m., to chose delegates to attend the county convention at Adrian on the 20th.

Frank Slater has opened a new meat market in the building just north of Spayde's store. He will keep a full supply of fresh meats of all kinds and hopes by liberal dealing to merit his share of the public patronage.

The ladies' aid society of the M. E. church, will hold the first supper of the year in the church parlors on Wednesday, Sept. 14th. Business meeting at 4 p. m. Mrs. Hause's committee will serve supper from 5:30 to 6:30.

The ladies social of the Universalist church will meet at the residence of E. D. Burlingame on Friday afternoon of next week, Sept. 16th. A full attendance is desired as business of importance will come up for discussion.

Jackson had a big celebration last Monday, Labor Day. The cigar makers of Tecumseh went up in a body, as they are jurisdiction members of Union 314 of Jackson. A special train run over the Jackson Branch and a large crowd attended from this section.

The Tecumseh schools opened last Monday with a large attendance in all the departments. The High School department was so crowded that additional seating accommodations had to be provided. The enrollment in the High School is larger than ever before.

Mr. and Mrs. Coddington gave a reception to about seventy-five of their friends last Tuesday evening. A new method was adopted for choosing partners for supper. Small cards containing divided quotations and numbered in duplicate were distributed among the guests, and each lady sought out the gentlemen holding the same number with herself. The reading of the quotations caused much merriment. The company remained until a late hour and all present voted it a most enjoyable gathering.

The following is a list of teachers who will train the youth in the Tecumseh schools during the coming year.

High School—Lyman M. Kellogg, Flora H. Hartbeck, Antoinette E. Latson, Margaret C. Gray.

Grammar Department—Alice S. Wimple, Flora E. Burt, Nannie Kyle, Josie Ross.

Primary Department—East Branch—Minnie Jones, Anna H. Morse, Myra C. Chase.

West Branch—Mable Wiley. Edna McClue.

North Branch—Carrie O. Millspaugh.

Vocal Music—Dora R. Grayson.

Last Friday afternoon about four o'clock, while C. H. Carpenter was drilling in a well on Mack Osborn's farm, six and one-half miles north-east of Tecumseh, he felt his drill drop, and before he could get the tools out of the well, the water mixed with gas flew to the height of fifty feet. The stream was so strong that two men could not hold a piece of pipe while it was being secured on, so to throw the water off from the celery, which was in danger of being flooded. At this writing, the well seems to have more force than at first.

Postmaster Lawrence started a movement a few weeks ago to have a second mail route established on the Jackson branch. The route has been ordered and it will be started as soon as the car can be prepared for it. This will give all stations on this Branch two regular daily mails each way. W. C. Hopkins, who has been running on the N. Y. & Chicago line, has been transferred to this new route, which will put a trained mailing clerk in charge of it. Our citizens are to be congratulated on the success of this new scheme, which they owe to Capt. Lawrence.

Eugene Hodges is now at work for the Lake Shore Railway and belongs to a carpenter's gang.

The September number of The Forum contains a masterly article by David A. Wells, entitled. "A Tariff for Revenue, what it really Means." It is the ablest exposition of that question that has yet been published, in so concise a form as to be accessible to every reader. Every voter in the land ought to read it, before depositing his vote next fall.

Beers' Post G. A. R. decided at the last meeting, on Monday evening, to attend the National Encampment at Washington as a Post, and it was decided to go by the C. J. & M. R'y, in connection with the Wheeling & Lake Erie R'y & Baltimore & Ohio R'y, as the most direct and desirable route, provided they offered terms and accommodations equal to other routes. It is proposed by them that a car will be furnished to hitch on a head-quarter train leaving Toledo, Sept. 17, at 7 p. m. and to run through to Washington in 21 hours. The public are notified that all who intend making the trip are requested to confer with the subscriber for sleepers, rates, etc. G. S. VANTYNE. Commander.

—It is poor economy to put off attending a Normal or Collage because of hard times. It would be equally wise to put off planting corn because of the expense of the seed. In gaining an education time lost now is lost forever. The expense of attending some of our excellent higher institutions, such as the Fayette Normal University, of Fayette, O., is now so low that any one may find a way to meet it. Do not wait until another year. Attend now. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do You know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements, and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming from all parts of the country, with promises and assurances that so much comfort for $1.00 the price is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subject her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won the title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c. or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new article. Remember the Electric Foot Warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

A SAMPLE.

John T. Rich's Idea of a Public Office.

He Cost the State Twice as Much as His Democratic Successor in Office.

John T. Rich, the republican nominee for governor, was not an economist in the expenditure of public money. The expense incurred in the conduct of a public office is a good gauge of the incumbent's idea of a public trust. Mr. Rich was succeeded as railroad commissioner of Michigan by a democrat. The management of the office by his democratic successor has resulted in a reduction of over 50 per cent. in the expense of conducting the office.

Here are the facts: The expense for office stationery during the last fiscal year of Rich's administration was $219; for postage, $154, making a total of $373. Under the first fiscal year of democratic management, the business of the office, which is constantly increasing, required, through the exercise of economy, an expenditure of only $119.83 for stationery and of only $50 for postage, a total of $169.83 as against $373. This is a reduction of 55 per cent. The amount saved in dollars and cents is not large, but only because the total expense was not large. There must have been a deal of political correspondence carried on at the taxpayers' expense under Mr. Rich. In any event, the subsequent administration of the office shows that Rich was extravagant, and extravagance in the expenditure of public money should not be rewarded by political promotion.

HOW TO VOTE.

Make No Mistake in Marking Your Ticket.

Observe Carefully the Directions Given Below and Your Vote Will Be Counted.

Every voter should cut this out and make himself familiar with the method of voting under the new law. All the tickets will be printed upon one ballot. The names of the offices to be voted for will be printed in a perpendicular column at the left side of the ballot. Each ticket will be printed in a column by itself upon the one ballot with the vignette and name of the party at the head of the ticket. Immediately below the party name will be an open square thus, ☐ for the voter's mark—X—to be made with a stamp furnished by the inspectors, or with a lead pencil. But no colored pencil can be used, such as blue, green or red. The ballot will not be counted if any distinguishing mark other than the X is placed upon it. Any words written anywhere upon the ballot will render it void. The voter's mark—X—must be placed within the open space at the head of the ticket or in the small square ☐ at the left of the name of the candidate for whom the citizen wishes to vote. The mark—X—placed anywhere else will render the ballot void. Get the official ballot of the inspector; be sure that his initials are on one corner on the back of the ballot; go alone into the booth, and, if you wish to vote the democratic ticket straight, make your mark—X—in the square at the head of the ticket under the party name, and over the column in which the names of the democratic candidates are printed, as shown in the following diagram, which represents a part of the state ticket to be voted this fall:

OFFICIAL BALLOT.

NAME OF OFFICE VOTED FOR	VIGNETTE
Attorney General	DEMOCRATIC.	☐
Secretary of State		☐
Treasurer		☐
Lieutenant Governor		☐
Governor		☐
ADOLPHUS A. ELLIS		☐
FREDERICK MARVIN		☐
JAMES P. EDWARDS		☐
ALLEN B. MORSE		☒
GERRIT J. DIEKEMA	REPUBLICAN.	☐
JOSEPH H. HAMBLETON		☐
J. WIGHT GIDDINGS		☐
JOHN T. RICH		☒
MYRON H. WALKER	PROHIBITIONIST.	☐
DAVID TAYLOR		☐
GEORGE R. MALONE		☐
JOHN RUSSEL		☐
J. W. WELTON	PEOPLE'S.	☐
GEORGE H. SHERMAN		☐
JOHN W. EWING		☐

A ballot marked in the manner shown above would be counted for all the candidates on the democratic ticket, because marking the square at the head of the ticket indicates that all the candidates upon that ticket are voted for and all will count. The cut below represents a split republican ticket:

OFFICIAL BALLOT.

NAME OF OFFICE VOTED FOR	VIGNETTE
Attorney General	DEMOCRATIC.	☐
Secretary of State		☐
Treasurer		☐
Lieutenant Governor		☐
Governor		☐
ADOLPHUS A. ELLIS		☐
FREDERICK MARVIN		☐
JAMES P. EDWARDS		☐
ALLEN B. MORSE		☒
GERRIT J. DIEKEMA	REPUBLICAN.	☐
JOSEPH H. HAMBLETON		☐
J. WIGHT GIDDINGS		☐
JOHN T. RICH		☒
MYRON H. WALKER	PROHIBITIONIST.	☐
DAVID TAYLOR		☐
GEORGE R. MALONE		☐
JOHN RUSSEL		☐
J. W. WELTON	PEOPLE'S.	☐
GEORGE H. SHERMAN		☐
JOHN W. EWING		☐

The above ticket is marked as by a republican who desired to vote for the democratic candidates for governor and treasurer. By marking the republican ticket in the square at the head of the column of republican candidates, all upon the ticket are voted for. But, by erasing (as in the diagram above) the republican candidates for governor and treasurer, by drawing a line through their names, and then placing the mark in the open squares at the left of the names of Allen B. Morse and Frederick Marvin, a split republican ticket is voted, counting for all the republican candidates with the exception of those for governor and treasurer, and counting for the democratic candidates for those offices—Morse and Marvin. If the republican ticket should be marked at the head of the column and the squares marked at the left of the names of Morse and Marvin, without erasing the names of the corresponding republican candidates for governor and treasurer—Rich and Hambitzer—the ballot could not, and would not, be counted for any one for governor or treasurer, for the reason that two votes would be given for each of those offices; the whole of the republican ticket being voted for by marking the square at the top of the column; while Morse and Marvin would be voted for by placing the x in the squares at the left of their names. No person would be allowed to vote twice for the same office, therefore neither of the votes would be counted for those two offices. Remember that a mark in the square at the head of either ticket votes for all the candidates on that ticket, and to vote for a candidate on any other ticket the name of the candidate for that office must be erased from the ticket voted and a mark (x) made in the square at the left of the candidate for whom you wish to vote. The names of all candidates for any one office will be found on the same horizontal line with the name of the office for which they are candidates, at the extreme left of the ballot. When the ticket is properly marked to suit the voter, and before leaving the booth, he must fold his ballot so that no part of the face thereof shall be exposed, and so that the initials of the inspector shall be on the outside thereof. On leaving the booth he shall at once deliver his ballot in public view to the inspector designated to receive the same. No person shall be entitled to more than one ballot unless, by accident, he has spoiled the one first delivered to him, when, by returning the spoiled one, another can be obtained. No electioneering is allowed within one hundred feet of the polls and no one is allowed to witness the marking of a ticket unless the person voting is unable to mark his own ticket, in which case the board will designate some one to do it for him.

LARGE DIVIDENDS.

Princely Profits of a Lake Superior Mining Company.

In a suit brought against the Jackson Iron Mining Company, the secretary was asked to state the dividends declared by the company, and he testified that the following were the dividends for the last twenty years:

In 1865, 45 per cent.; in 1854, 100 per cent.; in 1865, 60 per cent.; in 1866, 70 per cent.; in 1867, 30 per cent.; in 1868, 30 per cent.; in 1869, 95 per cent.; in 1870, 90 per cent.; in 1871, 100 per cent.; in 1872, 175 per cent.; in 1873, 75 per cent.; in 1874, 100 per cent.; in 1875, 180 per cent.; in 1876, 128 per cent.; in 1877, 115 per cent.; in 1878, 65 per cent.; in 1879, 95 per cent.; in 1880, 60 per cent.; in 1881, 100 per cent.; in 1882, 75 per cent. For twenty years the dividends averaged 85½ per cent. per annum.

THE BARS ARE UP.

President Harrison Hopes to Save America from the Cholera.

Vessels from Infected Cities Must Be Quarantined for a Period of Twenty Days—Immigration Practically Prohibited.

SHIPS SHUT OUT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The cholera excitement reached its climax here Thursday upon the hasty arrival of President Harrison and his summary call for a conference to consider the best means of keeping out the disease. It was determined to proclaim a twenty-day quarantine against all vessels carrying immigrants coming to this country from any foreign port, and the following circular was issued by the direction of the president:

"Quarantine restrictions and inspection are said in the prevention of the introduction of cholera into the United States.

"Treasury Department, Office of the Supervising Surgeon-General, United States Marine Hospital Service, Washington, Sept. 1, 1892.—To collectors of customs, medical officers of the marine-hospital service, foreign steamship companies, state and local boards of health:

"It having been officially declared that cholera is prevailing in various portions of Russia, Germany and France and at certain ports in Great Britain, as well as in Asia; and it having been made to appear that immigrants in large numbers are coming into the United States from the infected districts aforesaid, and that they and their personal effects are liable to introduce cholera into the United States, and that vessels conveying them are thereby a direct menace to the public health; and it having been further shown that under the laws of the several states quarantine detentions may be imposed upon these vessels a sufficient length of time to insure against the introduction of contagious diseases, it is hereby ordered that no vessel from any foreign port carrying immigrants shall be admitted to enter at any port of the United States until said vessels shall have undergone a quarantine detention of twenty days (unless such detention is forbidden by the laws of the state or the regulations made thereunder) and of such greater number of days as may be fixed in each special case by the state authorities.

"This circular to take immediate effect, except in cases of vessel afloat at this date, which will be made the subject of special consideration upon due application to the department.

"WALTER WYMAN.
"Supervising Surgeon General United States Marine Hospital Service.
"CHARLES FOSTER, Secretary Treasury.
"Approved: BENJAMIN HARRISON."

It is admitted in official circles that every precaution necessary has now been taken by the government officials who are charged with the responsibility of keeping out the pestilence and nothing remains except to strengthen the medical examiners along the Canadian border and provide for better methods of inspection and disinfection in many southern ports which are now admitted to be weak in this respect. Neither the president nor any of his advisers is sure that the regulations adopted will prevent an invasion of cholera, but they say that they have exhausted every resource, and if the disease comes it will have to be met and dealt with in the proper way.

CHOLERA-INFECTED SHIPS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The steamships Normannia and Rugia both arrived at this port from Hamburg Saturday night, and both reported that deaths from cholerine had taken place on the voyage. Both ships are now detained at quarantine, as is also the Stubenhuk, which also arrived from Hamburg.

It was 11:15 o'clock at quarantine when Dr. Jenkins admitted reporters. He said: "Gentlemen, according to my reports there were nine cases of cholerine on the Rugia. There are five convalescents and there were four deaths. On the Normannia there were five deaths and there are now four convalescents. On the Moravia there is one additional case of cholerine. It is an 8-year-old boy."

At 11 o'clock Saturday night Dr. Jenkins returned to quarantine from a visit to the infected vessels in the lower bay. He found that there were two more deaths on the Normannia and one more on the Rugia.

There were six deaths in quarantine Sunday. The cholera fleet in the lower bay was visited during the afternoon by Quarantine Commissioner Allen, who said that three of the six deaths occurred on the Normannia, one on the Rugia and two on the Moravia.

QUARANTINE AT DETROIT.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 5.—Dr. Duffield, in his capacity as health officer of Detroit and backed by the authority of the United States, has decided to establish a twenty days' quarantine at Detroit. The decision was made after reading a telegram from Quebec, giving the report of the international health commission upon the Canadian quarantine station at Grosse isle. As soon as this order is enforced immigration between Montreal, Quebec and Detroit must cease.

THE SITUATION ABROAD.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Not until the past week has Europe realized the full measure of the awful calamity which has befallen the old world in the cholera epidemic. More than 150,000 human beings in Europe have already perished of the pestilence. That estimate probably is far too low. It is based almost solely upon the official reports from the infested districts, and those reports, there is grave reason for believing, in many cases have fallen far short of the truth. More than nine-tenths of the victims of the scourge have been Russians, and about the details of its terrific work in that country the world knows almost nothing.

Committed Suicide in Sweden.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 5.—A cablegram received from Stockholm, Sweden, announced that Thour Munthe, a prominent real estate broker of this city, committed suicide there, where he went three months ago to settle up his father's estate and visit his aged mother. He leaves a wife and four children and was expected home soon. He carried $15,000 life insurance.

Detroit Manufactory Burned.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 5.—The plant of Buick & Sherwood, manufacturers of sanitary closets, was destroyed by fire Saturday night. Two frame residences also were consumed and a couple of cottages badly scorched. Total loss, about $85,000; insurance one-third.

IDENTIFIED.

She strolled through the streets of the country town,
'Neath her sun umbrella bright;
Arrayed in a trailing summer gown
Of texture soft and light.

Her cheeks wore the tint of the sweet June rose,
Her teeth were white as pearls,
And she looked to be in her well-made clothes
The daintiest of girls.

She gazed about in a lofty way,
For a lofty look had she,
And the people wondered every day
Who the maiden fair might be.

Then they found she carried a dainty pail
Each day to the woods near by,
And hunted there for the bug and snail
And the bright-winged butterfly.

Then their wonder ceased, and they went their ways
To their neighbors to rehearse,
That a schoolma'am was there on her holidays
From the bug of the velvet.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Why Mr. Sage Didn't Buy the Old Homestead.

Ma got into a perfec' swivet to sell the lan'. S' 'e, "George, now while the boom is ragin' in Virginia, now is the time we may hope for a livin' price for our splendid Spottsylvania corn lan's and magnificent medder bottoms. George," s' 'e, "stir your stumps and sell the lan'."

S' I: "Ma, when the pinch comes, you ain't agoin' to get your own consent to part with the old homestead."

S' 'e: "George, now that the niggers are free what is to keep down the bushes and briars? A lone, lorn widow woman and one gray-headed boy of fifty (you know you are fifty, George), can't manage all the lan' and stock we've got. Sell the lan', George, and me and you will board at the Exchange hotel in Richmond, with the bong tong of Virginia, in style."

"Ma," s' I, "I don't b'lieve you'll part with your gums and gourds, not to live with Queen Victoria and eat oyshters three times a day. I think I know you better'n you know yourself."

Then ma got mad and cried and said I was "impident and sassy to her," and I'd oughter "carry out her views and uphold her."

Pa had never crossed her livin', nor nobody else, so it ended in my postin' down to Fredericksburg in my carryall and puttin' the plantation, crops, stock, etc., into the hands of McKay, lan' agent.

The town was alive with northern capitalists and visitors at that time. Some came to see about their dead, interred in the great union cemetery there, it bein' soon after the war was over. It was like the verse we used to say at school:

"Many came to see the wonder,
To seek for gold and search for plunder," and some few to cast in their lots with ours.

McKay told me of a couple that got off the train that day. Said the man was polite to his wife and gave Lame Bill a dollar.

A lan' agent knows how to pick a gentleman right well, though not so well as an old Virginia house nigger. The one who used to tote the wood in for the parlor fire, hang your horse or carry him to water and bring your boots.

Thinks I: "I'll drive 'em out, and show the premises while ma is in the notion."

So out I go with Mr. and Mrs. Sage, a nice couple, rich and unhealthy, wanting to try southern a'r.

There was a cheerful blaze on the parlor hearth. Ma b'leeves in a little blaze, all the year 'roun, though the weather was mighty mild. Injun summer.

Kesia, the cook, tossed up a little hot dinner in no time, for we were hungry as an army of locusses after our drive. Briled ham an' eggs, fried sausage and hoecakes, and whilst ma poured out the coffee and October peaches in the gilt saucers I studied her face.

To my astonishment she run on about the fashions—a thing she had took no stock in since pa died.

She wouldn't catch my eye, and I sorter mistrusted her, but carried Mr. Sage all over the plantation, and he was delighted.

"Just what he was in search of. He wanted everything as it stood, the colts, the calves, hogs, 'hats, boots and all.' Thought he would put 'a new barn here,' and 'a hay-house there,' and 'a vineyard,' and 'double the sheep in the medder.'"

Him and Mrs. Sage mapped it off like a picture by the time they were ready to leave next day.

Of course, I drove them back to town, twenty miles o' rough roads and mighty busy time o' year.

I and McKay made all the 'rangements for the transfer of the property, and I come on back home.

Still mistrustin' of ma, I kep' cle'r o' the subject. We both shunned it, and durin' the followin' week I smoked a month's allowance of tobacco, and ma clicked and rattled her knittin'-needles as if life depended on her gettin' that sock finished, and I'll be shot if she didn't knit the leg a yard long.

Byme-by McKay came drivin' up in a fine double buggy, with Mr. Sage, to pay down the first installment.

When Cindy ushered 'em in ma dropped her long sock leg and her hands commenced to tremble.

It was a good sale. We were gettin' all we asked, and a crackin' price it was; for ma thought her dirt was a sight bettern'n other folks' dirt. Not a hitch—nowhar.

All of us set talkin' as friendly as you please 'round the blaze on the hearth. Little black Joe on his own 'sponsibility han's 'round a waiter of maiden blush apples, and Cindy, the house gal, not to be outdone, gits out ginger cakes and a foamin' pitcher of sweet cider.

Ma set shakin' and trembly the whole endurin' time.

Mr. Sage he set back in pa's old stuffet leather armcheer, with heels on the fender like comfort itself, and diluted about the chances he'd mind to make.

"A hundred Southdown sheep" for the hill pasture—an' "grainin' forty beeves;" "ten acres in turnips" and "ten in celery," and all such wild talk as city farmers indulge in.

Finally the pen was dipped and handed to ma, but 'sted er takin' it she clinched her hands together hard, and laughin' a tremulous little pitiful laugh, s' 'e:

"Mr. Sage, do you know how high corn grows on this plantation?"

S' 'e: "No, mum."

"Then I'll tell"—holding her hand a foot above the carpet—"exactly so high and no higher. Then the blades turn rusty and red and dop over like dog ears, and a little nubbin comes the size of my finger."

Mr. Sage sorter smiled, for he had commented on the big cornstubs in the field. Ma gave another dry laugh, and s' 'e:

"Your sheep will all die. There ain't enough grass on the uplan's to paster a rabbit, and the medders are pizenous with chills and fevers, and we're subject to pneumonia and mumps and measles, and it's the worst kind of luck to move at your time of life, anyhow."

Mr. Sage says very gently:

"Madam, I respec' your feelin's," and they walked out on the porch.

Then ma bust out in the pitifullest sobbin' and cryin', and she and me had it.

She blamed me, her only son, for wantin' in her old age to turn his ma "homeless and houseless, roofless and a'."

"My son," she says, "the air don't blow so sweet and pure over no other piece of God's earth, and things all so convenient to my hand. I could go to my places the darkest night that comes."

Though I'll swear you'd have to travel a mile to go the rounds of her flower garden, greenhouse, dairy, weavin'-house, ice-house and all the fowl-houses and appurtenances. They were located far apart in old slavery days, to give occupation to the niggers, I suppose.

"And, oh, George, my two babies in the graveyard, and I'd picked out my own place by your pa's side. I'm like an old tree. I can't stand transplantin'. Oh, son, to think of your doin' such a cruel-hearted thing in my old age!"

Women may be no great shakes at hard, soun' reasonin', but ma's a very pretty talker, indeed, and, by grabs, I felt sorter so myself and downright aggravated with McKay. What call had he to fly off like a potleg in such a sudden swivet to oust us from the property which had belonged to our generation ever since William the Conqueror, and for aught I know helped him to conquer it?

The honor and glory of settin' up in a stiff-starched collar at the Exchange hotel, hobnobbin' with the Virginia legislatur', and the judges, and the bong tong would be but poor compensation for my pack of houn's and blood horses, and the foxes and birds and things I was used to. I would be but a lone, lost boy, cast adrift, even if I did eat oyshters three times a day.

"Ain't there no way of gettin' out of this trap?" says ma, wipin' her eyes on the long sockleg.

"I b'leeve I'd die anywhere else."

"If we pay McKay his commission and persuade Mr. Sage to give out the notion," says I, doubtfully.

"How much is the commission, George?" she asked, eagerly.

"It amounts to ninety-eight dollars and seventy cents, but"—

"George," she spoke quickly, "if you will step out to the stables for awhile I think I can compose my mind and solemnize my thoughts!"

The colts came whinnyin' to meet me and rubbed their noses on my shoulder; the calves, the pigs, everything in the yard came at me in a body.

I got a hamper of nubbins and scattered 'em, and somethin' kep' gettin' in my eye, and I thought I would actually blow my blamed nose off, and the more I thought of McKay's officiousness the madder I got. But when I got back to the parlor it was quiet as a church, and there was ma out at the yard gate biddin' the gent'men "farwell." Such was her haste to get them off and away.

My dear old mother! Her eyes shone bright as a young girl's—she's smilin' and lookin' as pleased as if she'd been left a fortune.

Mr. Sage smiled, too, and bowed over her thin, wrinkled hand like a true-hearted gent'man.

Ma had carried all her p'ints with Mr. Sage, then ran and got the shotbag she had kep' her egg and chicken and butter money in for forty years. She paid McKay the commission and begged and plead with him to go away and never come there on no such erran' again so long as she was on top of earth.—Eva M. de Jarnette, in N. O. Times-Democrat.

Berber and Egyptian.

The character of ancient Egyptian speech is still a matter of discussion among scholars. Very remarkable resemblances have been noted between early Aryan and Egyptian words, as also between the latter and the Turanian vocables. A large number of Semitic terms also appear in Egyptian, generally regarded as foreign, but including the names of colors, numbers and others, which it is difficult to suppose would have been borrowed. The syntax and pronouns of the Egyptian are much nearer to Semitic speech than to either Aryan or Turanian, and the view held by the late Dr. Birch, and which appears destined to prevail, is that Egyptian was remotely akin to the earliest Semitic speech. On the other hand, the connection of the Berber dialects with Coptic, and thus with Egyptian, has long been remarked, and was recognized from the first by Champollion when he recovered the vocabulary of the ancient language. As instances of this connection we may quote the names for "lion" (Egyptian, tsam; Berber, izem); for "drink" (Egyptian, sau; Berber, suu); for "river" (Egyptian, alu; Berber, ilu); for "noise" (Egyptian, anu; Berber, anau); and verbs such as "to die" (Egyptian, met; Berber, amt); "slay" (Egyptian, nak; Berber, nek), with many others.—The Scottish Review.

GEORGE W. CURTIS.

This Noted Man Passes Away at His Staten Island Home.

He Was Editor of Harper's Weekly and President of the Civil Service Reform League—Brief Sketch of His Busy Career.

A FAMOUS MAN GONE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—George William Curtis died a few minutes after 2 a. m. Wednesday at his home in Livingston, S. I. He was conscious at the end and suffered no pain. At the time he was seated in his big easy chair with his son, Dr. E. G. Curtis, of West Newton, Mass., standing by his side. Death was painless. Mr. Curtis was conscious up to within a few minutes of the end. Then he sank into semi-unconsciousness. Just as he died he muttered something unintelligible, and his head fell over on his breast. Mrs. Curtis and his only living daughter, Elizabeth, were in the house at the time, but Dr. Curtis did not summon them to the side of the dying man. He said he believed his father knew that he was about to die.

Mr. Curtis became ill about two months ago, when he began to complain of pains in the abdomen. Dr. Janeway was called and he, in consultation with Dr. McBurney, of this city; Dr. Walker, of Staten Island, and Dr. Curtis, made a careful examination. There had been some talk of cancer of the stomach. These physicians announced that it was impossible to learn the exact nature of the trouble until it made further progress or the swelling below the abdomen which had developed, subsided. They were of opinion, however, that there was a tendency to dropsy with other complications not then determinable. At that time Mr. Curtis suffered a great deal of pain, and spent much time in walking up and down his room. He was told that opium would give him relief, but he declined to take the drug.

George William Curtis was born at Providence, R. I., February 24, 1824. He received his education at a private school at Jamaica Plain, Mass., and at the age of 15 removed with his father from Providence to New York, where for a year he was a clerk in a mercantile house. In 1842 he went with his elder brother to reside at Brook Farm in West Roxbury, Mass., where he passed a year and a half in study and agricultural labor, after which he went to Concord, Mass., and with his brother spent eighteen months there, living with a farmer, and both taking part regularly in the ordinary work of the farm, and afterward for six months tilling a small piece of land on their own account. In 1846 Mr. Curtis went to Europe, and, after a prolonged stay in Italy and Berlin, traveled in Egypt and Syria. In 1850 he returned to the United States, and published his book: "Nile Notes of Howadji." He soon after joined the editorial staff of the New York Tribune, and in the summer of 1851 wrote a series of letters to that journal from various watering places which were afterward collected in a volume under the title: "Lotus Eating." His second book, however, was on "Howadji in Syria," published in 1852. In the autumn of 1892 Putnam's Monthly was commenced in New York, of which Mr. Curtis was one of the original editors, and with which he continued connected till the magazine ceased to exist. In the meantime it had passed into the hands of the firm of Dix, Edwards & Co., in which Mr. Curtis was a special partner, pecuniarily responsible, but taking no part in its commercial management. In the spring of 1857 the house was found to be insolvent for a large amount, and Mr. Curtis sank his private fortune in the endeavor to save its creditors from loss, which he finally accomplished in 1873. Other books of Mr. Curtis, besides those already mentioned, are "The Potiphar Papers," and "Prue and I." He was connected with Harper's Monthly from 1853 until his death, and was chief editor of Harper's Weekly, for which he began to write in 1857. In these publications he has printed some of the most charming essays in the English language. Mr. Curtis took an active interest in politics, and was a delegate to several of the national conventions of the republican party. He left the party in 1884 on account of the nomination of Mr. Blaine, and was at one time the recognized leader of the mugwumps. He was president of the civil service reform league and an eloquent advocate of the reform to which it is devoted.

AN AWFUL TRAGEDY.

A Quarrel Over Money Matters Causes a Triple Murder and Suicide.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 2.—John Skinner, a hired man working for George Feetner, a German farmer living 2½ miles from here, Wednesday night used a revolver with deadly effect, first shooting Feetner, killing him, then going upstairs and shooting Mrs. Feetner, who was lying sick in bed with typhoid fever, and Mr. Feetner's mother, a gray-haired, feeble old lady. He then placed the revolver to his own head and ended his existence. Trouble over money matters caused the deed.

Death of an Old Engineer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—George Vernon, probably the oldest locomotive engineer in the world, died Friday at his home in Bordentown, N. J. Vernon learned how to handle a locomotive as long ago as 1831 on the Newcastle (Del.) road. Years ago he was relieved of hard work by the Pennsylvania road and appointed foreman of engineers, with headquarters in Bordentown. Vernon appeared for duty every day until shortly before his death. He was nearly 87 years old.

Must Serve His Time Now.

VALPARAISO, Ind., Sept. 3.—Some time ago William Fogarty was given a sentence of two years for robbery, but execution was suspended during good behavior. Wednesday night he entered a house and stole a pair of gold spectacles. Thursday Judge Gillett sentenced him to two years in the Michigan City prison.

Buried Many People in the Ruins.

NAPLES, Sept. 5.—The old palazzo in the Via Taverna collapsed Sunday, burying many persons in the ruins. One body terribly crushed and mutilated, and the bodies of three persons still alive but badly injured have already been extricated.

Two Thousand Killed.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Vienna says it is reported from Merv that 2,000 Afghans were killed in the last battle with the revolting Hazaras.

A Jurist Found Dead.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 3.—Judge William E. Deck, for two terms chief justice of the supreme court of Colorado, was found dead in bed. He was 55 years old.

MONROE, Mich., July 18, 1891.
Dr. O. J. Fay & Co.:
Gentlemen.—It is with pleasure that we reply to your letter asking about our success with Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Six months ago we gave our first order and since then we have sold eight times as much as our first order amounted to more than any other lung medicine we sell. Our customers after once using it want no other and they are always sure to recommend it to some other sufferer. It could not give better satisfaction and we have so much faith in what it will do that we are not afraid to recommend it to any person in need of a lung medicine. With many wishes for your success,
Yours truly,
W. UAGEN & SON.

TREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION.

The political campaign brings the tariff again to the front. But, after all, the strongest free traders believe in protection to the home, the family, the health. There are many ways of doing the latter, but if one is bilious, dull, poor in appetite, with headache, heaviness and lack of energy, there is no better way than to use a few bottles of Parmelee's Manrake and Dandelion Bitters. They will improve your appetite, aid digestion and brace you up generally. Only 25 cents a large bottle. Sold by dealers.

A PILE OF MONEY WASTED.

People have wasted piles of money trying to cure Piles. A cheaper and surer way is to buy a box of Parmelee's Pile Suppositories for 50 cents, and see what they will do. You can get your money back if they do not benefit you. The proprietors are that sure of them. Sold by dealers.

WHEN YOUR STOCK IS SICK

Use Parmelee's Condition Powders. They are acknowledged the best by all who have used them. Full pound 25 cents. Sold by dealers.

BURNING PETROLEUM AT OIL CITY

Wrought terrible havoc to life and property. Yet Petroleum is one of nature's great natural remedies. It enters very largely into Parmelee's Household Ointment, which is positively guaranteed to cure ulcers, old sores, erysipelas, salt rheum, scratches on horses, hard or cracked hoofs and foot rot in sheep. Sold everywhere and used by every one who knows anything about it.

LOOK OUT FOR THAT FALL COUGH.

Do not allow it to become settled on you for the winter. It will prove a serious matter if you do. Stop it now. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will surely do this. It is guaranteed to. Compare the size of the Hamilton Cough Balsam bottle with other Cough remedies of the same price.

THE CHEAPEST IS NOT ALWAYS THE BEST.

But in the case of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla the two features seem to go together. It is as strong, as effective, as certain in its action, as positive in its cures as any higher priced article of similar nature in the market to-day. It sells for only 50 cents a bottle. Ask for Parmelee's and be sure you get Parmelee's.

A common cold should not be neglected. Downs' Elixir will cure it.

Makes the Dirt Fly

—Pearline. It does it about as easily as a horse can hoist his heels. It does it with perfect safety to everything that may be washed or cleaned. It is needed in the laundry, the kitchen, the parlor, and the bath. Pearline does what soap leaves undone; when you know what it does, you will know what to do.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door. First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. PEARLINE sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York. 306

All those having fruit, flowers, vegetables, or anything that can be used in decorating are requested to bring them to the hall in the afternoon of the above date.

School opened Monday morning with a full attendance in each department. The prospects were never better for a prosperous school year, we have a corps of teachers not surpassed in ability by those in any neighboring town and with Prof. Daniels, who has done such excellent work during his stay here, still at the helm, we bespeak for the school a period of uninterrupted prosperity.

The proposition in regard to electric lights seemed to be regarded very favorably by the tax-payers as at the recent election 148 votes were polled in favor of lights and 49 against. The demonstration in the evening was hearty in the extreme. The band being out at the head of a procession bearing transparencies. It will be necessary to secure 400 private lights and a committee of one has been appointed to interview the citizens and obtain as many as possible. It is hoped that all will respond liberally.

An Enjoyable Family Reunion.

The following, which will be of interest to many of our readers, is taken from the Flint Journal of Aug. 27th. Rev. W. E. and Rev. A. J. Biglow were both pastors of the Tecumseh M. E. church many years ago, who are remembered by a large circle of friends.

A very pleasant and delightful family reunion took place yesterday, Aug. 26, in this city at the residence of Rev. A. J. Bigelow, 950 Church street. In 1833 the Bigelow family settled in Milford, Oakland county, where they resided until the family was broken up by the death of the father. Fifty-three years ago they were seperated, since which time they have not been together till yesterday. All that are alive were present, but one of the original family. There were present J. G. Bigelow, Esq., wife and son Gardner of Sandusky, O., Rev. M. B. Wilsey, wife and grandson of Milford, Rev. A. J. Bigelow, wife and two daughters, Mrs. C. N. Stacy of Elgin, Ill., and Blanché Bigelow, Mrs. H. W. Chubbuck and two children of Binghampton, N. Y. Mrs. W. E. Bigelow, Mrs. Frank Bigelow of Milford, son and daughter; Rev. G. M. Bigelow of Marine City. The day was pleasantly spent in calling up reminiscences of the past and in social enjoyment. Also a very interesting history of the family was read, written by Melville M. Bigelow, Ph. D. of Boston, Mass., tracing the history back to John Bigelow, who settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1640.

Church Courtesy.

An example of religous toleration and courtesy, not often seen in these days, is set forth in the following news item, clipped from the Detroit Free Press:

During the months of July and August all of the services of the Central Methodist Church have been held in the Church of Our Father. Rev. Lee S. McCollester, pastor of the latter church, has returned and will resume the Universalist services next Sunday. The repairs on the Central M. E. Church will not be completed for some time to come, so the Universalists have extended an invitation to their Methodist friends to divide Sunday services with them. The Universalists will have their preaching at 10:30 a. m., and Sunday school at noon. The Methodists will hold Sunday school at 2 p. m. and will have charge of the evening services. Mr. McCollester will conduct the morning services next Sunday, and in the evening Bishop J. M. Thoburn, of the Methodist Church, will officiate.

Michigan State Fair.

The Michigan State Fair will be held at Lansing, Sept. 12 to 16. The coming exhibition premises to be up to the usual standard of the fairs held by this society. This is strictly speaking the "people's fair." Any person may become a member and have a voice in its management. All moneys received are returned to the people in the way of prizes, except what is needed for actual expenses. The exhibit combines every feature of industrial interest found in the state, and visitors find matters of interest every where; good order always prevails, and no objectionable shows are found on the grounds. The railroads carry at reduced rates, and our readers who visit the fair this year will find themselves well paid for the small expense incurred.

Facts and Figures.

There are 197 publications and news agents in St. Louis, and, according to the official figures given by Mr. John B. Harlow, Postmaster, all of these sent out during the month of July, 987,829 pounds of second-class mail matter, which includes all newspapers and periodicals mailed from the office of publication. Of this total, The St. Louis Republic mailed 329,130 pounds or about one-third of all, which fact tells its own story as to the wonderful popularity and large circulation of the great Democratic Newspaper of the West and Southwest.

THE "TWICE-A-WEEK" REPUBLIC

is at once the best and cheapest newspaper published in America. It will be indispensable during this campaign of education, and will be mailed to any address, from now until November 30, for Thirty cents, or in clubs of ten or more received at one time, for 25c. each. Remember this is for a great semi-weekly paper. Send in your orders at once. Sample copies free.

Tecumseh's Tomahawk.

A tomahawk said to have belonged to the famous Indian chief Tecumseh is now in the possession of Mrs. Lizzie Skinner, of West Point, Ky. At the battle of the Thames, north of Lake Erie, in Ontario, in which the warrior was slain, a New York soldier, named John Hanes, despoiled the fallen redskin, and subsequently gave the weapon to John R. Bramblu, who died last Dec. It then passed into the hands of Mrs. Skinner in compliance with the wish of its last owner. The hatchet is said to be half English, half Indian in shape. Doubts are evidently entertained as to its genuineness by some of the western editors who tell the story.

Horticultural Meeting.

Lenawee county Horticultural Society will meet at the court house on Wednesday Sept. 14th. "What can we do to aid the coming fair," will be the topic of the morning session. After a picnic dinner the question of the black knot that is killing so many plum and cherry trees will be discussed; also a list of pears for home use. All are invited.

E. W. Allis, Sec.

Democratic Legislative Convention.

The Democrats of the 1st Legislative district of Lenawee county, will meet in Convention, in the Armory Hall in the village of Tecumseh, on Thursday, Sept. 22d, at 11:30 a. m. for the purpose of nominating a candidate for member of the legislature and to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention. Each township and ward is entitled to six delegates.

Demorest's Coming Surprise.

It may not be known to everyone that Mrs. Benjamin Harrison is one of the best of American flower painters. Since she has occupied her position of lady of the White House, however, her public duties have largely prevented the exercise of her artistic genius; but in that period she has found leisure to paint one of the loveliest representations of flower-life that ever came from an artists brush,—a magnificent group of orchids on a porcelain panels With that broad and kindly spirit which has marked her career, she has presented this single production of her scant leisure to the public, and Demorest's Magazine has the honor of being the medium through which this painting is offered to the mothers, wives, and daughters of America, to whom it is lovingly dedicated.

There is no taint of politics in it; it is simply the tribute of a good woman's love for the women of her nation, superbly expressed in color and form,—the foremost woman of the Republic cementing, by means of her art, her sisterhood with all others of her sex in the land.

Mrs. Harrison's painting has been reproduced in the highest style of art, of the same size as the original (11½x15 inches), and is an absolutely perfect counterpart, in every particular, to the faintest tint of color, and even to the peculiar texture of the porcelain. With each copy of Demorest's Magazine for October one of these wonderful productions of "A White House Orchid," Painted by the President's wife, in the White House, from an orchid grown in the White House, is to be presented free.

The Forum for September.

The September Forum, which begins volume fourteen, brings a table of contents of more than usual timeliness. For instance, a prominent place is given to "The Lesson of Homestead: A Remedy for Labor Troubles," by Chauncey F. Black, of Pennsylvania, the remedy he proposes being the incorporation of labor organizations precisely as organizations of capital are incorporated. Mr. Black writes with great sympathy for the workingmen's side of the contest. The political articles, which have been an especial feature of The Forum this summer, include an analysis of the "Alarming Proportion of Venal Voters," primarily in Connecticut, by Prof. J. McCook, which is the first effort that has been made to get at the number of the venal and to analyze the causes and methods of vote buying and selling; two articles on "Methods and Morals of Campaign Committees," by Mr. Herbert Welsh, of Philadelphia, and Hon. M. D. Harter, of Ohio, who both favor open methods of conducting a campaign, even the publication of the expenditures by committees; and an explanation of the real meaning of "A Tariff for Revenue," by David A. Wells, a thorough-going exposition of the Democratic position on the tariff. This, it is announced, will be followed by an article from Senator Aldrich.

The counties of Iosco, Alcona, Roscommon and Ogemaw shall constitute a representative district and be entitled to one representative, and the election returns of said district shall be made to the county of Iosco.

The counties of Alpena, Montmorency, Otsego, Osceola and Crawford shall constitute a representative district and be entitled to one representative, and the election returns of said district shall be made to the county of Alpena.

The counties of Cheboygan, Emmet and Presque Isle and Manitou shall constitute a representative district and be entitled to one representative, and the election returns of said district shall be made to the county of Cheboygan.

The counties of Chippewa, Mackinac and Luce shall constitute a representative district and be entitled to one representative, and the election returns of said district shall be made to the county of Chippewa.

The counties of Delta, Schoolcraft and Alger shall constitute a representative district and be entitled to one representative, and the election returns of said district shall be made to the county of Delta.

The counties of Dickinson, Iron and Baraga shall constitute a representative district and be entitled to one representative, and the election returns of said district shall be made to the county of Dickinson.

The counties of Gogebic, Ontonagon, Keewenaw and Isle Royal shall constitute a representative district and be entitled to one representative, and the election returns of said district shall be made to the county of Gogebic.

This act is ordered to take immediate effect.

Approved August 6, 1892.

ESTATE OF JOHN SAGE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday the 29th day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John Sage, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Joseph E. Sage, a son of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Thomas A. Liddell, or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 26th day of September next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

Mrs. E. Palms, of Dundee, spent Saturday and Sunday with Dr. Nelson and family.

Flota Smith went to Ypsilanti Wednesday to take a course in music at the Normal.

The beautiful decorations on the rostrum Sunday were furnished by the Osgood sisters.

Freeman Gove and wife, of Adrian, were the guests of his brother, C. M. Gove, Sunday.

Brewster and Charley Clark, who have been spending some time with relatives here, left for their home at Elkhart, Ind., Wednesday.

Jennie and Martha Lawton spent two weeks in Adrian with Mrs. Fairbanks, returning home Saturday.

School began Monday morning with a good attendance and with Prof. Drake and Mattie Rappleye as teachers.

T. H. Temple attended the Toledo fair last week, exhibiting the Nelson & Temple photograph exhibitor.

Mrs. Gus Wright, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. C. Morley, of Macon, called at the home of Mrs. Hall last Friday.

Louisa Arner left for Wellington, Ohio, last week Thursday to make her home with her son, C. W. Arner.

Twenty-seven probationers were received into the church at the close of the service Sunday morning.

Mrs. Frank Potts, of Washington, D. C., arrived Thursday evening for an indefinite stay with her mother, Mrs. L. V. Miller.

Mrs. W. L. Jones and daughter May returned Friday from a visit of several weeks in Brooklyn, N. Y., accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Bush.

A. C. Arner returned to Milan Monday to take his place in Putnam's store, accompanied by his mother, who will visit relatives for a few days.

Estella Jackson, of Owosso, who has been visiting relatives here and at Tecumseh and Macon for the past month, left for her home Wednesday.

Mrs. C. Pattison and Miss Julia Gilson, of Rochester, N. Y., after a week's visit with their nephew, J. O. Shepard, and family, returned to their home Thursday.

Samuel Barlow has improved the appearance of his residence on South street by removing the street fence and building walks. We understand there are more to follow.

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of the President, Mrs. S. L. Rappleye, on South street, on Friday evening of next week. The President desires that each one in attendance bring 5 cents and tell how they earned it. It is hoped there will be a good attendance.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Remember the lyceum at Ben Lamkin's Saturday night.

The young people danced at Mrs. A. B. Wisner's new house Friday night.

G. W. Allen, who has had a severe wrestle with one of Job's comforters, is very much better.

Mrs. Ed Wisner has been worse with hay fever than for years but with the other sufferers is now on the mend.

Frank Marshall and family attended the funeral of little Donald O'Hara who died of cholera infantum, Saturday. He was a nephew of Mrs. Marshall's.

A letter to Carl Wisner from Hollis Taylor locates him for a brief period at Clinton, Iowa. He expresses himself pleased with the country and seems to be doing uncommonly well.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hooten and Albert Deming went to Coldwater last week to attend the funeral of Wait Deming, a brother of Mrs. Hooten's. Several weeks ago Mr. Deming's barn and entire contents, including his horses, was burned. He was not well at the time and over-exerted himself.

Bogus Fight Bulletins.

ADRIAN, Mich., Sept. 8.—Some of the boys from the telegraph and telephone companies worked a great fake at the Light Guard armory last night. It was given out on the streets that dispatches were being received there from the big fight at New Orleans. A great crowd of lovers of the manly art, including sports and many prominent men, flocked thither. They were regaled at intervals by bulletins from the ring, taken from clicking instruments. It turns out this morning that there was no telegraphic connections and the messages were all fakes. The gang of suckers who stald down town till nearly midnight are this morning looking for the practical jokers, and swear they will "have their hides on the fence" before nightfall.—Evening News.

A Sure Thing.

It has been a long time since the people of our city and surrounding country have had an opportunity to see a balloon ascension, and a great many have never seen a parachute drop. Although many attempts have been made they have all proved a failure. On Thursday, Sept. 22d, Richard's Triple Shows will exhibit in Tecumseh and Prof. W. W. Jones, the dauntless King of the Air, will make a free balloon ascension, and when at the height of 3,000 feet will drop, with the aid of a frail parachute, to the show grounds. Prof. Jones is an old and tried aeronaut, and if you come to town that day, you will not be disappointed, as he understands the art of inflating his balloon. Be on hand in time to see the street parade, promptly at noon. Admission to the shows, 35 cents, children 25 cents.

The Illustrated World's Fair.

The September issue of The Illustrated World's Fair exceeds all previous numbers in beauty and excellence. Its pictures, especially the water scene in front of the Horticultural Building and the great views of the Manufacturers Building (in which the dedicatory ceremonies are to take place), are notable as triumphs of the process of engraving employed by this journal. Sculpture Clarke's Cider Press is produced in a full page; Luther Laflin Mills writes the leading article; Dr. Meloy and Dr. Davis send an account of their visit to Anne Hathaway's cottage at Stratford-on-Avon; Machinery Hall appears as a wilderness of iron; the Art palace grows into an Ionic temple; a learned article on the breeding of bird dogs is written by C. B. Whitford; the man who wrote "Twenty Years of Hustling," (J. Perry Johnston), adds another chapter for his celebrated book; C. F. Gunther, the great collector, reproduces the portrait of Columbus, with an article; and a valuable official map (of the latest draft) is offered to the millions of close students of Jackson Park. The story of the Souvenir Coin law is given with care. Prof. Eastman, W. J. Inglehart, Gertrude E. Wall, Nixon Waterman, Frank B. Welch, E. Hough, George P. McIntyre and Paul Hull contribute many bits of humor, gossip, rhyme and information. John McGovern, Editor. Jewell N. Halligan, General Manager, with whom all business correspondence should be held. By the year $2.50; 25 cents a copy. McVicker's Theatre Building, Chicago.

WHEN NATURE

Needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed. The best and most simple and gentle remedy is the Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

PROHIBITION COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Prohibs held their County Convention last week and put a full County ticket in the field.

Chairman Quick called the Convention to order.

After prayer by Rev. Wright of Britton the convention chose A. P. Coddington, of Tecumseh, temporary chairman, and William B. Hatch, of Macon, temporary secretary.

A committee of three on permanent organization was chosen as follows: Rev. James Wright, E. A. Taylor and Porter Beal; and a like committee of three on credentials as follows: Martin Odell, D. D. Baluss and M. Wolverton.

Chairman Quick then explained the business of the convention as outlined in the call. The chairman then explained the districts of the county, which comprised the following townships: 1st Dist. Clinton, Tecumseh, Macon, Ridgeway, Deerfield, Raisin, Adrian township and Adrian city. 2nd Dist.—Rollin, Rome, Hudson, Dover, Madison, Palmyra, Blissfield, Riga, Ogden, Fairfield and Medina.

Convention convened again at 1 p. m. and the report of committee on order of business and permanent organization was read. A. P. Coddington was recommended as permanent chairman, and W. B. Hatch as permanent secretary. C. Quick moved an amendment to the report to the effect that the report of the committee on credentials be received prior to the making of nominations. The report as amended was then adopted.

Permanent Chairman Coddington made a brief impromptu speech, when John H. Cole and Millard P. Brown were chosen tellers, and together with the permanent chairman and secretary were duly sworn. A motion was then carried that all Prohibitionists present be invited to participate in the proceedings of the Convention.

The Convention then proceeded to the nomination of a County ticket with the following result:

Judge of Probate—Thos. F. Moore.
Sheriff—A. L. VanAukin.
Clerk—M. P. Brown.
Register—Fred C. Baluss.
Treasurer—C. E. Mitchell.
Prosecutor—E. G. Walker.
Circuit Court Commissioners—Martin Odell, W. B. Hatch.
Coroners—Dr. Begel, Wm. Derbyshire.
Surveyor—S. C. Baldwin.
Representatives—1st District, Albert F. Dewey; 2nd District, C. Quick.

A full set of delegates was chosen to the Senatorial Convention.

The Unique University of Michigan.

The governing body of the University of Michigan is elected by popular suffrage and is regarded as an independent branch of the government co-ordinate with the legislature. This is indeed a unique feature. As a form of organization it meets the condemnation of theorists, but it has worked admirably. The office of regent is regarded as one of the most honorable in the gift of the people, as is attested by the presence on the existing board of a gentleman who declined a nomination to Congress in a sure district, accepting by preference the place he now holds. It would be impossible to bring the University into closer organic relation with the people than to intrust its government to an elected board, and to oblige this board to come for supplies to an elected legislature. Such an organization evinces a confidence in popular suffrage which gives the institution a truly democratic character and makes it the most perfect educational counterpart of American life. Thus what in theory ought to have resulted in the confusion of the university has proven to be a vital principle of her life; and what, according to Tory ideas, should have obstructed the growth of an institution of learning has in fact given impulse and direction to its development.

It is commonly argued against a system of university education under State direction, by those who base their reasoning on the philosophy of individualism, that governmental control must hinder free development in methods of instruction. The history of the University of Michigan does not support this argument. On the contrary, the conclusion at which one must arrive who reads its history is that an organic connection between the state and education is decidedly advantageous to education. One thing at least is certain: an educational system which is part of state machinery, provided the state be democratic in form, can never come to mean the education of a class, nor can a university which appeals to the people for pecuniary support become a centre from which aristocratic ideas or a plutocratic industrial philosophy are disseminated. State education must be democratic in the highest sense of that word, for its continued existence depends upon its being in harmony with the ideal of the people and upon the quickness with which it responds to public needs.—Prof. H. C. Adams in the Forum.

Of all the Boston Yanks:
But he has this consolation:
He can shake with Nancy Hanks

Vermont has endorsed Harrison's administration. A similar endorsement throughout the country in November will bury grandfather's hat out of sight.

When an American imports a suit of clothes he is taxed 80 per cent and this tax is added to cost. The cost of an every-day suit of woolen clothes without the tax would be $7. The cost with the tax is $12.60.

In the renomination of Congressman Chipman the Democrats of the first district have done themselves honor. His faithful services in the lower House have earned this recognition and he will have a walkover.

Come to think of it, Chairman Carter was right: McKinley was much needed in Vermont, for if McKinley and the other great orators of the party hadn't been sent there, would there have been any Republican majority at all?

The latest novel feature agreed upon for encampment week at Washington is a monster out-door concert, to be participated in by all of the 150 or more brass bands that will be in the city. Prof. Sousa, late leader of the U. S. marine band, will be the conductor.

The Arkansas election last week discloses the fact that the Democratic lines are unbroken in the solid South. The force bill issue is doing its work very effectively in that section. The Democratic state ticket had a nice majority over both the Republican and People's tickets combined.

And now John G. Whittier, the Quaker poet, has been gathered to his fathers. For many years this quartette, Longfellow, Whittier, Bryant and Holmes, were accounted the shining stars in the firmament of American poetry. And Whittier was by no means the least of the four.

The Republican slump in Vermont has alarmed the party leaders. Four years ago Vermont rolled up a Republican majority of 29,000 at the September election. Last week the majority reached only 19,000. It shows the apathy that exists even in Republican strongholds.

Here are four political texts from the writings of George William Curtis—Life is the best thing we can possibly make of it. The world is not made for the prosperous alone nor for the strong. The test of civilization is the estimate of women. Progress begins with the minority; it is completed by persuading the majority.

The State election in Vermont last week has sent a cold chill down the spinal column of the G. O. P. which it will hardly recover from before November. The same percentage of defection in other states would swing every northern state east of the Missouri river into the Democratic column except Maine, Vermont and Pennsylvania.

"Is the People's party gaining or losing ground in the South?" Democrats from the South insist that the force bill issue is taking democrats away from the People's party in that section every day, and that it will elect fewer members of the next House than it has in the present House. At the headquarters of the People's party they smile and say: "Wait until the returns are in."

The Brooklyn Eagle makes a palpable hit when it terms McKinley the "Bob Acres of Protection." It will be recalled that Bob was a fellow of magnificent courage when there was no danger and correspondingly timid when there was anything to be feared. McKinley is bold as a lion when he can talk with no one to talk back, but when challenged to joint discussion not a vestige of his vaunted courage remains. —Detroit Free Press.

"Protection" Finally Hits England.

The McKinley bill has struck its first blow at free trade England. Republicans have howled for years about the danger of pauper labor to American workmen, and have fooled thousands of their countrymen into the belief that protection alone would save them. Panic stricken by the fear of foreign pauper competition, the laborers have voted for a constantly rising tariff, until the goods from alien shops have been shut out of the country. But never a word in protection's statutes forbid the coming of the paupers who made the goods. They rushed here in hordes, transferring their labor bodily; and not a protection lawmaker saw a hint of danger in their coming. Books were ransacked to find curses for them at their homes; language was exhausted inveighing against their product; all the power of the government was invoked to forbid the landing of a single article of their manufacture.

But they might come. There never was a time when they were not welcomed by the brutal and treacherous agents of monopolist power. They were invited and urged and assisted to come. They chased from the workshops the honest American workman who had been deceived into hastening his own destruction. And when the better grades of foreign immigration were exhausted the poorer grades were summoned. And after that the still more miserable, until the very dregs of a wornout world were hurried into the places made vacant by discharged Americans. Nothing was too low or foul or lawless for the labor slayers of the republican party.

And the natural result came. This immigration—this sloughing off of Russia's sores—spread sickness wherever it went. Through calm Germany, across fair France, up to the water front of Holland there is a trail of shallow graves, a highway of corpses unhid by the pitying ground. The American people took fright. For the first time the real pauper labor confronted them. They sent up a single voice of alarm: "Keep out that putrid immigration!" And the president issued an order which closes the ports of America for the first time to the pauper labor of Europe.

For the first time free trade England takes alarm. Here is a London dispatch in the morning newspapers:

The English people fear that the order detaining immigrants will bring hordes of Russians and Poles to London, and a loud cry for protection against this undesirable addition to the population is raised. The local authorities are holding meetings and calling on the government for some barrier to keep out these people.

They needed no McKinley bill to protect them from pauper labor. All the pauper labor was going to America. But now that the stream was started and American gates were closed, some of the overflow—an overflow that never before had troubled them—sets the whole island in a tremor of fear. They care mighty little for the competition of the pauper-made goods. They care a great deal for the competition of the pauper himself. And when he comes armed with Asiatic cholera—as he always has come if the conditions permitted him to breed it—he is a terror more fearful than death. They have no weapon with which to combat him. They are helpless and nerveless at the threat of twenty days' pauper invasion.

The first real blow protection ever struck England was when it threatened to send her some of the pauper labor which McKinley had promised to welcome, and provide with employment.—Chicago Herald.

His First Vote for Cleveland.

The Toledo Bee gives space for the following letter written by a Toledo young man, now living in Kansas City, to a republican friend in Toledo. He puts his facts so tersely that its reading will be interesting as showing how the wind is blowing. The letter has enough local mention to give it further interest:

"How does the democratic ticket suit you? There is a general feeling here that it will sweep the country, north, south, east and west. Because among other reasons the American people admire Mr. Cleveland's candor, his honesty, his freedom from hypocrisy, while the party proper believe in his wisdom and his democracy.

"It has been written that our people as a nation are tending towards hypocrisy—note the Sunday closing measure in the United States Senate.

"There is general belief that Cleveland stands for the opposite of all this. As against sniveling hypocrisy and temporizing political trickery, he stands for political honesty and the fulfillment of party pledges.

"In my opinion there is no power on earth to prevent the election of Cleveland and Stevenson. Then good-bye to Harrison, Homestead and Humbug.

"I find out here the republicans, as well as the democrats, are opposed to a protection which only protects wealthy manufacturing syndicates; a policy which, no matter how much they may deny it, enriches the few at the expense of the many. At the coming election I shall have the honor to cast my first vote, and I propose to cast it for the man who considers a public office a public trust the man who can say No! the man who said unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation.

"You have in Toledo, as everybody acquainted with the facts knows, a fair exposition of what the republican party has been, and what it now is, and with that exposition thinking, decent republicans are greatly dissatisfied.

"From leaders, honest and patriotic in their purpose, the republican party in Toledo is being ridden to death by political mendicants, and in some cases men who should be doing time at Columbus. The same condition politically obtains here, and it is so the country over. The reason is that a party long in power becomes drunken and debauched and the interests of the common people are entirely ignored. McKinley, for instance. Look at him! Drunk to the verge of jim-jams with party flattery (a good-natured fellow, too) he calmly passes as a friend to the American people, to the artisan. He smiles at his work! Even when he sees children strangled in the streets—the offspring of workmen, who cannot furnish the bread.

"It is protection run mad, a fetich, a remorseless idol to be worshiped. Mr. McKinley becomes the sacred ibis of the republicans.

"Every good quality runs into a defect. The generous are not far from the prodigal. Economy borders on avarice; and so with the high protection doctrine, from a tariff for beneficent purposes it goes to the other extreme and devours the substance of the people."

The Republican attitude on the Force bill seems to be this: "Hush! Keep shady till we get there."

SHE WAS SICK BUT TWENTY MINUTES.

Six years have passed since my first confinement, at which I suffered both long and intensely. This time, although I had used only one bottle of "Mother's Friend," I suffered scarcely any pain, and was not sick more than twenty minutes, and did not afterward experience that weakness usual in such cases. DON'T GET IMPOSED UPON.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given, and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Cure has proven itself unequalled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure and get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. For sale by Jno. Orr.

The September North American.

The North American Review for Sept. is charged with articles by distinguished writers, covering a wide range of the thought and activities of the day. Indeed, this Review, by means of papers from those whose words are recognized as authoritative, is eminently successful in giving to the public an analytic and thoroughly satisfactory discussion of all significant movements; and in this view its pages are indispensable to the student of the times. Thus, the "Homestead Strike" is considered by the Hon. Wm. C. Oates, Chairman of the Congressional Investigating Committee, in "A Congressional View"; by the Hon. Geo. T. Curtis, in "A Constitutional View"; and by Master-Workman T. V. Powderly, in "A Knight of Labor's View." Gail Hamilton, in "An Open Letter to the Queen," makes a strong, eloquent, and pathetic plea for the pardon of Mrs. Maybrick. In "The Erratic National Tariff Platforms of the Democracy" Senator Justin S. Morrill reviews the expressions on the tariff made by the party conventions [illegible] in effect a concise history, from the earliest date, of the relations of the Democratic party and its leaders to the tariff. The Hon. W. L. Wilson, who was the permanent chairman of the last convention, has an article on "The Tariff Plank at Chicago," and welcomes the bold and frank position of the Democratic party on the subject of the tariff. "Innocence Versus Ignorance" is a study in the conduct of moral education of children, by Amelie Rives. She avers that innocence is best protected by imparting a knowledge of truths and facts at the earliest practicable moment. The probable procedure of the now dominant Liberal party in England, as represented by Mr. Gladstone, is set forth by Justin McCarthy, who, as a leader and a member of Parliament, is to share in the work in hand.

ESTATE OF LUCY WALKER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 23d day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Lucy Walker, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of William H. Smith, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate, with the will annexed, may be granted to Robert L. Rogers, or some other suitable person, the executor named in said will having departed this life.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 19th day of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

(A True Copy.)

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

The Crop Outlook.

The last report of the Michigan weather service bureau says that in the northern counties sufficient rain has fallen to keep the crops in good condition and put the ground in fine shape for fall sowing, which is being rapidly pushed. Corn, wheat and oats are a fair crop and potatoes are doing well. The drought has not been broken in the southern counties and pastures were drying up and some farmers were foddering their stock. Plums, peaches and other fruits are plentiful this year and about ready for market.

Plighted Troth While in a Balloon.

Gertie Carno, who fell from a balloon and was killed at Detroit, desired to be cremated, and her wish was complied with. Her death revives the story of her engagement to the aeronaut Bert Walker, who is now making a trip through India. It is claimed that Walker was to return home about Christmas and would be married shortly afterwards. He and Miss Carno met in Detroit last September and they made a double ascension. He proposed to her while on the trapèze bar on the way up.

George Welsh Pardoned.

George Welsh, of Detroit, who three years ago broke the neck of an old man named Maurice Crawford with a blow of his fist and was sentenced to Jackson for ten years, has been pardoned. A unique reason for the pardon is that expert testimony showed that had not the victim been holding his head at a particular angle when the blow was struck the bone could not possibly have been broken and Welsh would have been guilty of simple assault and battery.

Michigan's Quarantine.

At a special meeting of the state board of health it was ordered that no immigrants from any European port by way of Canada shall be permitted to enter Michigan until such immigrants shall have undergone quarantine detention for twenty days, and had their baggage inspected and disinfected. Travelers passing through Canada from Europe will, together with their baggage, be subject to inspection before being permitted to enter this state.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy observers in different parts of the state for the week ended September 3 indicated that typho-malarial fever, pneumonia, scarlet-fever and influenza increased, and diphtheria, measles and whooping cough decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at fifteen places, scarlet fever at twenty-two, typhoid fever at thirty-five, and measles at one place.

Quarantine at Detroit.

Dr. Duffield, in his capacity as health officer of Detroit and backed by the authority of the United States, has established a twenty days' quarantine at Detroit. The decision was made after reading a telegram from Quebec giving the report of the international health commission upon the Canadian quarantine station at Grosse isle. This order stops immigration between Montreal, Quebec and Detroit.

KILLED IN A GALE.

Death and Destruction in the Town of Marion, Ind.

Two Workmen Are Killed and Several Others Are Injured—Fatal Thunderbolts in Wisconsin—Ruin by Storms Elsewhere.

A TORNADO'S WORK.

MARION, Ind., Sept. 12.—A tornado passed over the lower part of the city Friday night, causing great damage and completely wrecking the buildings of the Indiana pulp works, by far the most important plant in Grant county, killing two men and dangerously injuring two others.

The killed are: Howard Green and Samuel Pond. The injured are: Lawrence Thorn, ankle sprained and badly injured about the head; Fred Tulley, arm crushed and internally injured.

STORM IN WISCONSIN.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 12.—The most destructive electric, wind, hail and rainstorm of years visited this vicinity early Saturday morning. It traversed the greater portion of the county, spending its fury a few miles north of this city, and worked incaculable damage to tobacco and corn fields. Over forty acres of tobacco immediately around Madison were totally destroyed, the wind and hail completely stripping the leaves from the stocks. Much of the crop had been harvested, but many farmers lose their all. The ground was white with pieces of hail, many of which measured an inch in diameter. The loss will aggregate nearly $1,000,000. Dead sparrows covered the ground. Fruit and vegetables were also damaged to a great extent, apples on trees being cut to pieces and watermelons cracked open. In this city an extensive brick wall, 84 by 38 feet, a new addition to the city gas works, was blown down, and many shade trees ruined. Haystacks and buildings were set on fire by lightning and the thunder and lightning were terrific, surpassing all previous experience here.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Sept. 12.—During a heavy storm Friday night three valuable horses were killed in a pasture east of the city. At West Salem, 12 miles east, G. G. Hitchcock's barn was struck by lightning, sixty tons of hay burned with a loss of $2,000, the insurance being one-half. Another barn in the same neighborhood was struck and several cows killed. The lightning ran one-quarter of a mile on a wire fence ending in a hog yard, killing several animals. Other fires occurred in the county, but the heavy rains have made the roads impassable and details have not come in.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 12.—From 8 to 10 o'clock Saturday night a fearful storm of rain and electricity raged in this vicinity. A great amount of water fell. Several horses were killed by lightning in the country near town and several men were shocked severely. The farmers are afraid the rain will be followed by a killing frost, which will destroy the corn, none of which is out of danger.

KILLED FIVE PERSONS.

The Sequel to a Peculiarly Atrocious Murder in Virginia.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 12.—A dispatch from Wise Courthouse, Va., states that Dr. Marshall B. Taylor was on Saturday found guilty of murdering five people—Ira Mullens and wife, Arison Mullens, John Chepet and Green B. Harris. The defendant failed to prove an alibi and was found guilty of murder in the first degree. The five victims were in wagons en route through Pound Creek Gap where they were assassinated. Mrs. Mullens wore a money belt containing between $1,000 and $1,500. Taylor robbed her and secured this. A strong guard is on duty at the courthouse, part of the force who protected Tolton Hall, and Taylor will not be lynched. He will ask for a new trial.

A Yankee Sailor Slain.

GENOA, Sept. 10.—A sailor from the United States war vessel Newark was murdered here Thursday night. The Newark arrived to take part in the grand Columbus celebration. The sailor, whose name was Frank Reilly, went ashore and was killed in a lodging house which he visited. The murder is said to have been without provocation. Both the officers of the Newark and the local police are investigating the case.

Two Murderers Hanged.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 9.—Edmund McCarthy and Charles Craig, colored, were hanged in the annex for condemned prisoners in the Ohio state prison shortly after midnight. McCarthy killed Charles Netterman, a drummer at Cincinnati, on the night of August 23, 1890. Craig killed Annie Thompson, his mistress, in Cincinnati on September 13, 1890.

Death of General Cialdini.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Announcement is made of the death of Gen. Enrico Cialdini, the Italian soldier and statesman, aged 81 years. He was commander-in-chief of the troops in central Italy, took a prominent part in the battles against Austria and served as ambassador to Paris from 1876 to 1882.

Caused a Commotion.

NEWTON, Kan., Sept. 12.—It has been discovered that the county clerk of this (Harvey) county has made a practice of issuing marriage licenses when the probate judge was away, and the announcement that all marriages under his licenses are null and void has created consternation.

Big Fire in Albany.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Fire early this morning destroyed the state printing office, two hotels and other property, the total loss being $500,000. All the state documents now being published are probably lost.

All Perished.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 12.—The fishing schooner Cashier was wrecked off the Grand Banks and her crew of nineteen persons were drowned.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Industries and Trade All Over the Country Show Steady Improvement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Last week's semi-panic in stocks and grain has been followed by a more confident feeling about cholera, as it is seen that the pestilence is thus far confined to incoming ships by national regulations, which all officials are now respecting. Stocks have advanced seventy-five cents a share on the whole, though in other markets the alarm discloses weakness, which still continues. Meanwhile, the general condition of industries and trade throughout the country is not remarkably good, but improving from week to week, although the exports of merchandise are not yet large enough to prevent some exports of gold. Decided improvement is seen in the tone of the iron trade at Pittsburgh, glass works are resuming and the hardware trade is good. Prospects are excellent at Cincinnati, commission merchants are unusually [illegible], and trade in tobacco leaf is strong. Business at Cleveland has improved and is excellent, with larger demand for money. At Detroit business in some lines is ten to twenty per cent. greater than last year and prospects are favorable. General trade at Chicago is larger than a year ago, with favorable crop prospects. At Milwaukee trade is fairly good, tobacco having been little damaged by frosts, while corn is kept back by cool rains, and at Minneapolis crop prospects are fair, lumber is active and strong and general trade good. At St. Paul trade improves, with brighter prospects, and while average crops are expected, higher prices are also judged probable. At Omaha trade is active in groceries and dry goods, and fair in other branches. St. Louis reports strong trade, and railroads taxed to carry grain. At Kansas City trade is improving, receipts of cattle and grain being heavy, and at Denver business is good. At Little Rock business is satisfactory, though merchants buy conservatively. At Louisville trade improves, and at Nashville as well, crop prospects being better. At New Orleans business has somewhat improved, but is not up to expectations.

The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days numbered for the United States 146, and for Canada 33, or a total of 179, as compared with totals of 176 last week and 180 the week previous to the last. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 214, representing 187 failures in the United States and 27 in the dominion of Canada.

KILLED BY A SHOCK.

Light Tender at Pittsburgh Electrocuted and Thrown From a Pole.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 10.—At 12:45 o'clock a. m. Police Officer Bowley found the lifeless body of John Hoxwinter lying against the base of an electric light pole at the corner of Fifth avenue and Stevenson street. Hoxwinter was a light tender in the employ of the Allegheny County Light Company. He had ascended the pole to trim the light and had evidently been electrocuted. His left hand and arm were terribly burned. The top of his head had been crushed in by his fall from the forty-five-foot pole. Hoxwinter was single. His father, who was also a light inspector, was electrocuted about a year ago.

D. D. T. MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

TECUMSEH HERALD

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

BY S. C. STACY.

A New Business Enterprise.

Our fellow townsman A. W. Slayton made a visit to the property of The Clear Rapids Lime & Stone Co., a few days ago, and this is an account he gave of it. I went to Monroe, Michigan, where I met one of the stock holders of the Clear Rapids Lime & Stone Co., from Detroit, the headquarters of this enterprising Firm. There we procured a rig and drove up along side of the beautiful river Raisin; at this point the river is large and wide. Eight miles from Monroe we came to a little village called Raisinville, this is some two and a half miles from Raisinville on the Dundee Branch of the Lake Shore, and forty-five miles from Detroit. This is the sight of the new village Clear Rapids. I was surprised and delighted with the prospects, these people have for a village, also their prospects for making a large amount of money. Here they have a dam across the Raisin River, which gives them one of the finest water powers in the State of Michigan. With the new dam they will soon build they estimate they will have 1,000 horse power; this they will give a portion of to factories that will locate there, the balance they will rent on reasonable terms. By the side of this immense water power they have a Stone Quarry all Lime Stone, it covers an area of thirty seven acres, in some places it comes within two and a half feet of the surface, at others it is four feet below the surface. These parties have drilled down one hundred feet and they find it all lime stone of a superior quality. It will make excellent building stone or a number one quality of lime, and for the purpose of crushing, and supplying the cities of Detroit and Toledo. These people will really have no opposition, as they will use water power for crushing the stone, also for running an Electric Light Plant and will run day and night. They have already contracted to furnish Detroit parties $68,000,00 of crushed stone. All they are waiting for is for a spur of the railroad about two miles to be put in, when they will at once commence operations. Mr. Slayton took quite a large amount of their stock and stone and lime quarry. He thinks it a number one investment, as the crushed stone is growing more and more in demand and their supply is inexhaustable.

Magazine of American History.

The Magazine of American History for September is a delightful number, admirably illustrated. The editor writes the opening paper, "Progression in Steam Navigation, 1807-1892," which is crowded with information and suggestion and will interest all classes of readers in all climes where the steam whistle is heard. It seems incredible that only eighty-five years have rolled by since the very first successful attempt to propel a boat over the water by steam—that is, any considerable distance—was on the Hudson river in our own country. Mrs. Lamb traces the preceding experimental work and dismal failures of the early investigators, and says, "The inventive instinct of America appears to have been abreast with that of other countries, and it has the honor of bridging the chasm between mere attempts and positive achievements in steam navigation; Robert Fulton's fame is secure in the world's memory, but the time has come when his industrious and less fortunate cotemporaries in inventions should not be left in unmerited obscurity." The attention of managers of the Columbian Exposition is forcibly called to the importance of making the various steps in this line of progress perfectly visible and tangible at Chicago, through a collection of American models. The power of steam touches all sides of human life, and within the eighty-five years it has revolutionized every industry. The synopsis of "The Successful Novel of 1836" (Horseshoe Robinson) is continued by Emanuel Spencer, and nothing in the way of historic fiction has ever proved more facinating to the general reader. An Early Combat in Vermont," by Bernard Steiner; "Our Greatest Men," a sonnet, by Thomas Mckellar; Biblio. graphic Notes on Poems and Ballads relating to Major Andre, by Dr. R. B. Coutant, and United States in Paragraphs (Arizona), by Colonel Charles Ledyard Norton; complete the principal articles of the month. There is also an appreciative tribute to Hon. Francis A. Stout, and several shorter articles of value. Subscription price $5.00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

OBITUARY.

Mabel A. Vandercook was born in Milan, Mich., November 7th, 1874, and departed this life in Tecumseh Sabbath morning, Sept. 11th, 1892. The funeral services were held at the M. E. Church Tuesday afternoon, at three o'clock, conducted by Rev. O. J. Perrin. The members of the High School and the Epworth League attended in a body.

She was very highly esteemed. In her young heart family love was strongly implanted.

Such characters will have also the deepest love for humanity. No one will love his fellow-men who has never loved any individual of the human family. It is recognized that family love in some form is the almost indispensable root of Christianity. From it will spring, if properly directed, love of God, love of father and mother, brothers and sisters, and love of the human race.

Mabel was strongly attached to her mother. Nearly human [illegible] bring such comfort and solace to her weary heart [illegible] kindness and in the last hours of life. Another marked characteristic of our young friend was contentment with her lot in life. She was not a child of affluence but she was satisfied with what she had.

Contentment expresses the acquiescence of the mind in the portion of good which we possess. It is satisfaction of mind arising from acquiescence in the providential arrangements of God. It is no want of capacity for relishing the pleasures of life but a satisfaction with our portion or lot as chosen by God. It is a gracious disposition of mind whereby the trusting soul rests satisfied with that portion of the good things of this life which the wisdom of God assigns him, without complaining of the little which God gives to him, or envying the much which God bestows on others. Mabel also possessed in a high degree an insatiate desire for knowledge. She persued her studies in the high school even at the expense of her health.

Man, by his rational nature, is constantly impelled to observe, to think, to reason, to classify, to trace causes and consequences. To do this is to know, and to continue to do it is to go on from knowledge to knowledge. The wisdom of nature appears in giving the desire of knowledge that peculiar direction which is best adapted to all the various phases of life, leading us in youth to give our exclusive attention to the properties of the material objects with which we are surrounded, and in more mature years to the pursuits of society, to politics, science, religion, and to the endless varieties of studies and professions which are comprehended in the avocations of manhood. It is a noble quality of mind to cultivate. It captivated our young friend and failing health only prevented her from reaching the desired goal—graduation from the high school. Usefulness was her great aim in life. She was an active member of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The last service she rendered was at the time of the Easter-tide. She worked all day enthusiastically to help decorate the church for the glorious Easter day. She took cold and the disease already latent in her system sprang to the surface. In a few months the vital forces of life yielded to wasting disease until death claimed its victim. But she was ready for the last enemy. Taught by devoted Sunday School teachers the way to heaven, the faith of her young heart became stronger as death approached and she came fully to trust in her Saviour and at last peacefully fell asleep in Jesus. As her last dying message she said: "Tell my schoolmates and friends to meet me in heaven."

The Ladies' Home Journal.

"Why Young Men Defer Marriage" is the subject of an interesting article on this truth-asserting topic, by John Lambert Payne, in the September Ladies' Home Journal. Mr. Payne's paper is statistical and treats this momentous matter from every standpoint. The domestic problem concerning the relations existing "Between Mistress and Maid" is intelligently discussed by Harriet Prescott Spofford, Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Helen S. Conant and Christine Terhune Herrick, as is "Getting Home from the Country," by Helen Jay. The wife of the famous dramatist, Alexandre Dumas, is the subject of a sketch, with portrait, by Lucy Hamilton Hooper, and Laura Grover Smith gives a description of a unique firm of women lawyers in Milwaukee. Maud Haywood contributes a special illustrated paper on "The Chicago Society of Decorative Art," and Walter H. Barret writes comprehensively of "Women and Life Insurance." The Editor speaks some timely words about the restlessness of the American man and its effect upon women, and Foster Coates tells of "Women in Journalism." The always interesting departments by competent editors conclude a number which is more than usually attractive, and one that cannot fail to please its hundreds of thousands of readers. The Ladies Home Journal is published by The Curtis Publishing Co. of Philadelphia, for 10c a number and $1.00 per year.

A Pretty Surprise.

A beautifully illustrated and charmingly bound edition of Longfellow's "Evangeline," the most popular long poem ever published by an American author, and one of the most famous poems in the language, just published, is a pretty surprise for book-lovers. It is in large type, numerous and excellent illustrations, very fine and heavy paper, gilt edges, remarkably handsome cloth binding, with gilt title and ornaments. No illustrated edition has ever before been published at less cost than $1.50, and that is about what you might "guess" the price of this to be, but it isn't—it sells for only 19 cents! plus 6 cents for postage, if by mail. This covers only about the actual cost of manufacture by the 100,000, the publisher's object being, not profit, but to show the book-loving millions what he can do. His publications are not sold by dealers, but only direct; catalogue, over 100 pages, a literary curiosity in its way, is sent for a 2-cent stamp. Every home in the land ought to have a copy of this Evangeline, so charmingly beautiful, as a poem, as a collection of artistic illustrations, and as a product of the book-making art. Address, JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose, St., New York.

We are Coming, Grover Cleveland.

AIR—"We're Coming, Father Abraham."

We are coming, Grover Cleveland,
Six million men, and more,
From the valleys of Missouri
And from wild Niagara's roar;
From the lakes of Minnesota,
Virginia's vales and bowers,
From the granite hills of Hampshire
And the land of figs and flowers.

CHORUS—
We are coming, Uncle Grover,
We hear thy bugle call;
We'll unfurl the free trade banner
For the noblest man of all.
"Wipe out our war taxation!"
We'll shout from sea to sea;
We'll strike the shackles off from trade
And make shoppoddie free.

We are coming, Grover Cleveland,
From the wooden nutmeg state,
From the mines of Colorado
[illegible] golden gate,
From the fertile farms of Kansas,
From the Appalachian chain,
From Carolina's cotton fields
And the pine-clad hills of Maine.

CHORUS.

We are coming, Grover Cleveland—
The farmer at his plow
And the smithy at his anvil
Both fight for Grover now.
The banker in his counting room,
The joiner at his plane,
The mechanic and the minister
All shout the glad refrain.

CHORUS.

We are coming, Grover Cleveland,
Both the Gentile and the Jew.
The peace-inspiring Quaker
And the gallant boys in blue;
The merchant at his counter
And the weaver at his loom,
The lawyer and the pedagogue,
All swell the Cleveland boom.

CHORUS.

S. C. STACY.

Campaign Song.

MARCHING TO VICTORY.

Air—"Marching Through Georgia."

Hurrah for Grover Cleveland, the friend of laboring men!
And when he is elected he'll be sure to help us then;
For times are hard and taxes high—we have had enough of Ben,
As we go marching to victory.

CHORUS.
Hurrah! hurrah! be ready for the fray!
Hurrah! hurrah! for Grover leads the way,
Tariff reform is sure to win on next election day,
When we go marching to victory.

Tariff reform is our battle cry, with which we'll win the day;
That's what we are going to vote for, is what the people say,
For Cleve and Steve are in the race, and in it for to stay,
As we go marching to victory.

CHORUS.

With wool at twenty cents a pound the farmer now can see
That wool is not a booming as it otherwise would be,
If it had not been for McKinley bill and Bill McKin-i-lee,
So we'll go marching to victory.

CHORUS.

Monopolists shout for Harrison, which was to be expected,
But the poor man he will stand a show when Cleveland is elected;
Protection is all right, you know, but the wrong man is protected,
So we'll go marching to victory.

CHORUS.

G. A. R. and W. R. C. Attention!

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Ry. will sell sell excursion tickets to Washington, D. C., and return, from Sept. 13th to 20th inclusive, good to return until October 10th, 1892, and on Sept. 17th will run a Special Car on the train leaving Tecumseh at 3:15 p. m., to be attached to the Special Washington Train at Adrian, giving a daylight ride through the mountains of Pennsylvania, arriving at Washington on the evening of the 18th.

Fare for the round trip $12.25.

Stop-overs may be made between Harrisburg and Washington in either direction, giving ample time to visit the Battlefield of Gettysburg, etc.

Arrangements have also been made for low rate side-trips from Washington, giving those who desire an opportunity to visit the Battlefields of Virginia and other points of interest.

The August number of The Illustrated World's Fair contains a leading article, with portrait, by Lyman J. Gage, the eminent financier; an article, with portrait, by Promoter-General Handy; a beautiful sketch by E. Hough, with his portrait; a large portrait of George Schneider; the poem on which Franklin E. Denton has been engaged for a year: an entertaking article "From Oklahoma to Paris," by Hamilton S. Wicks, with his portrait; an uuusual number of jokes, rhymes, poems, illustrated articles; and a collection of absolutely unrivaled pictures of the Fair. These illustrations are so true that in some places they mirror the buildings in the water, and the picture thus reflected is clearer than the pictures usually shown at first hand in other prints. The scene looking toward the Administration, across the Basin from Lake Michigan, is especially fine, and giving a mortal stroke to the accepted colored "birds-eye views." Among the scenes is one that shows a side of the great Manufactures. These pictures outdo all that has been heretofore achieved by this magazine. The publishers announce an extraordinary dedicatory number for October. John McGovern, Editor. Address Jewell N. Halligan, General Manager, McVicker's Building, Chicago. $2.f0 a year; 25 cents a number.

Ripans Tabules: pleasant laxative.

Beers' Post will send a good delegation to the National Encampment at Washington. They will leave here on the regular afternoon train East on the Mackinaw road, at 3:14 o'clock. Taking supper at Toledo, they will join the big headquarters train which leaves Toledo at 7 p. m. over the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway, and will proceed via that road and the Baltimore & Ohio to Washington, reaching the Capitol City at 4 p. m. on Sunday. Sleeping car accommodations can be obtained at $3.50 for each double berth and $7.00 for full section by applying to Jas. M. Hall, Boody House, Toledo. The trip rate from Toledo to Baltimore and return, embracing all stop over privileges is $11.50. Several of our residents, besides the G. A. R. boys, will avail themselves of this opportunity to visit Washington.

"A White House Orchid," an exquisite painting on [illegible] lovely bunch of orchids grown in the White House, executed by Mrs. Benjamin Harrison with the [illegible] skill for which she is noted, has been reproduced in the highest style of modern art, and so perfectly—to the faintest tint of color, and even to the peculiar texture of the porcelain—that it is impossible to distinguish the copy from the original. Demorest's Family Magazine has the honor of being the medium through which this unique picture is offered to the mothers, wives, and daughters of America, to whom it is lovingly dedicated. These superb reproductions of Mrs. Harrison's fine picture—the only one ever painted by a President's wife for the public—are the same size as the original (11 x 15 inches), and with a copy of Demorest's for October, one of these wonderful pictures is to be presented free. Independent of its high artistic merit,—Mrs. Harrison being one of the best flower-painters in America,—an opportunity to obtain a fac-simile of the handiwork of "the first lady in the land" has never occured before, and probably never will again; therefore everyone should take advantage of this chance.

A son of Newton Bryan living about three miles south of this village, died of diptheria Monday of last week. Another member of the family has since come down with the dread disease.

The nomination of James O'Donnell by the Republicans indicates that they intend to fight for the second district. He is undoubtedly their strongest man, but this is more than likely to be a Democratic year in the second district.

Abner Willson started Monday afternoon for Columbus and other points in Ohio, on a business trip. He took along a sample box of his white plume celery. He will likely return to-morrow or Saturday.

Joe Russell and daughter have returned from a three week's visit with Henry Wilson's family in Kansas. Mr. Wilson is prospering. He has a farm of 640 acres, a flock of 1500 sheep and other things in proportion. Joe enjoyed the trip very much.

Anderson & Co. have been, for several months, regular advertisers in the Dundee, Manchester, Clinton and Addison papers. They have now added the Adrian papers to their list. This enterprising firm believe in the utility of printer's ink.

Richard's three big shows are coming to Tecumseh, Thursday, Sept. 22d. and judging from the favorable comments of the press where they have been playing, we conclude they are worthy of the patronage of the public. The prices are only 35 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

Prof. W. W. Jones, with Richard's Triple Shows, that are to exhibit at Tecumseh, Thursday, Sept. 22d, will make one of his wonderful balloon ascensions and parachute drops from the show grounds, rain or shine. Remember this is free to everybody and the management invite you to the show lot to witness the wonderful exhibition.

Richard's Triple Shows have come and gone, and the people who witnessed the two performances—and the audiences were large—were well pleased. The management showed that there is such a thing as advertising just what they had and doing just as they advertised, and by doing that they have gained the confidence of our people, and if they ever visit our city again they will be greeted with another large crowd.—South Bend Daily News.

One of the richest men in America, prospectively, is John Addison Fordyce, who graduated from Adrian college a poor boy in 1870, studied medicine in Chicago and then took a course in Bellevue hospital, New York. He next looked about for a fair partner, marrying the only daughter of Thomas Dean, a gentleman resident of New York city, who is reputed to possess $50,000,000 of this world's goods. Mr. Fordyce lives at Seventy-second street and Fifth avenue in the metropolis, and is practicing medicine, though, it is needless to say, not because he has to. So says an Adrian correspondent of the News.

David McNair received a telegram yesterday morning conveying the sad intelligence of the death of the venerable Peter Sharp, on Tuesday afternoon at his home in San Jose, Cal. He was a representative in the Michigan Legislature in 1858-59, and was postmaster at Ridgeway for 34 years. He leaves four children: Wilbur F. of San Jose; Samuel C. of Benton Harbor; Carlisle A, of Adrian; and Mrs. D. McNair of this village. He went to San Jose in 1889, and has since been living on property he owned in that city.

Go to the Book Auction.

The Morenci Fair comes off this week.

Look out for Richard's Triple Shows next week Thursday.

Scove Walker is spending the present week on the old farm in Brooklyn.

Mrs. M. C. Ross, of Addison, is visiting Tecumseh friends for a week or two.

Miss Maude Hodges has taken a school near the village of Fairfield in this county.

Mrs. Prof. Morris and children were guests of H. S. Lee a couple of days last week.

Co. C have decided to attend the parade at the County Fair on Thursday, Sept. 29th.

The Dundee Fair is on the program [illegible], commencing Tuesday, and continuing four days.

Miss Adah Waldron went to Menominee last week to teach in the Kindergarten department of the public schools.

The managers of the Lenawee County Fair expect to make it the best exhibition ever held in this section of the State.

John F. Hicks started for Saginaw last week. He expects to remain in that section of the state about two months.

The Democratic State Convention to nominate a candidate for Supreme Judge will be held at Lansing on Tuesday, Oct. 5th.

The First Infantry band won a prize of $50 at the Labor day contest at Jackson, Monday. There were four other competitors.

Jay Morse took the school census this year. He found 550 scholars of school age in the district, an increase of six over last year.

Presiding Elder Ryan preached at the M. E. church last Sunday morning. The communion rite was observed after the regular services.

James. Lee, a well known resident of Norvel, has just returned from the Keeley Institute at Ypsilanti. He is enthusiastic in its praise.

"Our Messenger" for September is in circulation. It is a live little sheet published by the Epworth League of Hudson at 25 cents a year.

Mrs. D. N. Goodrich, of Chicago, is visiting at her father's, I. H. Schreder's. She came last Wednesday and expects to remain about two weeks.

Last Tuesday's rain was one of the heaviest storms of the season thus far. Although a little early the clerk of the weather may have intended it for the equinoctial.

M. F. Marks is packing up his drug stock and will start on Saturday for his new home at Rhinelander, Wis. His brother-in-law, Jesse Potter, will go into business with him there.

We call attention to the new card and supplement fly in this issue, of W. H. McDevitt. His sale of damaged books is a great success. People should avail themselves of this opportunity.

The large water pipe for the leading main on Chicago street are now being distributed along the street. The work of laying them will soon begin. The boilers and stand pipe are under construction.

Our fellow townsman, M. P. Brown, received the nomination for County Clerk at the Prohibition county convention. Although his chances for election are a little shadowy, he is one of the best candidates on the list.

The Red Clawson wheat is all the rage this year. It promises to take the place among red wheat that the Old Clawson did among white. Those wanting seed of this excellent variety will do well to see A. P. Coddington, who has about 100 bushels which he will sell at a reasonable price.

The matter of incorporating the village of Addison is again proposed by some of our citizens and should receive the hearty support of all progressive order-loving people in case any action is taken in that direction. The necessary expense would be but nominal, while the benefits would be almost incalculable.

The Tecumseh Athletic Club will give a sparring match at the Opera House, on Wednesday evening next, Sept. 21st. Twelve members will enter, divided into six pairs and each pair will spar three rounds. The band will furnish music during the evening. Strict order will be maintained and a fine exhibition may be expected; admission twenty-five cents.

The work on the new Palmer furniture factory was begun Tuesday morning. It will be completed by December and will be occupied before the close of the present year. The main building will be of brick, two stories high and 120x48 feet; besides this there will be a store room and a boiler and engine room. Mr. Palmer will bring about 30 families from Hillsdale with him.—The Messenger.

It will pay our readers to come to town and see the free sights given by Richard's Triple Shows on Thursday, Sept. 22d. and "take in" the circus. They travel by their own special train, and the company is composed of one hundred first class circus people, and taking everything into consideration, we can assure our readers that they will be highly entertained if they will only take the opportunity. The prices are cheap, adults, 35 cents; children, 25 cents. See their large advertisement in this issue, and read it carefully.

—It is poor economy to put off attending a Normal or Collage because of hard times. It would be equally wise to put off planting corn because of the expense of the seed. In gaining an education time lost now is lost forever. The expense of attending some of our excellent higher institutions, such as the Fayette Normal University, of Fayette, O., is now so low that any one may find a way to meet it. Do not wait until another year. Attend now. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements, and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, Conclusively prove that true merit always is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES

"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric Foot Warmers are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 the price is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is readily relieved. Sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved. Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c. or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $8 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt except $5 belt, and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot Warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

St. Vitus Dance Cured. VIII

SAN ANDREAS, Cal., Feb., 1889.
My boy, 13 years old, was so affected by St. Vitus Dance that he could not go to school for two years. Two bottles of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic restored his health, and he is now attending school again.

MONEY SAVED.

Democratic Management Under a Democratic Law Saves the People $10,000 in a Single Year in Eleven State Institutions.

Keep These Figures and Show Them to Your Neighbors — They Are Official and Interesting.

The statute enacted by the last legislature for a uniform system of accounting has been productive of very good results.

To carry out the promises of the democratic party and give the people an efficient and economical administration, by making the best possible use of the money gathered in taxes, and appropriated for the maintenance of our penal and charitable institutions, have been the [illegible] object of the present state officials. The law has worked admirably; it has required monthly settlements of all funds, and monthly accountings in all of the institutions, thereby giving the auditor general full knowledge of the exact financial condition of each institution and of the movement of their population twelve times a year instead of once a year, as under the old plan. The results are compiled every three months, so that four times every year the quarterly statement of all the institutions is furnished the managers of the various institutions and the public as well. Thus any extravagance that might develop by carelessness or otherwise is checked before serious losses could occur. The superintendents of the different institutions, with a natural pride, like to have their own management make as good a showing as any similar state institution, consequently the comparisons made in the quarterly statements of the auditor general, which show the cost per capita for food, clothing, salaries of officers, etc., as well as the earnings, create an actual competition, in a strife to cut down expenses to the minimum, and increase earnings to the maximum amount. The operation of the law, for uniform accounting of the institutions, has been worth many thousands of dollars to the state during its first year of trial. The people should not forget to whom they are indebted for this wise enactment that has turned back to their state treasury thousands of dollars of the regular appropriations where heretofore the funds have almost invariably been overdrawn.

As an illustration of the extent of the benefit we make some comparisons: The school for the blind had last year an average of 74 inmates. The first quarterly statement showed the expense per capita for food to be 23 cents a day, but each succeeding quarter showed the expense to be growing less, until at the close of the year the average was brought down to 15.7 cents a day, making a saving on provisions alone of 9.3 cents a day for each of the 74 inmates. This made a daily saving of $7.18 on the one item of food. The per capita cost per year for each man for all expenses under republican management for the previous year was $289.20, and for the year ending June 30, 1892, under democratic management $230.32, a saving of $58.88 per inmate. Total saving for 74 inmates, $4,-357.12. The school for the deaf had an average of 475 inmates, and the expense per capita for the year just closed was $184.52; for the previous year under republican rule the expense was $205.90; saved per inmate, $21.38; total saving, $5,879.50. The per capita cost at the state public school for 1891 was $174.09; under the new administration for 1892, it was $150.09, a saving of $18 for each child. The average number in the school for the last year was 207; saved for the year, $3,736. At the insane asylum at Kalamazoo, the per capita cost in 1891 was $192.44; in 1892, $174.03; saved per inmate, $18.41; average number of inmates, 1,040; saved for the year, $19,146.40. Eastern asylum, per capita cost for 1891 was $193.08; for 1892, $186.02; saved per inmate, $7.06; average number of inmates, 898; saved in the year, $6,339.88. Criminal insane asylum, per capita cost for 1891 was $209.-06; for 1892, $174.23; saved per inmate, $34.83; average number of inmates, 161; saved for the year, $5,607.63. State prison, per capita cost in 1891 was $166.40; for 1892, $133.23; saved per inmate, $33.07; average number of inmates, 767; saved for the year, $25,824.89. This institution largely increased the earnings of the prisoners, which will greatly increase the benefits to the people by reason of the change of management. The house of correction had a per capita expense of $348.08 in 1891; in 1892, $288.40; saved per inmate, $109.68; average number of inmates, 923; saved for the year, $55,426.04. House of correction at Marquette, per capita cost in 1891, $541.28; in 1892, $502.00; saved per inmate, $12.28; average number of inmates, 110; saved for the year, $1,350.80. At the reform school for boys the per capita expense in 1891 was $120.20; in 1892, $100.70; saved per inmate, $13.50; average number of inmates, 488; saved for the year, $6,588.00. At the soldiers' home the per capita cost in 1891 was $172.70; in 1892, $145.74; saved per soldier, $26.96; average number of soldiers, 471; saved for the year, $12,698.16. The years given in these comparisons are the fiscal years ending June 30, 1891, and June 30, 1892. The first half of the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1891, was the last half of the calendar year 1890, and was under the republican administration. The law for the uniform accounting in state institutions was not in operation until the close of the fiscal year. The figures would be more favorable to the new law and the democratic administration were it not for the fact that the year 1891 was half the time under the present administration. But the saving is enormous, and the people should be truly thankful that the republicans were turned down in 1890. The act should be repeated and emphasized this fall.

SELF-CONVICTED.

The Republicans Denounce Their Own Practices in Hope of Securing Votes.

The return of republicans to power means favoritism to corporations. The republican convention at Saginaw exhibited a little conscience, developed no doubt by their disastrous defeat of 1890. They condemn in loud terms the extravagance of long sessions of the legislature, and roundly denounce the corrupt use of free passes. Their attempt to fool the people is so brazen that the least intelligent person can detect their hypocrisy and duplicity. They are themselves guilty of the extravagance of long sessions, their [illegible] and, by far, the most expensive of any in the history of the state. Time and money were worse than squandered, for the work was so inefficiently done and the enactments so poorly constructed that unconstitutional enactments were the rule, and not the exception, of the last republican legislature. As a result of this fact much expensive litigation to individuals ensued, and the supreme court was so glutted and overcrowded with the work of setting aside republican unconstitutional enactments that relief had to be provided for the court by statute.

The democratic legislature was certainly a long time in session; but here is the reason for it. The republicans had been so long in power, had enacted so many vicious statutes and been so negligent of the just rights of the people, that there was much to be done to remedy the many existing abuses, and satisfy the imperative demands of the organized laboring men and farmers of the state.

More than 1,400 bills were introduced and referred to the proper committees. These bills were all carefully considered and many were enacted into laws; thus it was that the democratic legislature of necessity—created by the republicans—had a long session. But mark these words: The democratic legislature enacted laws that shifted the burden of taxation from the individual citizens to the corporations to such an extent that more than double the entire expense, even of long sessions, will be met by the additional taxes levied upon the corporations. Remember, also, that former republican legislatures had been petitioned in vain to enact such laws. They had neglected and refused to do so while holding long sessions and enjoying special favors from the very same corporations, which the democratic legislature called upon to share the burdens heretofore unjustly imposed upon the individual taxpayers.

Other important reform legislation is contemplated by democracy, and will be enacted if they are retained in power, for the deck is in a comparative degree cleared for action and the work of the next session would be accomplished in much less time than required for the last. Double the expense can easily be taxed from other corporations that have not yet been called upon to contribute to the public burden for the privileges they enjoy. The republican platform scolds about the corrupt use of free passes by state officials and members of the legislature. It is well that those who know of the corrupting influence of free passes should confess it, but, like Ananias of old, the half has been kept back—therefore, they cannot be trusted. It is a notorious fact that it was the common practice of members of republican legislatures to draw seven days' pay for four days of indifferent work; and the balance of the time was spent either in riding upon free passes in pursuit of private business and personal pleasure, or junketing upon committees on free passes, while taxing mileage and hotel expenses to the state. The records kept by themselves—which, however, were illegally and designedly kept two years behind in publication, show that thousands and thousands of dollars of illegal mileage were charged at 10 cents a mile, by republicans high in office. And it is a well-known fact that the greater part of this travel for which mileage was charged was upon free passes. Such robbery was not legalized even, and was absolutely indefensible. Republican officials, platforms or papers never admitted or criticized their extravagance or corruption so long as they enjoyed the benefits of such extravagance and corruption. So long as they were continued in power so long corruption of officials, extravagance and robbery of the people's treasury continued. But the defeat of 1890 certainly taught them understand their practices; that their only hope of return lies in their abuse of their own corrupt practices. May their hypocrisy be discovered by the credulous but honest, voting taxpayers and the people be saved from the consequences that are sure to follow the return to power of the party that has always been for the corporation against the people.

Those Newspaper Steals.

Some republican papers in Michigan have justified republican state officials in charging their newspapers to the state because, it is claimed, the files of the papers were of benefit to the office. But no files of such papers have been kept in any of the offices. The papers were read by the officials and then filed in the waste basket. They were of no advantage to the state whatever. No man ever should have been, or should be, elected to a state office who was not a regular reader of the current news as furnished by at least one of the state papers. No accounts for newspapers should have been charged or allowed, and none have been during the present administration.

NINE ARE DEAD.

Two Trains Collide at West Cambridge, Mass.

Thirty-Eight Others Injured — An Engineer Who Is Blamed for the Disaster Says He Failed to See Any Danger Signals.

DUE TO A FOG.

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—To a dense fog and apparent carelessness on the part of the engineer of the freight train are to be ascribed the fatal accident on the Fitchburg railroad shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday evening at West Cambridge by which nine were killed and thirty-eight injured. A few hundred feet beyond the West Cambridge station a single track branching from the main line constitutes the Watertown branch. The outward Watertown train which left Boston at 10:15 Saturday night was well filled with passengers. Detained a few minutes at Charleston, where the Fitchburg crosses the tracks of the Boston & Maine it reached the cross-over two or three minutes late and there waited for an inward bound passenger train to pass on the main line before switching over to the branch. The conductor knowing that a freight was coming up in the rear sent a brakeman back with a red lantern. The fog was thick and the engineer of the freight asserts that he saw no danger signal. Just before the freight reached the brakeman, the inward passenger train having thundered by, the outward train sounded the recall to the brakeman and began to move toward the cross-over track to the branch. All the cars had crossed over except the rear one, when there was a short blast for down brakes from the engine of the freight in the rear and an instant later a crash. The engineer of the freight saw the danger too late to avoid the accident. His big engine plowed its way through nearly the whole length of the rear coach and passengers were crushed beneath it or jammed in between the sides of the car and the engine's hot boiler.

Escaping steam added to the torture of the injured and scalded many who had otherwise miraculously escaped harm. Surgeons and ambulances from Cambridge, Somerville and Boston were quickly on the scene, and the remains of the dead and the tenderly cared for and the wounds of the injured promptly dressed. The list of the dead is:

Miss Margoire Adams, 35 years, Watertown, died in hospital; John H. Barnes, 61 years, Newton; Miss Rhita Feyler, 23 years, Waltham; John Hudson, 51 years, Watertown; John Lane, 41 years, Watertown; H. F. Merrifield, Watertown; Leon O. Raymond, freight brakeman, Winchendon; Standish P. Sullivan, 50 years, East Watertown; Benjamin Tuck, 65 years, Watertown.

THE ODD FELLOWS.

Preparing for Their Sixty-Eighth Annual Communication.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 10.—On the 19th of this month the sixty-eighth annual conclave of the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will meet in this city, and preparations are under way for a large attendance. The following concerning the order will be of interest:

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows is a secret society of American origin. The first lodge was founded in Baltimore April 26, 1819, and it was known as Washington Lodge No. 1. The growth of the order since its start has been remarkable. From 1830 to 1892 2,000,000 members were initiated. It has spread from the United States and Canada, until now there is a flourishing membership in Australia, India and Germany. In this country there are at present 750,000 members, divided in 12,000 lodges and encampments.

The objects of odd fellowship have been described as the relief and welfare of members. The aim is made to promote friendship, love and truth. These are the three essential principles. In the history of the order 1,500,000 members and 200,000 widows and families have received relief. Funeral expenses of members up to a certain sum are paid by their lodges. In the last fifty years $9,000,000 has been collected in dues. Of this $2,500,000 has been disbursed. The remainder is invested in lodge halls, regalia and other property. The sick benefits turned back by members able to dispense with them have in some of the states reached a handsome sum, and the money, it is said, will probably be used for the foundation of hospitals or orphan asylums for the children of odd fellows.

Shot His Young Bride.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 10.—Frank Garvin, the artist employed by the Commercial Gazette, shot and killed his bride of a few days at their residence on Avery street, Allegheny City, just before noon Friday. Mrs. Garvin, formerly Cora Redpath, was for a number of years a trapeze actress with Barnum's show and was widely known. She was about 20 years of age.

Found Hiding in a Closet.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 10.—Murderer Frank A. Houck, who shot and killed John Murphy and John Haggerty in James Cogin's saloon at West Duluth Tuesday night, was captured Thursday noon. He was found hiding in a closet off a room occupied by Mary Kasmaski in the St. Charles hotel, two blocks from the scene of the tragedy.

Retribution.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—Sam Dixon, a negro charged with lying in wait and attempting to murder Judge Henry Long six weeks ago, was found swinging to a tree at the same spot where Long was shot. A few days ago Judge Rost, of Gretna court, admitted Dixon to bail in $200. He was found at home Tuesday night by a mob.

Killed for Money.

DURANGO, Mexico, Sept. 10.—Celas Martes, agent of the state bank of this city, was on his way with five guards to Mazatlan with $10,000 in gold coin, and while in the Madre mountains they were all killed by brigands and the money stolen.

Says He Will Kill Himself.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 10.—Anarchist Bergmann, who attempted to take the life of H. C. Frick, stated in an interview that if his sentence was for more than ten years he would kill himself.

Named for Governor.

PUEBLO, Col., Sept. 10.—The republican state convention nominated state officers here Thursday. Joseph C. Helm was its choice for governor.

SPECIMEN CASES.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catlaba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. Six bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by J. J. Orr.

MERCURIAL RHEUMATISM

Mr. J. C. Jones, of Fulton, Ark., says: "About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. Leading physicians prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without any relief. I also tried mercurial and potash remedies, with unsuccessful results, but which brought on an attack of mercurial rheumatism that made my life one of agony. After suffering four years I gave up all remedies and commenced using S. S. S. After taking several bottles, I was entirely cured and able to resume work. S. S. S. is the greatest medicine for blood poisoning to-day in the market."

REGULATING TIME.

The Intricate System of the Navy Department.

An Electric Spark Sets All the Big Clocks in the Country and Tells Us When It Is Noon in Washington.

Away out at the western end of the city of Washington is a wooded hill overlooking the Potomac, and forming part of a large government reservation or park, which reaches down to the river's edge. On the top of this hill, remote from all the other public buildings in Washington, stands the United States naval observatory.

This branch of the navy department is of great service to the government, and plays a very important part in the daily affairs of the country; for it is here that standard government time is reckoned for the use of the departments, and for the primary purpose of testing and rating the chronometers used on the United States war vessels, and it is from this observatory that standard time is regulated all over the country.

Precisely at noon each day it sends out an electric signal to the various government offices and buildings throughout the District of Columbia, and, by means of the telegraph, this same signal is flashed over the United States at the same instant.

In order that this signal may be sent out at the right time, it is necessary that the officers in charge of the government time service at the observatory should know at just what instant the sun crosses the seventy-fifth meridian, or is directly above the meridian seventy-five degrees west longitude, which, as you have learned, is one of a number of imaginary lines stretched from pole to pole across the earth's surface, and reckoned according to their distance east or west from Greenwich. Now, this seventy-fifth meridian has been chosen as the standard for regulating time, so that when the sun gets exactly over that line it is twelve o'clock at Washington, eleven o'clock at Chicago, ten o'clock at Denver and nine o'clock at San Francisco; for, as you perhaps know, according to this system of standard or "railroad" time (it being originally adopted for the convenience of the railroads) the country is divided into four sections—Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific—each just one hour in advance of the other, and time at all places in the same section is the same. Accordingly, when it is noon at Washington it is also noon at Philadelphia, New York, Boston and every other place included within the eastern section. This, of course, is not strictly correct, for it is really noon at only such places through which the seventy-fifth meridian happens to pass, as the true noonday of a place is when the sun is directly overhead. Washington, for example, is on the seventy-seventh meridian, or two degrees farther west, and, consequently, according to its local time it is only eight minutes of twelve, while the true time of Boston, which is four degrees to the east, is sixteen minutes in advance. But if every city were to use its own time, it would, in many cases, give rise to a good deal of confusion and inconvenience; and it was for the very purpose of avoiding this that the present system of standard time was adopted.

As we have seen, the time for sending out the noon signal from Washington is the instant the sun crosses the seventy-fifth meridian. This, however, is not the sun which gives us light and heat, but an invisible, imaginary one; because, for certain reasons, the true sun does not cross the meridian at the same moment every day, but during one part of the year he gets over it a little more ahead of time each day, and during the other part he is correspondingly behind time; and so this fictitious sun is used, because its apparent path around the earth brings it exactly over the same line at the same moment every day. Now at just what instant this sun crosses the meridian is determined by means of the stars; for time at the observatory is not reckoned by the sun, but by the stars.

Every clear night an astronomer at the observatory looks through a large telescope for certain stars which he knows must cross a certain line at certain times, and by the use of an electrical machine he makes a record of the time each star passes, as shown by a clock which keeps sidereal or star time. He then consults a printed table, which shows him at just what time each star must have passed, and by as much as this time differs from that recorded by the clock the latter is wrong, and in that way the sidereal clock is regulated. This star time is then reduced to sun time, which requires some calculation, as there is a difference between the two of about four minutes each day, a sidereal year consisting of just one day more than a solar year.

These two clocks—the one keeping star time, and the other sun time—are of very fine quality, and are as near perfection as possible. Although they cannot help being affected by changes of temperature and different conditions of the atmosphere, they very rarely are more than a fractional part of a second out of the way. No attempt is ever made to correct such errors, but they are carefully noted and allowed for in making calculations.

For the purpose of distributing time a third clock, known as a transmitter, is used. This is set to keep time by the seventy-fifth meridian, and is regulated by the standard clock before mentioned. It is, in all respects, similar to the other clocks, except that it has attached to it an ingenious device by which an electric circuit may be alternately opened and closed with each beat of the pendulum. This clock controls such circuits, one of them being used for dropping the Washington time-ball, and the other one connecting with the several telegraph instruments, known as repeaters, which stand on a case near by. These instruments in turn connect with the telegraph company's offices at Washington and New York, and control the Washington fire-alarm circuit and the observatory clock line. By means of the former the alarm bells in all of the fire-engine houses in the city are struck, the horses unhitched and the doors thrown open, all by a single spark of electricity, just as is done when an alarm of fire is sent in; for the noon signal to the engine houses is used for the additional purpose of striking the alarm for the daily practice of the fire department. The observatory clock-line connects with the several hundred clocks in the government offices and buildings, including the white house and the capitol, and sets them to correct time at noon by means of a simple mechanical device in each clock, operated by electricity; so that, whether a clock loses or gains during the twenty-four hours, its hour and minute hands spring to twelve, and its second hand to sixty.

A few minutes before noon the transmitter is compared with the standard clock, and if it is not found to be exactly eight minutes, twelve seconds and nine one-hundredths of a second ahead of the standard clock (that being the exact difference between Washington and standard time) it is set right by making it gain or lose, as the case may require, by quickening or retarding the pendulum with a gentle touch of the finger.

At fifty-six minutes and forty-five seconds after eleven, everything being in readiness, a switch is turned on, and the next instant the beats of the pendulum begin to tick the seconds on the telegraph instruments in the Washington and New York telegraph offices. At this signal all work on the telegraph lines is at once suspended, and connections made from one office to another, from town to town, and from state to state, until the tick, tick of the clock at Washington is heard in the telegraph office of every railroad station, town and city in the United States.

Every twenty-ninth tick is omitted, because there is no signal goes out at the twenty-ninth second; so that a pause of a second signifies that the next click of the instrument will mark half a minute, or thirty seconds, and the first click, after a pause of five seconds, indicates the beginning of a minute, as the ticks corresponding to the fifty-fifth, fifty-sixth, fifty-seventh, fifty-eighth and fifty-ninth seconds are omitted. In order to distinguish the last minute, and afford time for making connections with time balls, clocks, etc., the signals stop at the fiftieth second, or ten seconds before twelve.

Then, precisely at noon, the instant the sun crosses the seventy-fifth meridian, the signal is flashed over the wires, there is a single throb from one end of the land to the other, the telegraph instruments from Maine to California give a final click, the time-ball on the building of the state, war and navy departments drops, and, simultaneously with it time-balls drop at Havana, Cuba, and at all the prominent sea ports from Boston to New Orleans, those on the Pacific coast being operated by a branch observatory in California, the hands of every government clock point to twelve, while the fire-alarm bells throughout the city of Washington sound forth their clangorous announcement of noon, and the whole nation is informed of the correct standard time.—Clifford Howard, in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Sleepy Doctor.

One day recently a French doctor, who had company to dinner, sat quietly chatting in a corner of the drawing-room, when he was told that a patient had come to see him who was strongly recommended by some fellow-practitioners and whose card was brought in by the page. The doctor submitted with a bad grace and stepped into his surgery. The visitor was in an advanced stage of consumption. The bronchial tubes were in a deplorable condition and the vocal chords nearly worn out. Our physician was in the habit of ascertaining the condition of the patient by asking him to count, and generally stopped him at thirty or thirty-five—quite long enough for the purpose. This time, also, Dr. P—— asked his patient to count. Time passed on, and the guests began to feel alarmed at his protracted absence. One of them opened the surgery door. Dr. P—— had gone to sleep in his arm-chair, and the patient had counted up to eight thousand six hundred and forty-two.—Le Matin.

"He has never put his foot in one." "Does he come home late?" "He goes to bed directly after dinner." "A model young man, madam. How old is he?" "Just two months."—As You Like It.

FULL OF CHOLERA.

The Scandia Reaches New York Laden with the Pest.

Sick and Dying Immigrants from Hamburg Crowd the Vessel—All Classes of Passengers Stricken—Sent to Lower Quarantine.

WORST FEARS REALIZED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The steamer Scandia has anchored at lower quarantine. There have been thirty-two deaths from cholera on board and the vessel is full of people suffering in all stages of the disease. The ship is crowded with passengers, there being 981 in the steerage. A panic reigns among the unfortunate people on board and all are clamoring for relief. Of the thirty-two deaths twenty were men in the steerage, two in the second cabin and one in the first cabin. The Scandia is at lower quarantine, surrounded by patrol boats and it is impossible to get at her. Seven cases have been transferred to Swinburne island.

Before she had been many days out the cholera had broken out and before she arrived the pest was fairly raging on board of her. Thirty-nine cases occurred in half a week. Of these thirty-two succumbed before she arrived at the lower quarantine. One by one, by couples and by threes the bodies of the unfortunate victims were dropped overboard.

The Scandia is the first vessel to arrive thoroughly infected with cholera. The Moravia, Rugia and Normannia had brought it in their steerages, and in the case of the latter it had worked among the crew. The Scandia has cholera from her bow to her stern, from her main deck to her keel. Cabin passengers, crew and immigrants all have it in their midst, and she will probably be the hardest cholera importer to fight of the lot.

THE RECORD AT QUARANTINE.

There were three deaths at quarantine on Friday. This makes in all a total of eighteen deaths which have occurred in New York harbor since the Moravia arrived August 25. During that time forty-four new cases have developed.

GOV. FLOWER ACTS.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Gov. Flower has authorized Dr. Jenkins, health officer of New York, to rent a steamer to take passengers from the Normannia, if possible; if not possible, to purchase such a steamer and to inform him of conditions of purchase by telegraph.

WILL USE SANDY HOOK.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—At the request of Secretary of the Treasury Foster, the war department has consented to the use of part of the government reservation at Sandy Hook for quarantine purposes. The cooped-up cabin passengers on the ocean steamers lying at anchor at lower quarantine in New York harbor will accordingly be removed at once to the government reservation at Sandy Hook, and their comfort and freedom from pestilence, which have been an object of much solicitude to government officials here, will thus be secured as far as possible. Target practice will be interfered with by this arrangement, but this is regarded as comparatively a small inconvenience in comparison with the results obtained in greater security to human life.

WARNED BY THE PRESIDENT.

LOON LAKE, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Besides directing that the government ground at Sandy Hook be used as a camp for detained passengers, the president has advised Secretary Foster at New York to serve notice on all steamship companies that if they persisted in bringing emigrants from infected ports it might result in their being denied entrance to our harbors.

HOSPITAL AT DETROIT.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 10.—The board of health has purchased the steamer Milton D. Ward for use as a cholera hospital. She will be thoroughly renovated and fitted up for service and then anchored at a point some 5 miles down the river.

QUARANTINE AGAINST AMERICA.

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 10.—The home board of health has decided to establish strict quarantine against the United States should what it considers decided cases of cholera appear there. In carrying out this design it will specify six stations only where passengers and goods can enter Mexico, and will allow no trains to cross the frontier.

ARMED TO RESIST.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The much distressed cabin passengers of the Normannia are in trouble; that of a most serious if not perilous kind. Between the guns of an armed and fear-crazed body of men and the privilege of being confined on a boisterous night on a comparatively small steamer without provisions either for sleeping or eating, their condition has reached the climax of its misery. The 471 first and second cabin passengers who started Sunday afternoon on the Cepheus for Fire island were compelled to return without landing and pass the night on that boat. The Cepheus arrived at Fire island at 7:15. On Fire island were 120 armed deputy health officers from the town of Islip. These men were there to prevent the landing of the Normannia's refugees. The pilot had been intimidated, he feared for his life and his position. After hovering about the bar long enough to make certain that it was to get no pilot the Cepheus turned about and started back.

Tried to Suffocate Herself.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Sept. 10.—Gertie Buckner attempted suicide Friday by winding a heavy quilt around her head to produce suffocation. Her life was saved with difficulty. Untrue and scandalous reports caused her to attempt her life.

Many Killed by Lightning.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A number of disastrous thunderstorms have been reported from various parts of Spain recently. Several persons have been killed by lightning, while damage has been done [illegible] in the province of Granada.

CARLETON, Mich., Aug. 29, 1890.
Dr. O. J. Fay & Co.:
Gentlemen, This is to certify that I, the undersigned, have been troubled with weak lungs and take cold easily. I have used Dr. Fay's New Treatment for consumption and can say that it is the best medicine I have ever used for the lungs, and would recommend it to all afflicted with lung trouble. I have also used it for a small girl who was considered in the first stage of consumption and it cured her.

FREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION.

The political campaign brings the tariff again to the front. But, after all, the strongest free traders believe in [illegible] health. There are many ways of doing the latter, but if one is bilious, dull, poor in appetite, with headache, heaviness and lack of energy, there is no better way than to use a few bottles of Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. They will improve your appetite, aid digestion and brace you up generally. Only 25 cents a large bottle. Sold by dealers.

A PILE OF MONEY WASTED.

People have wasted piles of money trying to cure Piles. A cheaper and surer way is to buy a box of Parmelee's Pile Suppositories for 50 cents, and see what they will do. You can get your money back if they do not benefit you. The proprietors are that sure of them. Sold by dealers.

WHEN YOUR STOCK IS SICK

Use Parmelee's Condition Powders. They are acknowledged the best by all who have used them. Full pound 25 cents. Sold by dealers.

BURNING PETROLEUM AT OIL CITY

Wrought terrible havoc to life and property. Yet Petroleum is one of nature's great natural remedies. It enters very largely into Parmelee's Household Ointment, which is positively guaranteed to cure ulcers, old sores, erysipelas, salt rheum, scratches on horses, hard or cracked hoofs and foot rot in sheep. Sold everywhere and used by every one who knows anything about it.

LOOK OUT FOR THAT FALL COUGH.

Do not allow it to become settled on you for the winter. It will prove a serious matter if you do. Stop it now. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will surely do this. It is guaranteed to. Compare the size of the Hamilton Cough Balsam bottle with other Cough remedies of the same price.

THE CHEAPEST IS NOT ALWAYS THE BEST.

But in the case of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla the two features seem to go together. It is as strong, as effective, as certain in its action, as positive in its cures as any higher priced article of similar nature in the market to-day. It sells for only 50 cents a bottle. Ask for Parmelee's and be sure you get Parmelee's.

A common cold should not be neglected. Downs' Elixir will cure it.

"Milky White, or Driven from Home," followed by the farce, "A Merry Cobbler," will be presented by the A. O. Miller Company at Town Hall, Friday evening, Sept. 16th. This troupe almost invariably draws a full house here and this will probably prove no exception to the rule.

Solicitors for electric lights are meeting with success, and we feel sure that in the shortest possible time Clinton will be one of the "bright lights" of the county in this, as well as in many other respects. All that is needed is the hearty co-operation of citizens with those who are making every endeavor to secure lights. Little can be done without the harmonious action of a majority of the people, and Clinton is seldom "divided against itself" but the citizens generally move with one accord towards any public improvement.

On Thursday the Observer was notified by A. V. Overton that a speaker for the Prohibition party on "Political Day" at the Morenci Fair had just been engaged. We are glad to make the announcement that this speaker is none other than Rev. John Russell, the Prohibition candidate for governor. He is known as the "father of the Prohibition party." For years he has faithfully, unrelentingly battled for its principles. He has a vigorous intellect and what he has to say is worth listening to. No man can uphold the Prohibition cause with greater ability than John Russell. Come to the Morenci Fair and hear a governor, an ex-governor and a candidate for governor—Ex-Gov. Luce, Gov. Winans and John Russell.—Morenci Observer.

Teachers and Pupils of Lenawee County.

Permit me to call your attention once more to the Educational Exhibit for the county fair. Last year's exhibit was very creditable, but this year we ought to far surpass it. The managers of the agricultural society have kindly given a whole building to the educational department, fitting it up very conveniently. Will you not all take an interest in making this department one of the most interesting features of the whole fair?

For the fine list of prizes which have been offered in this department, see pages 74 to 76 of the premium list of the fair.

The oratorical contest will take place on the fair grounds on Wednesday, Sept. 28. The prize for the best original oration, which must be delivered on the grounds, is a four years scholarship in Adrian college, worth $60. The competition is open to any young gentleman or lady attending the public schools of the county and I hope there will be a large number of contestants. Those who intend to enter this contest are requested to notify E. L. Mills, Adrian, or myself as soon as possible.

Send all exhibits to Secretary, E. L. Mills, Adrian.

Hoping you will co-operate with me in making an educational exhibit that shall be a credit to yourselves and to the county, I am

Yours sincerely,

WHEN NATURE

Needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed. The best and most simple and gentle remedy is the Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

Half Rates to Adrian Fair.

Account of the Lenawee Co. Fair to be held at Adrian from Sept. 26th to 30th inclusive, the Lake Shore R'y will sell excursion tickets on above dates to Adrian and return, at one fare for the round trip, good going on date of sale and to return not later than Oct. 1st.

OUR COUNTY FAIR.

A Few Words From President Horton, Regarding Lenawee's Annual Exposition.

The Adrian fair will be held September 26th to 30th inclusive. All the railroads in the county, the Lake Shore, Wabash and C. J. & M., will carry passengers at one half regular rates and to better accommodate the great crowds of people that annually visit the fair, special trains will be run on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of fair week, by the L. S. Company, between Hillsdale and Adrian and Monroe and Adrian also east on the main-line to Sylvania evenings. Tickets will be good an any regular trains that make all stations. Special time schedules for regular and special trains have been published and sent to agents along all railroad lines, so that any desired infomation can be obtained of them. The territory for special rates has been greatly extended since last year, and far better facilities have been obtained for the comfort and accommodation of the public. We have also doubled the territory over which we have given thorough advertising.

The premium list has been substantially increased, many new and interesting [illegible] have been added, extensive [illegible]ents to the grounds made and [illegible] given to securing special attr[illegible] The universal approval and satisfaction of the tens of thousands of people who have visited the fair in years past, speak for a great and largely increased success this year.

So far as known we have offered the largest speed purses of any fair in the three stakes for the corresponding week, and confidently expect a great field of horses. We have more than doubled the lines of hitching posts for teams, which will be appreciated by all who desire to drive to the grounds. There is now convenient water supply for both man and beast.

Arrangements have been made for four great days.

The entire exhibit will be in order for Tuesday, and the regular routine will then be taken up. We have planned the best daily programme for the four days that was ever offered by the society: Children's day, Civic society and Military day, with sham battle; People's day, and Political day.

Bronco John's wild west show will give free exhibitions daily, commencing with Tuesday.

To the people of Lenawee and adjoining counties, who intend making an exhibit at the fair, we urge the necessity of looking over the premium list early, and carefully, and deciding upon the classes, and for what premiums you will compete. Have your list all made out, and then make the entries early to avoid errors and confusion incident to fair days, when all are hurrying to be waited upon by the secretary.

Remember the dates, and for any particulars see posters and bills, or write Secretary E. L. Mills, at Adrian.

Canon Exploration.

The following is taken from a late Rochester, N. Y. paper:

Rev. W. C. Burns, Ph. D., formerly of Rochester, and now of Stanton, Mich., who filled the pulpit of the South Congregational Church yesterday morning, has just returned from a tour of exploration tarough the Grand Canon of the Colorado, which he describes as being of the most adventurous and thrilling character. Dr. Burns, together with Professor James, a fellow of the Royal Historical Society, of England, and several others started for the canon early this month with the object in view of gathering material for a book on the new West and the Colorado canons. After journeying through the canon for several days the party started on a search for an extinct crater, which they had been told was in a collateral cannon. They were in gorges so deep and abrupt that not a ray of sunlight had ever entered them, and part of the time they were 12,000 feet below the level. The place where the crater was said to be looked but an hour's walk away, but it took them one and a half days to go down to it and two days to return. On the third day of the descent their supply of water gave out, and had it not been for the discovery of a little pocket of water in the rocks filled with toads and polliwogs they would have died half way back to the starting place. The thermometer registered 110 degrees in the shade, and the party were compelled to lie down under the rocks one entire day. At nightfall Dr. Burns and Professor Feifows gave out and would have died had not a member of the party been able to reach Mystic Spring and return with water.

After this the party visited Spotted Tail, and also the Supia Indians, who live in Cataract Canon, 275 miles from the nearest white station. They are the same tribe that found John D. Lee, of Mountain Meadow massacre fame, and brought him to their settlement. They live 3,500 feet below level in a little canon varying in width from 50 feet to three-quarters of a mile.

Dr. Burns will leave for the West next Thursday.

English Spavin Liniment removes all Hard, Soft or Calloused Lumps and Blemishes from horses, Blood Spavins, Curbs, Splints, Sweeney, Ring-Bone, Stifles, Sprains, all Swollen Throats, Coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. Democracy's Banner.

Air—"The Red, White and Blue."

Unfurl, then, Democracy's banner,
And let us emblazon thereon
The names of our candidates noble,
Who many a battle have won.
Grover Cleveland and Adlai, the hustler,
They will heed Miss Columbia's call
To lighten the taxpayer's burden
And the laboring man disenthrall.

CHORUS.

Our watchword and motto shall be,
The bond of the states none can sever,
Tis Cleveland and Stevenson now,
And the Union forever and ever.

They've stood in the thick of the combat,
And as statesmen their record is made
Who dare to stand up for the people,
And strike for the freedom of trade.
The friends of monopoly ruin
Are beginning to quake in their shoes;
For the people are rising in millions,
And the robbers are getting the blues.

CHORUS.

We are coming from city and hamlet,
We are coming from anvil and plow,
The merchant and farmer in common
Are crying for freer trade now.
We will wipe out the war tariff taxes,
We will haul down monopoly's rag.
We will vote for the men, good and noble,
Who honor Democracy's flag.

CHORUS.

Lippincott's Magazine for October.

The complete novel, "The Kiss of Gold," is by Miss Kate Jorden. It deals with the fortunes and misdemeanors of a young writer, whose sudden success was attended with temptation too strong for his integrity. The tale is illustrated throughout.

Under the title, "Hearing my Requiem," George Alfred Townsend (Gath) the well-known newspaper correspondent, narrates a curious incident in his professional experience of long ago.

James Cox gives a history of that well-established institution, the Carnival at St. Louis, and a full and interesting account of the liberal preparations which are to make it especially memorable this fall. This paper is illustrated by six full-page plates.

Edwin Checkley, whose portrait precedes his article, continues the Athletic Series with a lively plea for his favorite science of "Muscle-Building."

A portrait of the veteran poet journalist, Richard Henry Stoddard, heads his reminiscences of the late James Russell Lowell.

Sigmund J. Cauffman furnishes a fully illustrated account of certain monuments and remains, little known to the ordinary tourist, of "Old Paris."

In "Men of the Day," M. Crofton gives free and vivid sketches of G. A. Sala, Sir F. Leighton, Camille Flammarion, and, for home subjects, Speaker Crisp and General R. A. Pryor. This is a new department.

"As It Seems" discusses the vexed question of Romance vs. Realism in its present aspect.

There is an illustrated short story, "At the Stage Door," by Robert M. Stephens. The poetry of the number is by Margaret J. Preston, Helen Marion Burnside, and John B. Tabb,—besides a striking dialect piece, "The Prayer-Cure in the Pines," by Clarence H. Pearson.

COLUMBUS DAY PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, EXECUTIVE DEPT.

WHEREAS, The World's Congress Auxiliary of the World's Columbian Exposition has made a patriotic suggestion that, at the same time that the Exposition grounds at Chicago are being dedicated on October 21, 1892, the anniversary of the discovery of America, all the people of the United States unite in celebrating the anniversary, of which celebration the public schools of the Republic shall be everywhere the center; and

WHEREAS, The President of the United States has by proclamation recommended the observance of that day by public demonstration and by suitable exercises in the schools and other places of assembly throughout the land:

Now, Therefore, I, Edwin B. Winans, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby recommend and request the observance by the people of Michigan of the said 21st day of October, 1892, as a general holiday, that business be suspended, and that civil and military organizations join in the celebration.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the State, this first day of September, A. D. 1892.

EDWIN B. WINANS, Governor.

TECUMSEH, MICH., SEPT. 22, 1892.

The national democratic committee has issued an address of congratulation upon the result in Maine, Vermont and Arkansas. And well may Mr. Harrity felicitate his fellows upon the result. Such a republican slump in September elections was never before known in presidential years.

The Western Union seems to be getting along comfortably well in the accumulation of wealth. Its capital stock has just been increased from $10,000,000 to $100,000,000, just one more cypher added, that's all—a little matter of $90,000,000. With prudent management the plant will probably succeed in establishing itself.

The Republican slump in Maine following so closely after the defection in Vermont has set the Republican leaders to thinking and well they may. If the same percentage of Republican loss should obtain throughout the North, the contest would lie between Cleveland and Weaver: Gen. Harrison would be out of the race entirely.

It is altogether probable that the present cholera scare will result in an absolute prohibition of immigration for at least a year, as it is the opinion of all who have given the subject any study that the danger of the cholera getting a foothold in this country will be much greater next summer than it is at this time, and that it will be just as necessary to prohibit immigration then as now. The only question is, how is the prohibition to be brought about?

The New York Press is apparently delighted with the returns from Maine. It says that "Maine gives a Republican majority of 11,000; this result is entirely satisfactory."

A like result in Pennsylvania would make that State vote for Cleveland. The Republicans of Maine lose 8,000 of their majority on a poll of not more than 50,000. A like loss in Pennsylvania, with nearly ten times the Republican vote of Maine, would make that State Democratic.

Senators, representatives and other gentlemen more or less interested in politics who are now in Washington, are so busy looking after the comfort of the old soldiers, already beginning to arrive in large numbers, that they are not talking any politics. For the next ten days they will act politics. Each side will try to outdo the other, as there are still a number of states in which the way the soldiers' vote is cast means defeat or victory. This fact will add much to the pleasure of the veterans who will come to the encampment.

An exchange well says, there is cause for public gratification in the probable permanent removal from public view of the last so-called champion, John L. Sullivan. For years he has been posing as a conquering hero, varying his frequent drunken debauches with valinglorious tours about the country to invite the applause of the rabble. Sullivan was a good deal of a blowhard, as well as a blackguard, and no person, except those who lost money on him, will regret his ignominious fall from a position which, degraded though it was, he disgraced.

The Philadelphia Times has this beautiful tribute to the late Daniel Dougherty: "It is given to few men to win the warm affection of so wide a circle of friends as Daniel Dougherty had attached to himself in the years in which he was a familiar figure in Philadelphia. To all these the news of his death will bring a sense of personal bereavement, as well as of public loss to the city and to the bar that he adorned. Mr. Dougherty's brilliant talents as advocate and orator, that long since won him national fame, derived their power not more from the fine art with which they were employed, the grace of speech and charm of polished manner all his own, than from the sympathetic character that they expressed. It was this that reached the hearts of juries, that stirred audiences to enthusiasm and that won the affectionate regard of friends. His gracious and winning personality, his wit, his humor, his varied skill in all the social arts, were all expressions of the same genial character, the warm heart and lofty mind that made Daniel Dougherty one of the brightest ornaments of professional and social life in Philadelphia, and will make his death a universal loss.

THE TWO PARTIES.

A late number of Harper's Weekly contains a strong editorial leader contrasting the Republican and Democratic parties under their present leadership. It represents the "independent" view of current politics very fully and hence amounts to a prophecy as to where the large Independent vote in New York will go. After giving a sketch of the Republican party, from the early days when it was a party of principle, led by Lincoln, Seward, Sumner and Chase, down to the present campaign, when it has become more tender to favored monopolies, it thus reviews the Democratic party:

On the other hand, the development of the Democratic party of our day has been very different. Indeed, it has not yet reached the compact organization or definite purpose of its rival. Indeed, the only definition which will fairly embrace its varied forces from 1856 till now, is that of a combination to obtain and hold office. To certain negations its platforms have clung, as if conscious that they are its historical reason for existence. Even the chief of these, the protest against Federal centralization, has now no hold on the general mind in the North, and would be a sleeping issue, though not a dead one, but for the Republican folly of the force bill, which promises to consolidate the South as firmly as ever. Apart from traditional Jeffersonian maxims, accepted vaguely as Democratic ideas, the only principle capable of dictating a definite policy on which the party could claim historical consistency down to 1884 was that of a tariff for revenue. On this it won the signal triumph of 1844; and while 1848 brought defeat to its candidates and its organization, this principle remained the policy of the nation till the civil war. Meanwhile the party gave itself up to the slave power, to which the tariff question was but an incident. When the patriotic party crushed it, entering on a long lease of power, and thus gradually fell under the control of class interests and monopolies, the Democratic protest against it was timid, sporadic, and apparently hopeless. The party had no large idea, no inspiring thought, and seemed to be drifting into the attitude of criticism and mere contradiction which makes political life ignoble. The temporary and partial success of 1884 was gained less by the advocacy of any doctrine than by earnest opposition to a particular man; and the politics of the nation never seemed more petty or less instructive than during the period of a government divided between the parties and controlled by neither, which followed. It was by no merit of the Democratic organization, by no inspiration of its skilled leaders, but by the courage and statesmanship of the man whom they for far other purposes had placed at their head, that the party in 1888 was filled with new life. In his last annual message before the election President Cleveland revived for it the reign of ideas, the representation of principle, the platform of statesmanship. Standing on the demonstrations of social science, he attacked the abuse of the taxing power for private ends. He showed how this custom, already fixed and embodied in the tariff laws, inflicts endless wrong on the mass of citizens, demoralizes and degrades the sources of power, stimulates reckless improvidence in the government, and especially throws intolerable burdens on agriculture. He called for the immediate revision and amendment of our present tariff laws, the vicious, indefensible, and illogical source of unnecessary taxation.

From this message of December, 1887, may fairly be dated a new national Democratic party. It was not welcomed by the "bosses." Some of them, and the constituents of many more, derive great revenues from the sale of goods protected by the tariff. Others, caring only for immediate success, wished no positive principle, which would arouse fierce opposition, complicating the canvass, when the "machine" might be successful without it. But thousands recognized the call of the party of the future. Thoughtful men, eager for reform in politics; students of social science and of history; farmers who sell what duties cannot enhance in price, and buy what bears the full burden of taxes; men of fixed income and workers for wages whose value for life and enjoyment is cut down by the tariff; small manufacturers, too weak or too scattered to work in politics for the adjustment of duties to suit themselves; tradesmen of all classes who suffer when monopolies weigh upon the general prosperity—all these began to see that their cause, the cause of the whole people, had at last a spokesman and a champion. Had the party managers, in full sympathy with the leader, forced the fighting on his lines, the narrow margin of defeat in 1888 would certainly have been changed to a decided victory. But the Republican managers organized the protected classes more compactly and with larger resources than ever, and by a not too scrupulous use of these, regained control, though barely, of the whole government. They used it to reward their allies by a new tariff, more discriminating in its iniquity as to favoritism than any before it. It was so contrived as largely to reduce the revenues of the nation, while increasing those of many great protected industries, giving up much of the taxation for the government, while adding to that for favored monopolies.

Reform in our national government is essentially one impulse, one principle, one party. Demoralizing and iniquitous taxation is intimately associated with all other demoralizing and iniquitous methods of legislation and administration. Thoughtful students of history will see the connection between our vicious tariff system and that extension of "bossism" which makes a complete reform of the civil service more essential than ever. They see that the waste and corruption of our pensions are largely a result of the same cause. They see that the schemes by which ignorance, fanaticism, and avarice are conspiring to degrade the currency owe most of their dangerous strength to the laws which have trained men to seek wealth in legislation rather than in industry. The revolt of 1890 against the McKinley tariff was the first expression of an outraged people against a great wrong and the passion which inspired it seemed for the time to be exhausted in the effort. But there is deeper meaning in the widespread growth of an intelligent sentiment of reform, in the profound conviction that public office is a public trust, and that its powers must be exercised only for the people's good. It is the rapid growth of this sentiment, demanding a single eye to the nation's welfare in every appointment to office, in every enactment of a tax, in every expenditure of the people's money, that is the significant feature of American political life. With the call for tariff reform as the type of its demands as the first and immediate practical end to be reached by success in this election, independents unite with the young Democracy and proclaim their purpose to apply this principle everywhere.

Six years have passed since my first confinement, at which I suffered both long and intensely. Has Dropped Its Bundle.

The Republican party has dropped its force-bill bundle. Ex-Secretary Blaine, in his recent letter, wholly ignores that issue; President Harrison, in his letter of acceptance, is careful not to commit himself to it; and the Detroit Tribune and other g. o. p. organs are wildly calling on Democratic papers "to point out, if they can, any indorsement of the Lodge bill in the Republican national platform." And yet it was this very Lodge force bill that Blaine, Harrison and the Republican organs generally are now ignoring or repudiating that was forced through the House two years ago by a solid Republican vote, and only failed in the Senate through the defection of a few of the Republican Senators from all the silver states, who apparently voted against it in return for Democratic votes for free silver. Now, however, the Republican managers repudiate this very force bill which two years ago was made the test of party orthodoxy. Indeed, the "grand [illegible] Leader.

"How did they like you in Scraggleville?" asked one actor of another. "Very much, indeed it appeared. It was all I could do to induce the landlord to let me leave."

I have not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat, peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget, I procured a bottle, and since the first days' use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone.—D. ESTATE OF LUCY WALKER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 23d day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard R. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Lucy Walker, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of William H. Smith, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate with the will annexed, may be granted to him, the said [illegible] Rogers, or some other suitable person, the executor named in said will having departed this life.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 12th day of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition; and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said petition of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

(A True Copy.)

BURIED AT SEA.

Eleven Passengers of the Bohemia Die from the Cholera.

The Scourge Closely Watched in New York—This Country Is Not Prepared for the Pest—No More Danger at Present.

IMMIGRANTS BARRED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The steamer Bohemia has arrived in lower quarantine. It carries no cabin passengers, but 682 immigrants. It reports eleven deaths during the voyage, all of them children under 6 years. The captain says the cause of death was diarrhea and not cholera. The last death occurred five days ago. It is not known whether any are sick now or not. The Bohemia left Hamburg September 8.

IMMIGRANTS BARRED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16. — All the steamship companies have notified the secretary of the treasury that they will bring no steerage passengers to this country until congress assembles or the cholera epidemic ceases.

INDIANAPOLIS GUARDED.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 16.—The city authorities have established a quarantine against all passenger trains entering this city over the seventeen railroads which center here. The city board of health swore in a large number of deputies who will meet and inspect all trains at the Belt road. Secretary Morrison of the city board of health says that a rigid quarantine must be observed as long as there is cholera in New York.

CHOLERA CLOSELY WATCHED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—So far the board of health has been unable to trace the origin of the cholera cases that have occurred in the city. Thursday night three girls who came out as steerage passengers on the Friesland and were under quarantine in the house where little Minnie Levinger sickened and died, 411 East Forty-sixth street, were removed to Willard Parker hospital, where they will be detained for the present under strict surveillance. It is supposed they brought the infection into the Levinger household.

PASSENGERS RELEASED.

The Normannia passengers left Fire island at 8 o'clock a. m. Four hundred boarded the Cepheus and about thirty, including E. L. Godkin, Senator McPherson, A. M. Palmer and Lottie Collins, came by way of Babylon, taking the train there. They arrived in New York at 10:30 o'clock. The Cepheus got away and proceeded a mile or so when she grounded on a bar where she lay until released at 11 o'clock. Most of the detained passengers will go directly to their homes and few will remain in New York on account of the scare.

INDIANA QUARANTINE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 17.—The state board of health at a special meeting Friday empowered the city of Indianapolis to quarantine all trains as it may deem necessary and adopted rigid rules in relation to the inspection of trains at the state line. Local boards of health were authorized to inspect all trains that come from districts where cholera is supposed to exist and were instructed to not allow any suspicious persons or baggage to enter the state. All the trains entering Indianapolis from the east are now being carefully inspected beyond the city limits.

NOT PREPARED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The quarantine inspection commission appointed at the recent national conference of the state boards of health concluded its work here and resumed its tour, which will extend along the entire Atlantic, Pacific, Mexican and Canadian borders. A report will be made as to the sanitary condition of every port of entry along this vast stretch of border. Dr. J. M. McCormack, health officer of Kentucky and a member of the commission, gave some interesting particulars of the inspection tour and of its bearing on the cholera. He said:

"We have inspected every border point from Halifax to New York city, and have data from which reports will be made on the sanitary condition of every point of entry. We found the stations in the main unprepared for the cholera emergency which has come. They have antiquated disinfecting facilities and insufficient accommodations for the sick. Thus far New Orleans and Charleston are the only ports in the country properly equipped to keep out a plague. It has been Dr. Jenkins' stubbornness which has saved New York up to the present time, for he was willing to give discomfort to a few thousand people in order to save 62,000,000 people."

Dr. McCormack said that in one respect the cholera will confer a benefit upon the country. It has so alarmed the people that streets, alleys and sewers will be thoroughly cleaned and the entire country will be in a better sanitary condition than ever before. This improved condition, he says, will materially reduce the mortality from ordinary diseases.

NEW YORK SEEMS FREE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The board of health issued a bulletin Sunday afternoon in which it was stated that no cases of suspected cholera had appeared since the last bulletin and no deaths from cholera had occurred since Tuesday. They report that there is no reason to believe the diagnosis of the attending physician in the case of Peter Callahan, a suspected case, to be correct, in that the death was due to diarrhea and exhaustion. The report of the bacteriologists as to the case of Mary Connerty, a suspected cholera case, is to the effect that no spirillium of cholera has been discovered.

Safe from Frost.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Early corn is now reported as safe from injury by frosts in the principal corn producing states, and if late corn escapes injury during the next two weeks the crop will be safe.

Officers of the Street Railway Order.

POLITICAL ISSUES.

Annual Meeting of the National Republican League.

Resolutions Adopted—Meeting of the College League and of the Women's Association—Mr. Stevenson's Tour of the South.

THE BUFFALO CONVENTION.

BUFFALO, Sept. 17.—Gen. Clarkson called the national republican league to order at 11:30 a. m. Friday. The committee on time and place reported in favor of Louisville as the place and the second Wednesday in May as the time for holding the next annual convention.

Gen. Clarkson was reelected president by a unanimous rising vote.

Gen. Fairchild, of Wisconsin, presented the report of the committee on resolutions, as follows:

"The representatives of the republican clubs of the United States convention assembly, mindful of the splendid history of the republican party, a history luminous with heroic services rendered our beloved country, make the following declaration of principles:

"We most heartily indorse the wise, patriotic and statesmanlike administration of President Harrison.

"Believing that the principles announced by the representatives of the republican national convention fully express the sentiments of the republican league of the United States, we therefore most cordially indorse these principles to the end that the continued prosperity of our country may be assured.

"The republican party has been from its birth the advocate of all measures of advancement and progress. Its principles are and always have been such that they appeal to young men having the good of their country at heart. We cordially invite all young voters who believe in the prosperity and perpetuity of the union to unite their political fortunes with the republican party."

A. B. Humphreys, of New York, was reelected secretary by acclamation, and W. S. Lousberry was reelected treasurer. After their speeches of acceptance, Whitelaw Reid's appearance in the hall was the signal for great cheering.

Mr. Reid spoke briefly, extending his congratulations upon the "prospects of republican triumph which the work of the league and which the spirit and purpose of the republican party throughout the nation assure."

THE COLLEGE LEAGUE.

It was shortly after 2 o'clock p. m., when the American republican college league began its session in a small hall adjoining the main convention hall. The college delegates numbered about 150 and represented Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Union, Rutgers and the University of Michigan, besides many preparatory and high schools. The meeting was called to order by President James F. Burke.

In his address President Burke said that for the first time in the history of American politics on the eve of a presidential election the college and university republicans of the nation had sent their representatives to participate in the proceedings of a convention which has for its object the perpetuation of the principles of the republican party, the triumph of republican candidates and the continuation of the republican administration. They had entered the field with the keenest realization of the duties and responsibilities and with a firm resolve to discharge those duties as becomes the courage and the conscience of American youth. Mr. Burke's address was received with applause and the glee club sang several selections.

THE WOMEN'S LEAGUE.

The National Women's Republican association met at Concert hall Friday morning, Mrs. J. Ellen Foster presiding. The prominent ladies and gentlemen on the platform were Mrs. Mary Stuart Coffin, of Michigan; Mrs. Frances H. Howard, of Massachusetts; Gen. Thomas W. Chace and Mrs. Thomas W. Chace, of Rhode Island; Mrs. Romlyn Shaw, J. P. Dolliver, of Iowa; J. H. Still, of Rhode Island, and Mrs. Lucy A. Leggett, of Washington, D. C. Mrs. Foster made a long speech.

WILLING TO RUN.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 19. — Gen. Weaver and Gen. Field, the people's party candidates for president and vice president, have issued an address accepting the nominations in which they declare that they are heartily in accord with the platform of principles adopted by the Omaha convention, and if elected will endeavor to faithfully carry out the demands in letter and spirit. They also say:

"The people are in poverty. Their substance is being devoured by heartless monopolists, trusts, pools and money sharks. Labor is largely unemployed, and the old parties are incapable of dealing sincerely with the vast problem evolved by the growth of the last quarter of a century." They also say that they are "pained to discover in the public mind of the southern states through which we have passed a widespread loss of confidence on the part of the people in the integrity of the judges of elections in receiving the ballots of the people and counting them for the candidates of their choice. We are informed by a large number of intelligent and reputable people that in the recent state election in Alabama Capt. Kolb was chosen governor by over 40,000 majority, and yet his opponent was counted in by a majority of 10,000. County tickets throughout the state were counted out and others counted in. By the same unblushing methods we are informed that in the state election, which occurred in Arkansas September 5, at least 50,000 of the qualified voters of the state were deprived of the right of suffrage."

They close by saying: "The people's party affords the only solution of these important matters. All who desire the revival of business, all who wish for the return of prosperity to our country, all who desire to relieve the depressed industries and wage workers of our common country, all who desire an adequate increase of our currency and the free coinage of silver, all who desire the abolition of banks of issue and the constitutional control of the great instruments of commerce by the government of the United States, all who desire that the laws of taxation shall be equitably adjusted to the property of the country, all who desire that the public domain shall be sacredly held in trust for the people, all who desire that the highways between the states shall be rendered subservient to the popular good and, finally, all who desire the restoration of fraternity among the people and the obliteration of sectional animosities should at once regard it as their conscientious duty to align themselves under the banner of this great industrial and fraternal movement."

CONGRESSIONAL NOMINEES.

Candidates Who Will Strive to Secure Seats in the Lower House.

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., Sept. 17.—Frank J. Cannon was nominated yesterday by the republican territorial convention for delegate to congress.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 17.—Julius Wechselberg was nominated for congress yesterday by the republicans of the Fifth district.

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 17.—James N. Ashley, who represented the Toledo district in congress from 1859 to 1869, was yesterday nominated by the republicans for congress on the seventy-third ballot.

CEDARBURG, Wis., Sept. 17.—Congressman G. H. Brickner was renominated from the Fifth district by the democratic convention which met here yesterday.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 17.—The people's party yesterday made the following congressional nominations: First district, W. R. Mason; Second, Frank Baltzell; Third, J. F. Tate; Fourth, A. P. Longshore; Fifth, W. C. Whatley; Sixth, John M. Davis; Seventh, W. M. Wood; Eighth, Rev. R. T. Blackwell; Ninth, J. E. Parsons.

LUTHER BEECHER IS DEAD.

The Detroit Millionaire Was a Queer Character in His Day.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 19.—Eccentric Luther Beecher is dead. His more pronounced eccentricities have cost him directly more than a million of dollars. His stores and the big Biddle house in this city have been idle with few exceptions for fifteen years. He had an exaggerated idea of the renting value of his property, and then interfered so with tenants when they did pay his prices that they soon left him. He has paid a ground rent of $10,000 a year for twenty-five years on the Biddle house property with but little return. Then it cost $6,000 a year for care and repairs. He had paid $3,000 annually for many years rental of a royalty iron mine in the upper peninsula that he would not allow to be worked. Beecher made his money by buying real estate in an early day and by a lucky railroad deal. He sold the road for over a million and to the day of his death had $77,000 annual interest income. He leaves $2,000,000 and a son.

CANNOT SPEAK ENGLISH.

Large Percentage of Our Foreign Population Ignorant of the Language.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The census bureau has issued a bulletin on the color, sex and nativity of the population of the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Of the male populations of these states, taken as a whole, over 21 years of age, 19.59 per cent are aliens; 64.23 per cent. have been naturalized; 7.31 per cent. have taken out their first papers. As to the remaining 8.87 per cent. nothing has been learned. Of the aliens in Ohio 35.43 per cent. cannot speak the English language. In Indiana the percentage is 26.10; in Illinois, 30.24; in Michigan, 27.99; in Wisconsin, 42.23, and in Minnesota, 34.26.

MEMORIAL TO COLUMBUS.

Italian Societies Lay the Corner Stone of the Monument at New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The ceremony of laying the corner stone for the memorial of Christopher Columbus, which the Italian transport Garigliano brought here on September 4, was performed on the plaza at Fifty-ninth street and Eighth avenue. Mayor Grant officiated and the work was blessed by Archbishop Corrigan. Commissioner Wahle, of the committee of one hundred, was the orator of the day. The Italian military and civic societies of New York, Newark and other near-by cities paraded in honor of the event. It took forty trucks to cart the stones which are to make up the pedestal and statue of Columbus.

Double Tragedy in Maine.

BELFAST, Me., Sept. 17.—A double tragedy occurred in Belmont about 5 miles from this city Thursday afternoon. Samuel A. Moody, a cripple, living with his sister near Johnson's Corner, Belmont, shot and killed Fannie Belle Nichols, aged 32, and then shot himself. The girl has borne a good reputation and no motive is assigned for the tragedy. Moody was a man of violent temper and had a hard reputation.

Death of David McKinley.

CANTON, O., Sept. 19.—David McKinley, of San Francisco, died Sunday of paralysis at his residence there. He was the oldest brother of Gov. William McKinley. David McKinley served from 1881 to 1885 as United States consul at Honolulu. At the time of his death he was consul for the Hawaiian government at San Francisco. He was 63 years old.

Full Returns from Vermont.

RUTLAND, Vt., Sept. 16.—Returns of the recent election have now been received from the entire state. Fuller (rep.), for governor, has 39,190; Smalley (dem.), 19,526; Allen (pro.), 1,650. Fuller's plurality is 19,664, and majority, 18,014. Compared with 1888, this is a republican loss of 9,262, a democratic loss of 1, and a prohibition gain of 278.

Increase of Immigration During August.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The chief of the bureau of statistics reports that 47,472 immigrants arrived in the United States during the month of August, against 47,172 for the same month last year. During the eight months ending August 31, 1892, the total number of immigrants was 448,619, against 410,870 for the corresponding period in 1891.

Took His Own Life.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., Sept. 17.—State Senator Samuel P. Sparks, the author of the Sparks election law now governing elections in Missouri, committed suicide at his home here yesterday. Financial trouble was the cause.

Arkansas Election Returns.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 16.—Full returns from the recent state election give the following vote for governor: Fishback (dem.), 83,920; Whipple (rep.), 33,500; Carnahan (populist), 30,440; Nelson (pro.), 1,300.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

SOME LENAWEE COUNTY HISTORY.

Paper Read at the County Officers Reunion by A. L. Millard, Esq., of Adrian.

Fellow Citizens and Fellow Members of this Association of County Officers and Supervisors of the County, present and past.

I am happy to meet you here on this pleasant reunion occasion, and to address you as "fellow members," for I may be allowed to boast that at one time I was a county officer of this county of two successive governors of the State and by commission from them. I held the high office of Circuit Court Commissioner. This was many years since, under the old constitution, when these officers were appointed by the Governor and before the office became elective, as it is now. I take satisfaction and pride, as any one might, in numbering myself among such a body of men as the county officers of this county from the organization of the county to the present time. I have been among you for over fifty years, coming here as a resident in early manhood, in 1841, and having been engaged in the practice of my profession here ever since; and being thereby in constant and intimate relations with the county officers, I have had good opportunity of knowing them, their character and habits, and their ability, and I feel no hesitation in saying that no county can boast a better class of men—more intelligent, upright and honorable, and faithful in the discharge of their official duties, during all this period, than the County of Lenawee. During all this half century, so far as I can recollect, (and I believe my recollection is not at fault,) there has not been a single instance of defalcation or official misconduct on the part of any one of this long list and numerous body of office-holders; at least, none where such a charge was established. I doubt if many counties can make so good a showing as that, confident that none can make a better, and I cannot recall more than one instance in which there has been such a charge or suspicion against any one.

I have been requested to occupy a few moments on this occasion with historic reminiscences, and with pleasure I comply.

The general facts of our history as a county, and of our chief city, are well known. Its organization as a county in 1826, under an act of the Legislative Council of the Territory of Michigan—being then detached from Monroe county, of which it had previously formed a part. The county seat then being established at Tecumseh, and so continued until 1838, when after a severe contest between the towns it was moved to Adrian, (then the village of Adrian,) which had the advantage of being near the center of the county, while Tecumseh was far to the north-east of the center—the location and erection of a court house and jail soon thereafter, on a lot on the east side of Clinton street, the burning of the court house, evidently the work of an incendiary, and with it, the records of the county clerk's office in 1852, leaving the county without any court house for many years and until the erection of the present one in 1884, being thus without a court house for about thirty years, the courts being held in the meantime in different halls and temporary places, but being succeeded at last by the present commodious and goodly edifice, an ornament to the city and a credit to the county.

Adrian, though an inland town, in a new region which was in a large measure surrounded by its primeval forests even at that early day it had its rail road, and thereby communication with navigable waters of Lake Erie and the outside world, the E. & K. R. R., running from Adrian to Toledo, (then Port Lawrence,) and now being a part of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. This was a rare distinction, as at the time of its construction (under a charter granted by the legislative council of the territory in 1833,) it was the first and only rail road either in Michigan or Ohio, or any State or territory west of N. Y. It was a pioneer road, run by horse power from the time it commenced running in 1836 until June 1838, after which it was run by steam. The track run down through rail road street, and its depot then being near the site of the present court house and continuing there until 1839, when the M. S. R. R. Co., acquired the same by a perpetual lease, and connected it with its own road. The work on the E. & K. R. R. was projected and carried through by private enterprise, without aid from the government, by a few enterprising and far-seeing men at Port Lawrence and Adrian, among the latter being Darius Comstock, Addison J. Comstock, Geo. Crane, (the father of our respected Adrian fellow citizen, Calvin Crane,) Dr. Caleb N. Ormsby, E. C. Winter and Joseph Gibbon, and it proved a success and of great value to the new settlements in the county.

I will devote the few minutes of my time more particularly to some personal reminiscences and matters that have fallen under my own observation during the time I have been here. My associations have been of course more particularly with the courts, and the officers connected with the courts. It will be a pleasant reminiscence for me, and I trust not without interest to those who hear me, to whom many of the names will be familiar, just to recall the names of those who during this 50 years have held and discharged the duties of these offices.

When I came here in 1841, we had in addition to the circuit court, a county court. This was subsequently abolished. Alex. R. Tiffany was the judge of Probate at that time, and afterwards of the county court, and at one time Prosecutor a worthy man and valuable public officer. Joseph H. Cleveland was sheriff, Wm. R. Powers, county clerk, and Daniel Hicks, Jr., register of deeds. Since 1852, (not to go back more than 40 years) these offices have been filled by the following named individuals, most of the names being familiar to those of us who have lived here during that time:

County Clerk—John Miller, William Kingsley, A. L. Bliss, Leander Kimball, Geo. W. Westerman, Henry C. Conkling, Wm. L. Church, Thos. M. Hunter, David A. Bixby, Geo. W. Fleming and Ira Waterman.

Sheriff—Joseph R. Bennett, Geo. W. Ketcham, Flavius J. Hough, Sylvester B. Smith, Wm. R. Tayer, John C. Mason, Nathaniel B. Eldridge, James R. Carnes, Charles Bidwell, Ancel K. Whitmore and Edward C. Baldwin.

Judge of Probate—Consider A. Stacy, F. C. Beaman, R. R. Beecher, Norman Geddes and Richard R. Robbins.

Register of Deeds—Charles M. Croswell, Charles Chandler, Benjamin Turner, William A. Whitney, Morton Eddy, Myron E. Knight, Edwin Hough, Michael P. Long, Avery A. Dolbar, Stillman Bennett and Alfred W. Smith.

County Treasurer—Jas. Geddes, John I. Knapp, Wm. H. Kimball, Sylvester B. Smith, George R. Allis, George R. Cochran, Jay Hoag, Wm. C. Moran and Wm. H. Wiggins. Another well known and honored citizen who is still with us and with whose name and fame we are familiar, held this office for three terms in all, as well as other important offices in the early times of the county, reaching back a time commencing earlier even than 40 years, or 50 years of which we have spken; I refer to Daniel D. Sinclair, whose first term as county treasurer commenced in 1839.

Prosecuting Attorney—Smith S. Wilkinson, R. R. Beecher, A. C. Mercer, C. F. Mercer, C. R. Miller, Edmund B. Gale, Q. A. Watts, L. H. Salsbury, A. Dayton, D. B. Morgan and F. B. Wood. A considerable number of these having by re-election served two terms, in two or three instances three terms each.

The members of the bar in practice at the time I came here in 1841, so far as I now recall them were the following:

At Adrian, A. R. Tiffany, M. N. Halsey, Wm. L. Groenly, Lorenzo Tabor, Josiah Ward, E. B. Fairfield, A. M. Baker, A. C. Harris and A. G. Eastman. At Tecumseh, Peter R. Adams and C. A. Stacy. At Clinton, F. C. Beaman, who afterwards removed to Tecumseh and subsequently to Adrian. Not one of them is now living, all have passed away.

Not at that time, but a few years later, one who has since risen to a high degree of eminence in the profession and as a jurist and legal author, Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, entered the law office of A. C. Harris, at Adrian, as a student, and after the usual career of study was admitted to the bar and entered upon the practice of his profession there, in which he continued successfully for quite a number of years, being afterwards from about the year 1858 to 1869 the reporter of the Supreme Court, and then elected a Judge of that court, in which high position he remained and by his industry, ability and learning achieved a high distinction and national and universal reputation as a jurist, and as the author of several valuable treatises on the law. He was also, for several years a professor in the law school at the University of Michigan and was highly esteemed and distinguished as such. After his retirement from the bench of the supreme court, he was appointed by the President of the U. S. a member of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, which position he has recently resigned it is understood, on account of ill health. In all these positions he has been eminently successful and acquired an honorable and exalted reputation. He was preeminently a self-made man, without means or influential relations, with only a common school education to assist him, dependent entirely on his own efforts, and his eminent success is due mainly no doubt to his integrity and indomitable industry in the study of his profession. As an illustration of which I remember when he was a student at law, of hearing that he was in the habit not only of studying during the day, but taking his book with him when he retired at night, and studying in bed. We are gratified at the success and distinction which he has won, and take pride in pointing to him as a Lenawee county boy.

Did time permit it would be pleasant to speak of others of our own number, of the honorable and successful achievement and career of some of those whose names have been unmentioned, whom we hold in high esteem, but I must forbear.

Hoping that this may not be the last occasion of this kind on which we may meet and enjoy such a reunion as this, having already detained you too long I give way to others whom you will be glad to listen to.

Judge Noah W. Cheever.

The following biographical sketch is taken from a late issue of the Ann Arbor Register. Judge Cheever graduated from the Tecumseh High School and has many old acquaintances here who will be interested in this sketch.

Noah W. Cheever came to Ann Arbor in 1859, and with his two brothers, H. S. Cheever, and B. W. Cheever entered the then Literary Department of the University, and the three brothers graduated together with the Class of 1863. The two brothers graduated also in medicine and H. S. Cheever was appointed Professor of Materia Medica in the Medical Department of U., of M., and also Professor of Physiology in Long Island College Hospital, which positions he held until his death in 1876, and B. W. Cheever held the position of Professor of Metallurgy in U. of M., for many years until his death in 1885. The subject of this sketch, N. W. Cheever, graduated from the Law Department of U., of M., in 1865, studied two years in the law office of George Alpheus Felch, spent one year in the law office of Borden and Spofford in Chicago, and returned to Ann Arbor in 1867. In 1868 Judge Cheever entered the law office of Kingsley and Morgan, just east of the Court House, and he remained in this office, in the practice of his profession up to the present time. Judge Cheever held the office of City Attorney for one term and was elected Judge of Probate for Washtenaw County in 1873 and held the office until 1877, and during this time prepared and published Cheever's Probate Practice for Michigan. In 1884 he published a revised edition of this work, and has just issued a revised and very much enlarged edition of his Probate Practice comprising over 1,000 pages, which is published by the Register Publishing Co.

Judge Cheever is recognized as one of the leading lawyers of Michigan, and his thorough knowledge of probate matter makes his counsel valuable and it is often eagerly sought by many members of the bar. A large number of very important cases have been carried to the Supreme Court and successfully argued by him, during his many years of practice at the Washtenaw County bar.

Another Pioneer Gone.

Another of the pioneers of Lenawee County has passed away, Mr. John Sage, of Macon, died on Friday afternoon, August 26, 1892, at 2 o'clock, in the 88th year of his age.

Mr. Sage came to Michigan from Livingston county, New York, in the spring of 1831. He took up land on Section 9 in Macon, Lenawee county, where he soon after erected a log house. October 24th, 1833, he was married to Miss Hannah Marshall, of New York State, and brought her to his new home in Michigan. He was then 28 years old. Together they commenced the battle of life in a new country, sharing the hardships that are consequent in a new country. Their nearest neighbor was Dr. Howell, the father of Dr. George Howell, of Tecumseh, and Edwin Howell, of Macon, who now resides on his father's early home.

Mr. Sage was compelled to cut his way [illegible] and wagon on his new farm, all being a dense forest. By true courage, a strong will and a healthy and robust frame and constitution, he felled the primeval forest, broke the land and made for himself and family a beautiful home. Upon this farm he lived until his death. His wife was called away thirteen years previous and since that time to the hour of his death he was constantly attended by his youngest daughter, Mary E. Sage. Her true devotion to her father, her untiring care, her sleepless vigilance, her strong love for him during all these years merits and receives from all deep and abiding friendship and esteem.

Mr. Sage was the father of seven children, four of whom survive him. Two sons died in defending their country during the War of the Rebellion, one after four years of service on the battlefield in the 3rd Michigan Cavalry, and the other in the 11th Michigan Infantry. Two sons and two daughters survive him and were present with him to comfort his last years on earth and mourn his departure.

Mr. Sage was a true patriot, a true man. Honesty, integrity and truth marked all his acts and he died at a good old age, honored and beloved by all, amid peace and prosperity, surrounded by children and many friends.

His funeral was attended by a very large concourse of people on Sunday afternoon, at his late residence, on the same farm upon which he had resided since 1831. G.

DIED.—At Denver, Colorado, on Saturday morning, Sept. 17th, 1892, Lilian Knapp, beloved daughter of Geo. W. and Mary Knapp, in the 7th year of her age.

When on the 3d of August Mrs. Knapp left Tecumseh for a health trip to Denver, taking her two daughters, Lalia and Lilian with her, we little thought that both children were to be called to pass through a season of dangerous and protracted sickness and that the younger was never to return to her home. But, in the mystery of divine providence it has been so ordered. The Father was summoned August 21st to come on to Denver as both children were dangerously sick and on Sunday, Sept. 18, the sad message came from him that Lilian had passed away. The affliction which has fallen on this household is one in which many share. It was impossible for those acquainted with them not to love these dear children, who were so kind and affectionate in their treatment of each other and indeed of every one else with whom they came in contact. We were looking forward to seeing them once more, with pleasure. But the duty devolving on us now is to extend our heartfelt sympathy to parents and grandparents in view of the bereavement which has come upon them. Lilian has left nothing but pleasant memories behind her, and the one thought bringing comfort is that in passing from earth she has gone into the presence of the Savior who has taken her as one of His loved lambs to himself. The sympathies of the Sunday school of the Presbyterian church, Tecumseh, of whose primary class the children were members are extended to the still absent parents and all their friends, in the peculiarly trying circumstances under which this bereavement has taken place. W. H. B.

Resolutions of the Epworth League.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to send his death angel and take from us one of our members, Mabel Vandercook, and

WHEREAS, We feel that in her death we have lost one whose memory we shall always cherish, and whose life was an example of cheerful labor for others, and a willingness to do all she could to make the work of our League a success, in whatever department she labored, therefore

RESOLVED, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy and Christian love to the bereaved parents and sisters, praying that the grace which alone can sustain in such dark hours of grief may be given them in abundance, teaching them to look forward to a happy meeting with their loved Mabel.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our records, and also sent to the afflicted family of our angel friend.

OBITUARY.

Rev. Peter Sharp, died in San Jose, Cal. Sept., 13th. Since January last he has been upon his death bed having been stricken with paralysis at that time. He was buried with Masonic honors, Sept. 14th, from the Centella M. E. Church of San Jose.

Peter Sharp was born May 14th 1810, at Willsburg, Essex Co., N. J. He was the fourth son of Cornelius Sharp, who had eight sons and daughters, and moved with his family to Ohio, when his older children were quite small.

Peter was converted at the age of 18 and giving up the study of law, began at once to prepare himself for the ministry which he entered four years later. He continued in active service as an Itinerant in the M. E. Church until 1853 when the failing health of his wife made it necessary to locate. While the Ohio Conference, still included Southern Mich., he was stationed at Ann Arbor and was united in marriage to Miss Unice M. Doty, March 19th, 1837, in the presence of the Sabbath morning congregation of the Quarterly Conference and by the Presiding Elder Rev. Henry Colclayer.

His next station was Tecumseh, then a four weeks circuit, including Clinton, Franklin, Macon and Ridgeway.

From there he returned to Ohio and filled various appointments until 1849, when he was transfered to Michigan, Conference and stationed at Coldwater at Constantine, at Ridgeway and at Dundee, which was he last regular appointment.

Dec. 24th, 1853, he began business in general merchandise at Ridgeway Mich. He received the appointment of Postmaster soon after and continued to hold the office for nearly 35 years.

He was a member of the Michigan Legislature 1859-1860, and continued to preach the Gospel as a local elder in the M. E. Church. March 14th 1888, his beloved wife was called home after years of invalidism and six months' helplessness. His untiring patience in caring for her, but proved his devotion. A few months after he yielded to the necessity and closed out his business at Ridgeway and moved to Tecumseh to live with his daughter. Aug. 1889, he went to Cal., where his oldest son lived on a mountain ranch. Here he found work for his Master in conducting a Sunday school at the nearest school house. In the spring of 1891, he moved with his son's family to San Jose. It was his intention to return to Michigan in the spring of 1892, but the Lord ordered other-wise.

Peter Sharp was a man of true nobility, held in esteem and veneration by all who had the capacity to appreciate the excellence of his character and his ability as a theologian.

Truly beloved by his family and intimate friends; devoted and untiring in the discharge of religious duty, seeming always to possess his soul in peace.

He loved manly men and manly boys and ever held it to be his religous duty to rebuke either old or young who overstepped the bounds of propriety in his presence. A student all his life, no time was thrown away over light and unprofitable reading. He was a man of positive convictions. He knew for himself that his soul was alive unto God, born of water and of blood and truly an inhabitant of the spiritual kingdom of Divine grace.

"Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord." D. W. L.

TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., SEPT. 22, 1892.

Local and Miscellaneous

Miss May DeWolf is spending a few days at Sand Lake.

Editor Field returned Tuesday from a short trip to Chicago.

Avery & Co. swing out a new fall card this week. Read it.

A fire in the sitting room stove is very comfortable these evenings.

J. A. Boyd is the delegate from Tecumseh to the next Democratic State Convention.

The Republicans have nominated Nah H. Raymond for Representative in the second district.

We call attention to President Horton's letter on the Lenawee County Fair which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

A. B. Park, the leading Dry Goods merchant, of Adrian, has a new card in this week's issue to which we invite attention.

One thousand people from Hillsdale and Lenawee counties are in attendance at the G. A. R. encampment at Washington, D. C.

Months containing the letter r are popularly supposed to abound with the festive oyster. September is "in it," and the bivalve has appeared.

David Laverty has sued the village of Tecumseh for $2000, because a pole fell down, crashed between his horses and wagon, and nearly scared him to death.

The elegantly illustrated supplement to the Toledo Sunday Journal recently issued, contains a handsome half-tone cut of the new lake steamer owned by Bills & Koch.

The Michigan Messenger has organized a quartette for the campaign. The office imp is said to be a regular bird for warbling, and all the rest sing like the "devil."—Hudson Gazette.

John L. (16581) owned at Bidwell Stock Farm, this place, won the 2.27 class trot at South Bend, Ind., last Thursday in straight heats, getting first money, and a mark of 2.26 3-4 over half mile track.

The annual harvest festival was held at the Baptist church last Sunday evening. The pulpit and choir platforms were tastefully decorated with fruits, vegetables and grain, and a very interesting program was presented to an audience that filled the church to overflowing.

One beauty about a political campaign is the "era of good feeling", invariably inaugurated at such times. The man who has passed you by as a total stranger for four years past now seizes you warmly by the hand and inquires with great solicitude after the health and welfare of your remotest lineal and collateral relatives. Cultivate the genial candidate while you can, for he may refuse to know you without an introduction when the chilly days of November come again.

Have you visited the book auction?

Mrs. Wm. H. Mather is visiting friends in Coldwater this week.

Mrs. John O'Neil, of Dundee, is visiting Tecumseh friends this week.

Dr. B. Mincer the celebrated optician is expected in Tecumseh next week.

Miss May Kingan left this morning for Montague, Mich., to teach school.

Marshall Doolittle has returned to Hillsdale to resume his studies in the college.

The Republican State convention will be held next Tuesday, Sept., 27th, at Grand Rapids.

Mrs. C. A. Stacy left home Tuesday morning for Elgin, Ill., to make her son George a visit.

Be sure and read the supplement fly in this week's issue that tells you about the book auction.

The Hillsdale Fair is becoming more and more popular each year. It comes off this year the first week in October, 3d to 7th.

It is singular how job printing sometimes runs in streaks. The HERALD job rooms turned out three wedding invitations last week.

C. A. Satterthwaite and wife, of Portage, Ohio, came up last week to attend the funeral of Mrs. Stanley Doty. They returned on Monday.

Married, at Ridgeway, Mich., on Sept. 15th, 1892, by Rev. J. I. Gulick, Prof. Lewis N. Drake, Principal of Ridgeway schools, to Miss May Riley, of Palmyra.

Seats for 125,000 people are to be provided in the great Manufactures building at the World's Fair for the dedication exercises on October 21.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Slayton were among the excursionists to Washington. They intend to visit N. Y. City and other points before they return.

Abner Wilson's trip to Columbus and Springfield, Ohio, last week was very successful. He placed contracts for a large portion of his this season's celery crop.

The following gentlemen were delegates from Tecumseh to the County convention last Tuesday: J. F. N. Bowen, B. J. Garlinghouse, Alf. James, J. A. Boyd, M. L. Root, Will Ingersoll.

The Tecumseh High School has a larger enrollment this fall than ever before in its history. It has an enrollment now, the third week of the term, of 112 pupils, of which 52 are non-residents.

The main railway station, within the World's Fair grounds, where all excursion trains will discharge their passengers, will be a handsome structure costing $225,000, and will accommodate 25,000 persons at one time.

During a short stop at Britton, Tuesday evening, we took a peep into the new Maccabee Hall. They have a fine tent there with a nicely furnished hall and are in a thriving condition. We failed to get an introduction to the goat.

At the Democratic convention Tuesday, Will Ingersoll presented the name of Justice Burridge for Judge of Probate. He made a very neat speech, which made a good impression upon the convention and reflected much credit upon himself.

The I. O. O. F. Mutual Aid and Accident Association of Piqua, Ohio, is one of the best and most reliable of the mutual companies. Geo. W. Mead recently received a check for a week's indemnity. He is writing quite a number of policies for the company in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Heck and Walter Heck and his bride, gave a reception to their friends at the residence of the former, on Monday evening. A large company gathered to pay their respects to the newly married couple and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all in attendance.

Cards have been received at this office announcing the marriage of Geo. H. Sherwood to Miss Lola Monaghan, Sept. 17th, at Charlotte. The bride will be favorably remembered by many Tecumseh friends and congratulations are now in order. They will be at home in Charlotte after the 23d.

Mr. D. W. McDevitt's book sale is drawing crowds of buyers every afternoon and evening. He is selling goods remarkably cheap. This is a chance that occurs but once in a life time, and people who buy books at bankrupt prices should avail themselves of it as Mr. McDevitt will remain but a few days longer.

The young Democrats of Tecumseh, met at Burridge's office last evening and organized a campaign club. About 25 names were enrolled and a good fund pledged on the spot. The following officers were chosen. President; W. C. Burridge; Vice-President, Jas. A. Boyd; Secretary and Treasurer, Geo. S. Field; Executive Committee, Ben Garlinghouse, M. L. Root, Will Hayden.

The sparring match last evening at the Opera House drew a good crowd, and made plenty of sport for the spectators. There were six pairs, as follows: Thad Brooks and Leon Gray, Marvin Gray and Walter Lowry, Bert Pritchard and Elmer Lockwood, Hub Davenport and Jack Hoy; Fred Boss and Al. Brooks, Prof. Cook and Chas. E. Gray. After the completion of the regular program Frank Bice and another gentleman gave a fine exhibition. The band furnished music and the spectators were all well satisfied with the entertainment.

The painters are now at work on Thos. Elliott's new house.

Mrs. Wolston Comfort, of Jackson, is visiting friends in Tecumseh and Adrian.

The carpenters are now putting up the frame of Dolph Heesen's new dwelling house.

The Democratic Representative convention for this district is in session at Armory Hall. The nomination had not been made as we go to press.

There will be a special meeting of the Order of the Eastern Star next Thursday evening, Sept. 28th, for the installation of officers. All members are requested to be present.

The agent for Magic Yeast has been in town and has finished the inspection of all stock in the hands of our retail dealers. Every dealer now has fresh Magic Yeast in stock. Purchasers of this yeast will get a nice Book free.

In the October number of The Forum the question of Reciprocity and the Tariff will be discussed on the one side by Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, and William L. Wilson, Member of Congress from West Virginia, on the other side.

The regular afternoon Eastern train on the Mackinaw last Saturday, with a large representation from Beers' Post on board. They arrived in Washington Sunday afternoon, with no accident to mar the pleasure of the lovely trip. They were the first Mich. Post to report at headquarters.

Frank Snedicor has engaged D. M. Cosier, late of the Burdick House barber shop of Kalamazoo, who will take W. V. Wolvin's place, he having to return to Ann Arbor college. Mr. Cosier comes highly recommended as a first class workman, is a married man and will move his family here.

At the People's party convention at Petersburg, Sept. 12, E. B. Cantlebury, of Lenawee county, was nominated for senator from the Fifth district. Nelson Davis, of Ida, and B. Penfield, of Dundee, were nominated for representatives from the First and Second districts. A full county ticket was also nominated.

The nomination of Chas. Burridge, Esq., for the important office of Judge of Probate, by the Democratic County convention, was a very wise and strong one. He is eminently fitted for that office by long experience in that line of practice and would fill the position most acceptably if elected. Now let us go in and elect him.

Being asked what woman is for, that courteous old darling, Charles A. Dana, replied: "She is for soul, for thought, for love, for bewitchment, for romance, for beauty and for man. She is for this world and for other worlds. She is for all time and after time. She is for everything that is worth anything. She is for life. She is for faith. She is for earth and heaven."

The features of timeliness and authority, on which the North American Review is said to pride itself, are again exemplified by the fact that its next number (October) will include articles on "The Buffalo Strike," by the Superintendent of the New York Central & Hudson River Railway, and on "Safeguards Against the Cholera," by Surgeon-General Walter Wyman, President Wilson of the New York Board of Health, Dr. Cyrus Edson, and Secretary Abbott of the Boston Board of Health.

M. P. Brown has bought out Mr. Eldridge and will open up a first-class photographic Studio in the Kinzie Block in Adrian, October 1. This is the well-known place of business where Mr. Brown began with I. M. Hoag, 19 years ago, and afterwards known as the Myerhaber Gallery. The studio has always had an excellent reputation for turning out the best of photographic reproductions, and with Mr. Brown's successful experience and taste in that line, we bespeak for him an extensive patronage.

Heck-McDonald.

At the residence of Joseph McDonald on the Mishawaka road, last evening, Walter L. Heck, of Tecumseh, Mich., and Miss Jennie McDonald were happily united in marriage. Rev. A. B. Chaffee of the Baptist church, performed the ceremony in his impressive manner.

At 8 o'clock the doors of the parlor were swung open and the young couple marched under a canopy of flowers, and in the presence of sixty friends the ceremony was performed. The bride was dressed in steel colored surah silk, with chiffon trimmings, and carried in her hand a beautiful bouquet of roses. A magnificent wedding feast was spread, to which the guests seated themselves after congratulations had been offered.

The guests from out of the city were Wm. Heck and wife, parents of the groom, of Tecumseh; John S. Smith and wife, J. H. Smith, wife and daughter, C. A. Smith and Mrs. L. A. Rinehart, of Elkhart. Among the presents were included almost every article of household use and ornament. The couple will leave today for Adrian, Mich., where they will make a short visit, after which they will be at home to their friends at Tecumseh, Mich.

The notice above is taken from the South Bend Post of Sept. 15th. The groom is well known in Tecumseh and will receive the hearty congratulations of his many friends; who will be glad to know that the happy couple intend to make this village their permanent residence.

—It is poor economy to put off attending a Normal or Collage because of hard times. It would be equally wise to put off planting corn because of the expense of the seed. In gaining an education time lost now is lost forever. The expense of attending some of our excellent higher institutions, such as the Fayette Normal University, of Fayette, O., is now so low that any one may find a way to meet it. Do not wait until another year. Attend now. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC
BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements, and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

PROTECTION A FRAUD.

Some Facts Worth Considering.

How Systematically and Thoroughly Farmers Are Swindled Is Shown by the Official Figures.

The G. O. P. campaign book for 1890 says, on page 14: "The reason of the McKinley bill is it enables American manufacturers to do a profitable business." On page 15 it is claimed that the McKinley bill preserves in operation a system which first creates the finest market in the world and then controls it for our own principal enjoyment. The declaration of intention and purpose of the project and supporters of the McKinley tariff bill are certainly very plain, and would indicate to a mind of sufficient capacity to [illegible] with the responsibility of office and citizenship that the high tariff advocates were not satisfied with the blessings already bestowed upon manufacturing enterprises, but were determined to create and control even better markets for them, the finest in the world; and enable them to do a profitable business. Of course, all should recognize the propriety of republican members of congress in doing everything in their power for the manufacturers, who suffered the fat to be fried out of them for republican campaign expenses. But somehow or other the average farmer who has faithfully voted the republican ticket, has not believed and understood fully their purpose. Consider well the object and effect of the McKinley bill—"to make manufacturing profitable;" "to create and control for them the finest market in the world." Two conclusions are forced upon the unprejudiced mind, first, that republicans, high in office, consider it a legitimate use of the power of the government to make prosperous certain favored industries, though it be at the expense of others. That it is fair to tax the people, even to poverty, to create fine markets for corporation favorites, and the breeding of millionaires. Second, that they do not think the manufacturers were, previous to the passage of the McKinley bill, doing a sufficiently profitable business, and that their markets were not as good as they should be. Now let us find out what the condition of prosperity was in the manufacturing pursuits previous to the passage of the bill. We shall then know something about the republican idea of prosperity. We have already found out whom they have decreed shall prosper. The American almanac on page 80 gives census statistics of manufacturers of the United States for the year 1880, as follows:

Number of establishments	253,840
Number of hands employed	2,738,939
Wages paid	$947,919,674
Capital invested	2,790,273,505
Cost of raw material	3,394,349,029
Value of products	5,369,661,706

We find then that labor employed in the manufacturing establishments received 17 per cent. of the value of the products.

The value of the raw material was 63 per cent. of the value of the products. Deduct the cost of raw material and the wages paid labor, which together amounts to $4,342,250,713, from the value of the products and you have net profits amounting to $1,027,407,993, which is equal to 38 per cent. of the capital invested. Of course the full 38 per cent. can not available for dividends, for incidental expenses would still have to be deducted, including contributions to election expenses of high tariff candidates, and expenses for keeping a strong lobby at Washington in support of the McKinley bill; also for political editorials in the same line. But the records are useful to help us ascertain what the actual dividends were of some the New England manufactories. See report of Michigan labor commissioner for 1885, page 408. Dividends declared for twelve years ending with 1882:

	Per Cent. Aggregate Dividends.	Average Per Cent.
Lancaster mills	261	21.7
Lowell machine shops	122	12.3
Chicopee Falls	228	19
York mills	216	13
Pacific mills	168	14.5
Hamilton woolen mills	169	14.2
Middlesex mills	154	12.8
Lowell Machine	144	12
Great Falls	142	11.8
Pepperell	134	11.2
Total for 10 factories for 12 years	1565	15.6

The American Almanac for 1889, page 24, gives dividends of some New England factories, some of which we give below, for the year 1887:

	Per Cent.		Per Cent.
Amoskeag mills	10	Otis mills	10
Columbian mills	15	Pepperell mills	52
Granite mills	17	Union mills	21
Manchester mills	10	Washington mills	13
Middlesex mills	11	Saginaw	11

Total for the 10 mills in 1887, 170 per cent.; average, 17 per cent.

Now let us examine some agricultural statistics. Census of 1880, American Almanac, pages 274 and 373:

Value of farms	$10,197,096,776
Value of live stock	1,500,491,699
Value of farm implements, etc	406,520,055
Total capital employed	$12,104,081,440
Number of farmers and hired men	7,670,493
Value of products sold, consumed or on hand	2,213,402,561
Gross receipts deducting nothing for wages, board or seed amounts to only 18 per cent. on capital.
In 1870 number employed	5,922,471
Value of farms, stock and implements	11,124,958,747
Value of total products	2,167,553,658
Value of total product to capital in 1870 was 22 per cent

Notwithstanding the employment of 1,748,022 more hands and $979,122,603 more capital the value of the total product was actually less in 1880 than in 1870 by $254,136,094, and the value of gross production shrunk from 22 per cent. on capital employed in 1870 to 18 per cent. in 1880.

FARMS.	FACTORIES.
Value of total product per capita, counting only farmers and hired men, in 1870, $309; in 1880, $283	1880—Value of product per capita for employé $2,035.
Value of total product to capital invested in 1870, 22 per cent.; in 1880, 18 per cent.	Value of products to capital invested was 192 per cent., deduction for labor and material and net was 38 per cent.

In view of these facts (and they are facts) how can farmers conceive it to be their duty to support the republican party and the McKinleyites who bent every effort and energy of a congress that cost the people a billion dollars to the avowed purpose of making manufacturing more prosperous, that was already having net profits of 38 per cent. on their capital while farmers were producing in gross only 18 per cent. on their capital employed? The farmer who looks these facts and the history of the republican party leaders square in the face and deliberately decides to support the republican party this fall with McKinleyism and high protection to American manufactories as the issue, simply allies himself with tariff pirates and political robbers, who are banded together for the purpose of enriching themselves at the expense of the toiling masses. Under McKinleyism, assisted by the handmaidens of protection—the trust and combine—the manufacturer's profits are growing and growing, while the property and products of the agricultural classes are constantly shrinking in value, and the wages of the laboring men are being forced to increase the profits of tariff barons.

A FARMER'S VIEW.

BY HIMSELF.

I am a farmer, and have been voting for high tariff and the republican party because I believed in protection. I have a small flock of sheep and have received the highest price in the market for my wool, averaging $1.25 a fleece. I raise as many lambs as sheep, and receive for them an average of $3.25 a head. Thus I am more interested in the price of lambs and mutton than in the price of wool. I understand the purpose of the high tariff on wool to be to place the price of imported wool so high that the American people will be induced to raise enough to supply home consumption. If that result be accomplished, the number of sheep will be doubled and the mutton supply will be so great that I will lose more on my lambs and mutton than I will receive for my wool.

I might then better give my wool away and sell my lambs for $3.25, than sell my wool for 25 cents a pound and take $1.50 for my lambs, as I would surely have to do if the number of sheep were greatly increased. I am not certain that wool brings one cent more on account of the tariff, because the wool which is imported at a tariff of 11 cents on each pound for unwashed wool, 22 cents for washed and 33 cents for scoured wool so increases its cost to the manufacturer that he must buy the home grown at a price to compensate him partially for the increased cost of that which he imports. While I am in doubt about getting any more for my wool by reason of the tariff, I am morally certain that all kinds of goods manufactured from wool, in whole or in part, even to the thinnest shoddy, cost me more than they would if we had but a moderate tariff on manufactures and had wool on the free list.

I have been looking up the price paid for wool in this country and the price paid in other countries, and I find there isn't any difference even with our high tariff. We farmers don't receive and never have received more than farmers in other countries for wool. But the high tariff makes our clothes cost a great deal more than farmers in other countries have to pay for theirs.

I have been told many times by the tariff reformers that the protectionists had pulled the wool over my eyes. But the McKinley rates and this year's prices for wool have pulled the wool off my eyes and I will now go with the reform party and rely upon the natural laws of trade to make my business pay.

ELLIS' EXAMPLE.

The Best Attorney General the State Has Ever Had.

The Michigan senate appointed a committee to ascertain and report the amount of money paid to outside attorneys during the year 1890 for assistance to the attorney general. The report may be found in the senate journal of February 19, 1891, pages 258-262. The report shows that the total sum paid to outside attorneys for assistance rendered the attorney general in work that belongs to that department to be $12,046.80, and for expenses $1,434.04, making a total of $13,480.84. This does not embrace the entire expense for 1890; but it is as near as the committee could get to the amount without incurring expense to the state in traveling fees. The committee, when making their report, filed schedules showing the day and month when the amounts were audited. These schedules show that $100 a day for a whole week and $500 for a brief were allowed in the single case of Wellman vs. Grand Trunk railway. This same case was appealed to the United States supreme court, and was argued there and won by Attorney General Ellis at an expense to the taxpayers of $70, or $1,000 less than it cost to try the same case in Lansing under a republican attorney general.

The present attorney general has answered more questions in the nineteen months he has served than have been answered in any period of three years preceding his term. He has had more important suits involving intricate and constitutional questions than any of his predecessors. Yet he has taken care of the work of his department without hiring any extra help and with an actual saving to the taxpayers of fully $15,000 a year. In addition he has rendered valuable assistance to a number of counties by the trial of several important cases for the state in the county courts. The report of the auditor general shows a saving of only $11,000, but as a matter of fact the saving is much larger, because a number of bills contracted for under the former administration were allowed during the current year. The present attorney general has been an industrious, capable and economical officer, and the people may thank themselves and the democratic party for placing a man in charge of that important office who is faithful in the full discharge of his duty.

WHAT IF?

What if the currents of your life
Are rolled and vexed, and go amiss,
And trouble your whole portion is?
Faint not—all victory comes through strife.

What if dark clouds make up your sky,
And every wind's and tide's attack
Is pushing hard to beat you back?
Court not despair—still harder try.

What if your friends keep out of view,
And, while you sorrow, seem like those
Who wear the livery of your foes?
Fret not, but battle on anew.

What if a thousand shafts of wrong,
And grievous obstacles, and hate,
Pursue you early, long and late?
Yield not, but keep your courage strong.

What if the world seems simply made
To sweep your dearest hopes away,
And balk your efforts day by day?
Cease not—move onward undismayed.

What if your best work brings but pain,
Perplexity and loss and doubt?
Hasten, toil patiently, faint not;
No worthy life is lived in vain.

A DOCTOR'S ADVENTURE.

Why He Lost His Contempt for Superstitious People.

"I presume that a man of your skeptical mind and iron nerve has a great contempt for people who believe in ghosts or in other supernatural terrors?"

"I had such a contempt once, but I was completely cured of it years ago."

"You surprise me. May I ask whether you healed yourself or employed the services of some other physician?"

Dr. Weymouth caught the humor in the remark of the young medical student who was questioning him, and laughed.

"I was cured by something worse than a physician," he replied.

"What was it?"

"A human skull."

"Your story must be a strange one."

"It is, but I will not tell it to you unless you will solemnly promise not to repeat it."

"Why so much secrecy?"

"It is not necessary to satisfy your curiosity now. My reason will be plain to you when my narrative is ended."

"Very well; I promise."

"To give you a thorough understanding of my singular experience, it is necessary for me to recall a series of events which preceded the supernatural horror which I shall describe.

"When I began to practice medicine in a small inland city I became acquainted with a beautiful girl, who so charmed me that I sought her society frequently. I have since learned that she then regarded me with favor, and no doubt I would have conducted a regular courtship which would have ended in a happy marriage had it not been that entirely unexpected circumstances suddenly separated us. My father was stricken with a fatal illness and my presence was required at his home in Massachusetts until his death, which took place after I had been with him six months. When I returned to the west and resumed my medical practice I learned to my great chagrin that Miss Wilkins, the girl to whom I had been so attentive, was engaged to be married to a young lawyer named Godwin. He had been as rapid in his love affair as I had been slow in mine, and I then learned the bitter lesson which many other young men who have been dilatory in courtship have also learned, that if a prompt and zealous rival appears, and he is pretty sure to do so if the girl is highly attractive, he will win the prize during an absence of even a few months on the part of the dilatory suitor.

"Of course there was nothing for me to do except to accept the inevitable. I bore my disappointment as best I could and gave assiduous attention to the duties of my profession. Meanwhile I learned that I was not the only disappointed suitor. Mr. Callahan, a handsome photographer, had tried to win the hand of Miss Wilkins during my absence in Massachusetts, but he soon found that Godwin was preferred to himself. Callahan was a moody and disagreeable fellow in spite of his good looks, and I was decidedly glad that he had been unsuccessful. Knowing what his disposition was, I was surprised to observe that after Miss Wilkins had become Mrs. Godwin he cultivated the husband's acquaintance, and within a few months became his intimate friend. I often saw them together, and used to wonder whether Callahan was sincere in his friendship. Several years passed away and brought about interesting changes. Godwin, who was a pleasant fellow, but was not a man to heed the claims of morality when they strongly conflicted with his inclinations, fell an easy victim to the wiles of a fair adventuress. He kept his infatuation well concealed from his wife, however, and she was entirely unsuspicious until she finally discovered his unfaithfulness in a most singular manner. One night, while Mr. Godwin was absent on a long journey, his house was entered by a burglar who went to the library and broke open a desk in which Mr. Godwin kept private papers and letters, and which was never left by the owner unlocked. In the morning Mrs. Godwin found the contents of the desk scattered on the floor, and among them a package of love letters from the adventuress. The cat was now out of the bag, and the wronged wife instituted proceedings for a divorce, which was granted. Soon after she had accomplished her object, the community was startled by the news that Callahan had been arrested on the charge of having committed the burglary. At the trial, during which the court room was crowded, on account of the high social standing of the prisoner, his guilt was skillfully proved by a chain of circumstantial evidence. It was shown that the photographer after breaking into the house had committed but one offense. He had opened the desk and scattered the papers that he had found in it, but he had stolen nothing. The mystery was great until the prisoner confessed that he had entered the house for the sole purpose of furnishing Mrs. Godwin with evidence that her husband was adverse to her. His intimacy with Godwin had enabled him to discover where his friend kept the disreputable love letters, and then he thought out his mean plot by which he effected the scattering of the letters, so that Mrs. Godwin, for Mr. Godwin he knew was away, would be certain to discover them the next morning. Of course the natural supposition would be that the house had been entered by a common burglar, and that before he had had time to steal anything he had been frightened away by some noise. But in spite of his precautions, the photographer failed to conceal his guilt, and only a part of what he desired happened. The divorce was brought about, but Callahan's hope that he might subsequently marry Mrs. Godwin, and derive benefit from the large fortune which she held in her own right, was blasted. He had cultivated her husband's acquaintance for years, for the purpose of finding an opportunity for the gratification of his evil desires. The opportunity had at last come, but in his attempt to use it, he had been thoroughly thwarted.

"Although he had stolen nothing, the act of breaking into the house constituted burglary and he was sent to prison for a few years. It is here interesting to note that the maneuvers which brought ill-luck to Callahan brought good luck to me. Soon after he went to prison I married Mrs. Godwin and have since lived happily with her. During his imprisonment the photographer brooded over his troubles, and when he was released he was in a murderous mood. One evening, while my wife and I were walking in a thinly settled district of the city, we were startled by two pistol shots fired in rapid succession by some one behind us. I turned around and running a few feet back grappled with our assailant. I threw him upon the ground, and succeeded in holding him there until two men who happened to be in the vicinity hurried to my assistance. The villain was Callahan, who had secretly followed me and my wife until there was a favorable opportunity for him to attempt murder. He cursed me in a frightful manner when he found that he was a prisoner. A second time he was punished by being incarcerated. Three years later, knowing that he had a disease that would soon end his life, he bequeathed his remains for anatomatical purposes to the physician of the prison, to whom he had taken a great liking. I was well acquainted with this doctor, and as a token of his esteem he presented me with Callahan's skull, he being well aware that I was at that time engaged in making a choice collection of skulls of all sizes.

"The skull was placed in my collection, which was kept in a closet connected with my office, and I thought no more about it until one day I was seized with the desire to see how the skulls would look when arranged so that they could all be seen at once. Accordingly I placed them in three rows on a broad table in my office, Callahan's being in the center of the front row, being accorded, as it were, the place of honor. I had just seated myself in a chair for the purpose of gazing at the array in an admiring manner, when a messenger arrived and asked me to visit a patient whose symptoms had suddenly become alarming.

"It was late at night when I returned to my office. I lighted a gas jet, but turned on so little gas that the flame was small. I seated myself in the chair which I had left when disturbed by the visitor, and gazed at the skulls which were about ten feet distant. They looked uncanny, unearthly, perhaps, is a better word, in the dim light. I had always prided myself on not being superstitious, and had frequently laughed at friends who stood in awe of the supernatural. But somehow as I gazed at that ghastly array of grinning skulls, listened to the solemn tick of a great clock that rested on top of a desk, felt that I was alone and that all of the people in the city except a few watchmen were sleeping, I felt a chill run down my back and my heart began to thump as the thought came to me that those skulls might move against me. Might not Callahan, who had tried to kill me, who had hated me intensely during his second term of imprisonment, be able to introduce his troubled spirit into his skull, marshal the spirits belonging to the other skulls, each spirit in its appropriate receptacle, and as a horrid death's army, so to speak, swoop upon me and quickly batter out my brains. It was a fantastic, an utterly absurd idea, but it was nevertheless the kind of idea that disturbs a person when the nerves are shaky.

"I soon recovered myself, however, and smiled with contempt for my momentary weakness. But the next instant a frightful fascination compelled me to stare at the skull of Callahan. There was a slight noise in it and it actually moved a little. The lidless eyes appeared to glare and the jaws about the gaping mouth to move up and down. I sprang to my feet and, grasping the back of the chair with both hands, raised it in readiness for an attack. The skull moved again, more decidedly than before, and I trembled all over. There was a loud rattle, a big movement of the skull, it crashed to the floor and bounded to my feet. I jumped so high that my head grazed the ceiling, and as I came down the skull shook violently, turned over, and out sprang a big rat that scampered across the floor and disappeared.

"I felt sheepish enough. I had been frightened like a child by something that was as far removed from the supernatural as anything that could well be imagined. I never dared speak of the occurrence to my friends lest the story should reach the ears of the doctors at the city hospital, and cause them to overwhelm me with ridicule. Remember your promise, for if you should reveal what I have told you my reputation as a doctor who has an iron nerve would be lost forever."—J. A. Bolles, in Boston Budget.

A FATAL BLUNDER.

Terrible Result of a Train Dispatcher's Mistake.

Two Trains on the Northwestern Railroad Collide—Four Men Lose Their Lives and Several Others Are Badly Hurt.

KILLED IN A WRECK.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., Sept. 16.—In a head-end collision on the Northwestern road 3 miles west of here at noon Thursday four men were instantly killed. One of the trains was a freight, the other an accommodation. Those killed were: Engineer Thomas Howes, Clinton; Engineer Jack Ashton, Clinton; Fireman Linebaugh and W. E. Carlen, Powell, Mich.

Both engines were reduced to shapeless fragments. Nearly a score of freight cars were wrecked and a large amount of grain, merchandise and stock was destroyed. The four men were killed outright, another terribly injured and several severely shaken up. A wrecker named John Dosark had his leg broken during the afternoon while helping to clear the wreckage.

Train Dispatcher Titus, of Belle Plaine, is responsible for the disaster. Freight No. 21 had orders to meet accommodation No. 14 at Lamoille. The latter was given clearance to Marshalltown and the order for 21 to proceed west was recalled, but not until it had pulled out of the city. The two trains, while running at the rate of 40 miles an hour, met on a sharp curve, a big hill obscuring one from the other until they were too close together to even admit of the engines being reversed. The crash was terrible and the result appalling.

The crews of both trains jumped, but Engineers Tom Howes and Jack Ashton, both of Clinton, Fireman Linebaugh and a stockman, W. E. Carlen, of Powell, Mich., were buried under a mountain of wreckage and instantly killed. Fireman Conrad Tusing miraculously escaped death, being hurled 30 feet through a barbed-wire fence and terribly lacerated and bruised. He will probably recover.

But two bodies, those of Engineer Howes and Fireman Linebaugh, had been recovered at a late hour. Two wrecking trains are at work. The loss will amount to $60,000.

Train Dispatcher Titus disappeared immediately after the accident was reported. His wife was on No. 14, but escaped injury.

MUCH LOSS OF LIFE.

Great Damage by Floods and Typhoons in China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—The steamship China brings news that a severe typhoon passed over the island of Formosa recently, causing great destruction of property. In one village 200 houses were destroyed and many lives were lost. Northern China has been visited by further serious floods, resulting in considerable loss of life and property. In some instances the people did not have time to leave their homes and in consequence were swept away with the wreckage. In three days the river Gantse rose from 50 to 93 feet.

FIVE WERE INJURED.

Husband, Wife, Mother and Two Children Thrown Over an Embankment.

MASON CITY, Ia., Sept. 16.—A terrible accident occurred 3 miles north of this city just after noon. B. A. Fellows, with his wife, mother and two children, was driving over a bridge spanning Lime creek. The embankment had settled, leaving the bridge elevated about 8 inches. When the wagon struck this the evener broke, the wagon turned and went over a 20-foot embankment. All are seriously injured, the mother and one child fatally.

FOUGHT TO THE DEATH.

Two Farmers Settle a Quarrel of Long Standing by Shooting Each Other.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19.—Two farmers named Peter Richardson and Hiram Featherstone, who had had a long standing grudge against each other, met in the little town of Bonne Terre, Mo., and after some angry words, pulled pistols and began firing at each other. Richardson was shot in the head and died in his tracks, and Featherstone received a mortal wound.

Democrats Object to Fusion.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 16.—The long-threatened revolt of democrats dissatisfied with the action of the state convention in indorsing the people's party state ticket took definite shape Thursday. At a meeting of prominent anti-fusion leaders a call was issued for a conference of democrats who do not intend to support the state ticket of the people's party to meet in this city October 7.

The Keeley League.

DWIGHT, Ill., Sept. 16.—The Keeley league is the new name adopted by the Bichloride of Gold clubs. The third annual meeting will be held at Cincinnati on the second Tuesday of September, 1893. Officers were elected, S. E. Moore, of Pittsburgh, Pa., being chosen president. Resolutions were passed expressing fealty to the Keeley cure, and opposing all imitation cures.

Sioux Paid for Their Ponies.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Acting Secretary Chandler has ordered the payment of $200,000 authorized by congress as an indemnity to the Sioux Indians for 5,000 ponies taken by the government some years ago during one of the Indian outbreaks in the northwest.

Death of Gen. Watts.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 17.—Ex-Congressman Thomas Watts died at 8 a. m. Friday. He was on the streets Thursday. He was a general in the confederate army and was governor of Alabama during the civil war.

Bay State Republicans.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—The republican state convention, which met in this city, nominated Hon. William H. Haile, of Springfield, for governor by acclamation.

READ WHAT IS SAID OF IT BY LEDING DRUGGISTS IN SOUTHERN MICHIGAN.

GET THE BEST

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as everything else! By the universal satisfaction it has given, and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption has proven itself unequalled for Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Chest. Do not experiment with any unheard of or untried article which you are told is "as good as Dr Fay's," for its equal does not exist, but be sure to get only Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Sold by all druggists, 50c., $1.00 and $3.00 Prepared only by Dr. O. J. Fay & Co, Chemists, Carleton, Mich.

Regular sizes for sale and sample bottles free at P. J. Orr's drug store.

FREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION.

The political campaign brings the tariff again to the front. But, after all, the strongest free traders believe in protection to the home, the family, the health. There are many ways of doing the latter, but if one is bilious, dull, poor in appetite, with headache, heaviness and lack of energy, there is no better way than to use a few bottles of Parmelee's Mannrake and Dandelion Bitters. They will improve your appetite, aid digestion and brace you up generally. Only 25 cents a large bottle. Sold by dealers.

A PILE OF MONEY WASTED.

People have wasted piles of money trying to cure Piles. A cheaper and surer way is to buy a box of Parmelee's Pile Suppositories for 50 cents, and see what they will do. You can get your money back if they do not benefit you. The proprietors are that sure of them. Sold by dealers.

WHEN YOUR STOCK IS SICK

Use Parmelee's Condition Powders. They are acknowledged the best by all who have used them. Full pound 25 cents. Sold by dealers.

BURNING PETROLEUM AT OIL CITY

Wrought terrible havoc to life and property. Yet Petroleum is one of nature's great natural remedies. It enters very largely into Parmelee's Household Ointment, which is positively guaranteed to cure ulcers, old sores, erysipelas, salt rheum, scratches on horses, hard or cracked hoofs and foot rot in sheep. Sold everywhere and used by every one who knows anything about it.

LOOK OUT FOR THAT FALL COUGH.

Do not allow it to become settled on you for the winter. It will prove a serious matter if you do. Stop it now. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will surely do this. It is guaranteed to. Compare the size of the Hamilton Cough Balsam bottle with other Cough remedies of the same price.

THE CHEAPEST IS NOT ALWAYS THE BEST.

But in the case of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla the two features seem to go together. It is as strong, as effective, as certain in its action, as positive in its cures as any higher priced article of similar nature in the market to-day. It sells for only 50 cents a bottle. Ask for Parmelee's and be sure you get Parmelee's.

A common cold should not be neglected. Downs' Elixir will cure it.

A wail of distress comes from tortured clothes. Save their feelings, and your own back, by washing them with Pearline. Your clothes will last longer—your hours of labor will grow shorter. It takes away the dirt without taking away your strength. Nothing that "will wash" is too good for Pearline—no praise is too strong for Pearline.

Beware of imitations. 288 JAMES PYLE, N Y

Little Tommy Whykins had been wrestling with a piece of hardtack. "Mamma," said he, after a silence. "What is it?" "If poll parrots get all the crackers they ask for I don't wonder they learn to swear."

Constipation is caused by loss of the peristaltic action of the bowels. Hood's Pills restore this action and invigorate the liver.

Joseph Ruby, of Columbia, Pa., suffered from birth with scrofula humor, till he was perfectly cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

When man pictures a heaven for himself he always has own mansion right in the center of it.

Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Most people need to use it.

CRIME HAUNTED HIM.

A Wealthy Man Confesses to Murder Committed Ten Years Ago.

Confronted by two shrewd Canadian detectives Alfred Henshaw, one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of Harrisville, confessed to a murder committed by him at Strathroy, Ont., ten years ago. At that time Henshaw was a lumberman in Strathroy and became involved in financial troubles. His partner, one Richard Drake, found fault with his conduct, and one night in a quarrel Henshaw stabbed him to death in their office, locked the body in the safe and fled. Ten days later the body was discovered, but no clew could be found of the murderer. Six months ago a son of Drake offered two local detectives $1,000 if they caught his father's murderer, and they finally located Henshaw in Harrisville. When confronted with his crime he at first denied it and then, in a fit of anguish, he confessed his guilt. He says he has been haunted by the memory of his crime ever since the night he committed it and is glad he has been discovered. He went back without extradition papers.

POOR WHEAT.

The Quality Is Bad and in Many Instances the Grain Is Shrunken.

The Michigan crop report for September has been issued by the secretary of state. The reports of thrashers indicate an average yield of 14.95 bushels of wheat in the southern four tiers of counties, 15.37 in the central tiers and 16.08 in the northern tiers. The total yield in the state is 23,500,000 bushels. It is thought to be of poor quality and in many instances badly shrunken. Oats will be above an average crop. Potatoes promise 55 per cent. of an average crop in the southern, 70 in the central and 88 in the northern tiers of counties. The yield of winter apples will be about 18 per cent. in the southern, 58 in the central and 93 in the northern counties. The peach crop will be 61 per cent. of an average.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by sixty-eight observers in different parts of the state for the week ended September 10 indicated that measles, inflammation of the brain, dysentery and scarlet fever increased, and pneumonia and inflammation of the kidneys decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-one places, scarlet fever at thirty-three, typhoid fever at fifty-one and measles at one place.

Drink Under an Umbrella.

Quite a sensation has been produced in Jackson by Judge Williamson, of the Fourth judicial circuit, who charged a grand jury that it was an indictable offense for a man to screen himself by holding an open umbrella across his shoulder while taking a drink in a saloon. The annotated code abolished bar screens, since which time the umbrella has been used as a substitute.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas Our beloved sister Burnett was called home by her Heavenly Father on Aug. 9th, 1892, We deem it a sacred duty, at this first meeting of our W. F. M. S., to bear a loving tribute to her christian character.

In our society she was generous in her offerings, faithful in her work and earnest and spiritual in her progress. We shall greatly miss her, not only on account of these, but also the benediction of her presence, her kind spirit and encouraging words. Therefore, RESOLVED, That we will ever cherish her precious memory as a priceless legacy to our society.

RESOLVED, that we will extend to our dear Brother Burnett and the children left to his care, our sincere sympathy in their greft affliction and may God vouch a safe them His richest blessing,

Mrs. L. Barnes,
Mrs. H. Steinhoff,
Mrs. H. Forestall,

The Young Men's Band will go to Wampler's Lake, Friday, for two or three days.—Tecumseh Herald. It is said that when the tuba young man got in his work, the oldest bullfrog about the lake—he was over a foot long—broke down and wept like a child, declaring that he "stood no show." Then at one straddle he plunged under the waves and the waters closed over him.—Adrian Press.

Democratic County Convention.

The Lenawee County Democracy met in Convention last Tuesday at the County Court House. Every town in the County had a full delegation. Perfect harmony prevailed and a very strong county ticket was placed in nomination.

At promptly 11 o'clock Chairman L. W. Hoch called the convention to order and the ex-mayor announced briefly the object for which the convention was called, and named Col. James B. Thorne, of Hudson, as temporary chairman.

Col. Thorne, who was unexpectedly called upon, could make no set speech, but very neatly thanked the chairman and the delegates. He was glad that he was a Democrat, and would be permitted to vote for Grover Cleveland. He had been attending Democrat conventions for over twenty years, and he marked the increase in attendance from year to year with a good deal of pleasure. Considerable applause was interspersed during the remarks of Col. Thorne.

L. A. Porter, of Madison, was unanimously chosen secretary.

The temporary officers were sworn by Justice Robertson.

Col. O'Leary moved a committee of 3 each on credentials and permanent organization, and it was carried.

The chair appointed Col. O'Leary, Adrian; B. J. Garlinghouse, Tecumseh; A. T. Nichols, Seneca, on credentials. On permanent organization, Geo. Holloway, of Raisin; Chas. Hitchins, Rollin; C. Cheney, Ogden.

Adjourned till 1 o'clock.

The real business of the Convention was transacted in the afternoon. There was quite an animated contest over the nominees for Probate Judge, Register and one Circuit Court Commissioner, but with entire good feeling. The other nominees were chosen by acclamation. Delegates were elected to the State Convention of October 4th.

The following resolutions were adopted.

Resolved—That in the candidature of Allen B. Morse, the Democracy of Michigan again present to the people of the state a man true to Democratic principles, true to the interests of the state, and true to every patriotic sentiment of American citizenship, and who, if elected, will give to the people of Michigan a continuation of the wise and economic administration of state affairs inaugurated under the judicious espionage of that sterling man of the people, Gov. Edwin B. Winans.

Below is the ticket as nominated.

Judge of Probate—Chas. Burridge.
Sheriff—Len. W. Hoch.
Clerk—Ira Waterman.
Prosecutor—Fred B. Wood.
Register—Chas. R. Keebor.
Treasurer—Wm. H. Wiggins.
Circuit Court Com'rs.—J. B. Ayers, Bert Chandler.
Surveyor—Franklin S. Philips.
Coroners—Dr. J. E. White, Dr. W. H. Wise.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Fred Morrell is still on the sick list.

Mrs. John Britton is visiting her son Morris at Battle Creek.

Our Washington excursionists returned home Monday morning.

See that you get credit tickets on the lamps when you trade at Lenardson's.

Remember the Pioneer Committee meeting at John Britton's next Monday evening.

A yearling Clydesdale owned by A. E. Kniffin brought down the scales at 1100 pounds.

W. Lenardson and wife left for Oberlin, Ohio, Wednesday morning, to visit friends for a couple of weeks.

E. W. Lenardson and wife entertained about thirty-five of their friends at their home last Friday evening.

Lenardson Bros. were presented with fourteen St. Bernard pups by Lady Rowena Bernard last week Wednesday.

Dave Boyd and wife and Chas. DuBois and wife drove to Plymouth Friday morning to visit Jim Sowle, returning Sunday.

Gripton Bros. are running their sorghum mill full blast and are turning out some excellent syrup—about 1,000 gallons per week.

Misses Ellen Ousterhout, Tillie McCutcheon, Ella Exelby and Martha Ackley passed the Sabbath with Jennie Saxton and Luella Haynes at Dundee.

Wm. Outh, of Dunkirk, Ohio, stopped off on his way from Detroit to pass the Sabbath with his sister, Mrs. Dr. Hendershot, leaving for his home Monday.

Mrs. Samuel Underwood and son Warren left for Yates Centre, Kansas, Tuesday morning to visit Mrs. Underwood's brother, Mr. Wm. Wilson, for two or three weeks.

Dr. P. B. Hardy and Geo. C. Hawkes are the two latest recruits to join the ranks of the Maccabees. Let more follow. The next regular meeting will be held Tuesday evening, Oct. 4th. Let all be present.

Sullivan and Corbett had a sparring match in town Saturday night only John L. was frank with Corbett and only gave him a scratch, while Sullivan got a black eye. They shook at the finish and parted friends, although it will take all the gate money to pay damages done to Joe's window light.

CHICKEN PIE SUPPER.

The ladies' home missionary society will hold a chicken pie supper at the Christian Church next Wednesday evening, Oct. 5th. The proceeds will be used toward carpeting the church. Everybody from far and near, young and old, are invited. There will be chicken pies for the million, all sizes and all kinds—Plymouth Rocks, Houdan five-toed, Shanghai, Game, Langshan, and two very large pies made entirely of political roosters, fattened for campaign purposes, which the ladies have borrowed from the several county papers. Don't forget the day and date and that you are especially invited. The object is a worthy one and the chicken pies will be of the finest and the supply unlimited.

THE PIONEER MEETING.

A meeting of the Committees heretofore appointed was held at the residence of John Britton last Monday evening and the arrangements for the event were nicely started. The date was fixed for Tuesday, October 11th. The sessions of the Society will be held in Exelby's Opera House and the dinner in G. A. R. Hall. There will be two sessions of the Society, morning and afternoon, the first session beginning at 10 a. m. The program will consist of two historical papers, vocal music and recitations, short talks by a number of the older settlers and the usual business routine of the annual meeting. The committees were completed as follows:

General Com.—John Britton, C. B. Exelby, Sam'l Kniffen, Jas. Haight, Geo. Exelby, Sam'l Underwood, M. Yates, Will Britton, Geo. W. Smith, John Zeluff.

Table Com.—Mesdames Will Clark, O. B. Lenardson, Geo. Exelby, L. C. Hoagland, F. M. Calkins, Will Babcock, Ed. Bauchman, Sam'l Kniffin, C. B. Exelby, Wm. Underwood, James Haight, John Exelby, Chas. Kniffin, J. Britton, Geo. Smith, Frank Brown.

Music Com.—C. B. Tripp, Gertie Kniffin, M. L. Gillen, Vern Gripton, Jud Kniffin, Ernest Dubois, Fred Dubois, Ella Exelby and Martha Ackley.

Relic Com.—Wm. Underwood, Mrs. Geo. Oliver, L. C. Hoagland, Mrs. Jas. Wright, Mrs. E. W. Borden, Frank Brown.

To give Recitations—Ella Exelby, Chas. Bowerman, Bertha Kniffin, Mattie Rappleye, Minnie Barrett, Albert Palmer.

People having old relics in their possession are requested to bring them for temporary exhibition on that day. Arrangements will be made to properly exhibit and take care of them.

A basket dinner will be served at noon. The citizens of Britton extend a hearty invitation to all the old settlers in this section of the County to be present. Come early. Bring your baskets well filled and stay all day.

The Committees named above are requested to meet at John Britton's next Monday evening, Oct. 3rd, to complete the arrangements.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

John Miller is quite sick at present writing.

Jay Santus was under the doctor's care last week.

Flota Smith was home from the Normal over Sunday.

Mrs. W. E. Barrett spent Sunday in Toledo with friends.

A. H. Arner was home calling on friends a part of last week.

Chas. Slayton, of Tecumseh, was in the village Friday on business.

Elder Yager will remain with his Ridgeway friends for another year.

Mrs. A. J. Sutton visited friends at Wheelerton from Saturday until Tuesday.

Lella Sutton visited friends at Homer and Wheelerton from Saturday until Tuesday.

Lou Arner visited Tecumseh relatives and friends from Saturday until Monday.

F. E. Pocklington was called home from Chicago Saturday by the illness of his son Elmer.

Remember the library will be open both afternoon and evening, beginning next Saturday.

Mrs. Jennie Bangs and Ida Russell, of Tecumseh, called on friends in the village Tuesday.

Mrs. E. W. Rappleye and Mrs. R. H. Nelson visited Dundee relatives a portion of last week.

Mrs. M. D. Britton, of Battle Creek, was called here Friday by the death of her nephew, little Clyde Harrison.

Hon. Frank A. Dean, Michigan's tariff reform orator, will speak in the Tecumseh opera house on Tuesday evening of next week.

We understand that Rev. E. W. Frazee will occupy the pulpit Sunday. In the evening his subject will be "The W. C. T. U.'s Work and Future Power."

Mrs. Jacob Barrett died Wednesday morning. She had a light stroke of apoplexy Sunday from which she never recovered, passing away Wednesday morning after a second stroke.

The ladies of the home missionary society of Britton extend a cordial invitation to the friends of our village to be present on next Wednesday evening at the Christian Church, when they will serve a chicken pie supper for the purpose of raising money to purchase new carpets for their church.

Little Clyde Harrison, after a week's sickness with cholera infantum and bloody dysentery, died about noon Wednesday of last week, at the age of twenty-two months. The funeral services were held at the church Friday afternoon, Rev. James Wright officiating. The floral gifts were very beautiful. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of their neighbors and friends in their sad loss.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to the kind neighbors and friends who so willingly assisted us during the sickness and death of our darling baby; also for the beautiful floral gifts.

MR. AND MRS. ED HARRISON.

What the Editor Gets.

When a child is born into the world the physician is presented and gets about $10 for officiating at the important event. The editor heralds the advent of the stranger and gets a cursing for making a mistake as to the sex and date of arrival.

After a while the child becomes a man, the minister is called to perform the marriage ceremony and walks off with a $10 in his pocket for his trouble. The editor is again called upon to chronicle this event by drawing on his imagination to make the bride and groom the most respectable people in the county. His only pay is to be asked for a few extra copies of his paper to send to some absent friends.

In time the once baby, once happy groom, but now a man well advanced in years, is brought down by death. Again the physician is called in and makes his bill, the undertaker is present and officiates at the funeral, and in time wants $100 for performing the last sad rites, while the editor is expected to complete the drama by holding up the deceased as a model gentleman, and one who at present is flying up the golden stairs. The probabilities are at the same time that the baby, the groom and the dead man have been so infernally stingy that he stinted his wife and children and had never contributed one cent to the support of his local paper. What does the editor get? He gets left. —Adrian Times.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS.

Mrs. Hannah Chaffee has Reached That Mark and Celebrates It Surrounded By Relatives.

One hundred years is a long while to live on this mundane sphere and seldom it is that mortal is given that privilege. When the threescore and ten mark is reached in this life's journey a few paces beyond generally finds the aged heart beating with difficulty and the tottering limbs but partially doing their duty.

Saturday, the 24th, Mrs. Hannah Chaffee, of this city, passed the century post in the years of her habitation here below, and started the second cycle with mind clear and memory good.

She was born on Main street, in Pomfret, Windham county, Connecticut, September 24, 1792. Her parents were born and reared in the same village and raised the large family of which the subject of this sketch was one. At the age of 23, in Woodstock, Connecticut, she married Jonathan Foggerson, who died four years later. John Foggerson was the only child born to bless this union, and he is now living in Aurora, Nevada, at the age of 75 years.

Eight years later, or in 1825, she married Warren Fay Chaffee, and together they traveled life's journey until four years ago, when Mr. Chaffee died at the age of 88.

In 1832 they came to Michigan, traveling the full distance from New York State with an ox team, and taking four weeks to accomplish the journey. They settled on a tract of land now forming part of the farm occupied by George Luther, just west of the city, about four miles out on the old plank road. Selling out soon after, they settled in the flourishing village of Reading, Hillsdale county. Eight or ten years were spent there, when they moved back to Lenawee county, and since that time have lived in and about Adrian, the past eight years being spent in the home of their grandson, William Nicholson, corner Front and Ormsby streets.

Of this union there were born three children: Ellen Nicholson, deceased, and wife of the late Samuel Nicholson; Oscar Chaffee, living in the township of Adrian, living in the township of Adrian, and Mrs. Amanda H. Norris, deceased.

The grandchildren number eight, all living in this vicinity except one, who is a resident of the State of Washington. They are: Mrs. John Mawdsley, Mrs. Jennie Jacklin, Fanny Norris, Wm. Nicholson, Warner Nicholson, Chas. Chaffee, Edwin Chaffee and Frank Chaffee.

The great-grandchildren number nearly twenty, and are scattered about this vicinity in all directions.

Mrs. Chaffee is an aunt of the late Senator Chaffee, and she has a brother, John Goodell, living in Troy, N. Y., now 98 years of age.

The old lady retains her memory well, but is so feeble that she has to be helped from one place to another. She takes great pleasure in sitting alone and smoking.

She talks intelligibly and rehearses with considerable satisfaction the story of the four weeks' trip to Michigan with an ox team. They arrived here through the mud and dark woods in October, 1832. Mrs. Chaffee brought with her apple seeds, peach pits, etc. from the east, and in a short time secured results from her labors by harvesting the most luscious of fruit. There were many hardships to endure and many obstacles to overcome in that time, and it required considerable bravery to do so.

The celebration Saturday took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson, and about fifty guests, relatives, of course, sat down to dinner. It was a memorable gathering and will never be forgotten by any who participated.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson may well feel proud that they have been permitted to be the host and hostess on such an occasion. They were equal to all emergencies and the day passed in a charming manner. During the afternoon Barnum, the photographer, succeeded in getting a good picture of the entire party as they arranged themselves on the lawn.—Adrian Times.

COLUMBUS DAY PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, EXECUTIVE DEPT.

WHEREAS, The World's Congress Auxiliary of the World's Columbian Exposition has made a patriotic suggestion that, at the same time that the Exposition grounds at Chicago are being dedicated on October 21, 1892, the anniversary of the discovery of America, all the people of the United States unite in celebrating the anniversary, of which celebration the public schools of the Republic shall be everywhere the center; and

WHEREAS, The President of the United States has by proclamation recommended the observance of that day by public demonstration and by suitable exercises in the schools and other places of assembly throughout the land;

Now, Therefore, I, Edwin B. Winans, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby recommend and request the observance by the people of Michigan of the said 21st day of October, 1892, as a general holiday, that business be suspended, and that civil and military organizations join in the celebration.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the State, this first day of September, A. D. 1892.

EDWIN B. WINANS, Governor.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

At St. Dominic's Church in Clinton, Sept. 21st, Mr. David McHenney and Miss Katie O'Reilly were united in the bonds of matrimony by Father Ternes. They had all the honors of high mass bestowed upon them. As the bell tolled 9 a. m. the bride and groom marched into the Church, Mr. Ed Kehoe acted as best man and Miss Maggie O'Reilly as maid of honor. When the knot was securely tied the groom escorted his bride to the hack which stood in waiting, and with their attendants they were driven directly to Mr. David O'Reilly's commodious home in Macon. The usual congratulations followed, after which a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to the satisfaction of a merry company of 75 or 80 guests.

The bride and groom are both among Clinton's choicest young people and they have the best wishes of their many friends. The young couple took the 10 a. m. train, amidst showers of rice, for Jackson and other points. After their return they will commence the stern realities of life in Macon.

The bridal gifts, in great variety, both useful and ornamental, were the center of attraction, proving the lasting character of the friendships which the young couple had formed.

TECUMSEH, MICH., SEPT. 29, 1892.

One of the hardest things to do is to persuade a man that his wages have been raised when he isn't getting any more money. That's the job the protection editors have tackled.

The Republican papers claim that the Australian ballot law had nothing to do with the result in Maine and Vermont. Possibly that is true. The new system has a tendency to drive away the ticket-rates and weed out the repeaters.

Party leaders are complaining of the indifference of the voters and the difficulty of arousing them to action. This is not a brass band campaign. Voters are reading the newspapers at home, and they will vote intelligently on election day.

Although the campaign has been slow in opening the Democrats are settling down to business in good shape. There are no drones nor idlers in the Democratic hive this year. The party is thoroughly united and it will count on election day.

There is no sulking Achilles in the Democratic tent this fall. Gov. Boies is making a brilliant campaign in Iowa which bids fair to swing that state into the Democratic column. Senator Hill has gone into the fight in New York with his sleeves rolled up and Tammany Hall is in line.

In Wyoming there is a complete fusion of democrats and populists, the former endorsing the Weaver electors and the latter making no state nominations. It is believed the democratic state ticket will thus be elected and perhaps the republicans will lose their electoral ticket.

The Chicago Herald pays its respects to the robber tariff thusly: "The time has come to exterminate this sneaking marauder. He no longer makes a pretense either of honesty or of candor. He knows he is wrong. He knows that at the best his days are numbered. He once had respect for his victims. Now he holds them in contempt. Is there manliness enough in America to dispatch him?"

The iron workers of the country have have had a powerful object lesson in the way of a demonstration of the fact that the wages they get is not due to the high tariff policy of the Republican party, but to their own organization. The McKinley bill raised the average of the so-called protective tariff from 43 to 60 per cent, yet the ironworkers have been asked to accept a reduction of wages ranging from 20 to 60 per cent. As one of the beneficent results of a high tariff, how is this for high?

Washington by its hospitable reception and entertainment of the members of the G. A. R. and the friends and relatives who accompanied them to the successful National encampment just closed, sent out 350,000 advertisements, in the persons of the delighted visitors, whose talk will forever put an end to the supposition which has been put forward in some quarters that the citizens of the National Capitol were selfish, inhospitable and lacking in public spirit, and that the city cannot take care of a big crowd. The encampment was in every respect the greatest ever held by the G. A. R. As to the treatment accorded to the old soldiers and those who came to see the largest parade since the disbandment of the Army at the close of the war, let them speak when they return to their homes.

Col. Charles R. Codman, of Boston, in a letter declining to be a candidate for Congress in the new Thirteenth District of Massachusetts, writes: "To my mind there is now, for the first time at any Presidential election since the question of slavery was disposed of, a plain and unmistakable issue. It is between privilege or 'protection' on the one side, and equality and true protection on the other. It is between a system by which the people are taxed to magnify the profits of a favored few, and a theory of taxation which denies the moral, if not the constitutional, right of the Government to levy taxes for any purpose but its liberal and yet economical support. I must now, as always, stand opposed to legislation in the interests of favored classes, whether they be the slave-owners of 1860 or the monopolists of 1892.

The Revenue Tariff Standard.

For nearly a full century, after the organization of our government, no statesman ever proposed any other than a revenue standard for the tariff laws. The American system, the great champion of protection, distinctly disclaimed any other than a revenue standard for our tariff laws, and the theory of levying taxes solely to protect one class at the cost of all the rest was always disavowed by the advocates of protection until the high tariff taxes of the war unfortunately for manufactures and wicked greed of monopoly.

[illegible] the people of the country have repeatedly met the issue on the revenue tariff standard and sustained it, and the people [illegible] that now all [illegible] over the Chicago platform, [illegible] with [illegible] the Democratic national platform of 1856 declared distinctly for a revenue tariff, and progressive [illegible] made [illegible] the world, and Pennsylvania and the nation voted for Buchanan. Again in 1876 the Democratic [illegible] existing tariff was a mass of [illegible] inequality and [illegible] and [illegible] with its [illegible] protection—the demand [illegible] custom house taxation shall be [illegible] revenue." On this platform Tilden received a majority of 250,000 and lost the Presidency by fraud.

In 1884 the Democrats repeated the [illegible] and for "a tariff for revenue only" and Blaine was beaten by less than 1,000 votes in a poll of some 9,000,000.

A revenue tariff is not free trade. All tariffs have been framed in favor of domestic labor and products, and they will be so for all time even under any tariff for a revenue only. A revenue tariff and the reciprocity features of the McKinley bill are based on the same theory. Both look to free trade or fair trade as the mutual interests of nations dictate, and both are in complete harmony, while the reciprocity feature of the McKinley bill is at war with the whole theory of the new tariff law.

A sound revenue tariff would disturb no legitimate enterprise and paralyze no American industry. To do so would be unwise and no party has ever attempted it. On the contrary, with our great advance in machinery and skilled labor and with free raw materials such as every other protection country of the world gives, we would soon find the products of our varied American industries in every market of the world, with increased demand for labor each year because of our mastery in skilled labor. Fools will prate about destructive free trade, but those who intelligently seek the truth will know that it is impossible.—Philadelphia Times.

The President on McKinleyism.

In the course of his argument on the advantages of McKinleyism, which constitutes the major portion of his letter accepting the presidential nomination, President Harrison declares that:

"1. The cost of articles entering into the use of those earning less than $1,000 per annum has decreased up to May, 1892, 3.4 per cent, while in farm products there has been an increase in prices, owing in part to increased foreign demand and the opening of new markets. In England during the same period the cost of living increased 1.9 per cent. Tested by their power to purchase articles of necessity, the earnings of our working people have never been as great as they are now.

"2. There has been an average advance in the rate of wages of .75 of 1 per cent.

"3. There has been an advance in the price of all farm products of 18.67 per cent and of all cereals 33.59 per cent.

"The articles entering into the use of persons earning less than $1,000 per annum are exclusively farm products. They are bread and butter and meat, cotton and wool. The cereal and vegetable products are the very basis of their living. If the cereals have advanced 33.59 per cent and farm products 18.67 per cent, it is difficult to understand how the wage earner has been able to reduce the cost of living 3.4 per cent. The two statements don't harmonize. If there has been an advance in farm products and cereals in particular, it must have affected the flour, the cornmeal, the oatmeal and the buckwheat consumed by the laborer quite as much as it did any other consumer.

If there has been this remarkable advance during a year of McKinleyism, what has become of it? The farmer is selling his wheat in Dakota to-day for 40 cents a bushel. While wool, despite heavy protective duties, is low in price and is only maintained at its present figure by the exclusion of competition with the American product. The farmer, even the producer of protected products is not getting all out of protection that it promises him. He has been sadly duped.

The workingman who has gained .75 of 1 per cent as an average advance in wages must contemplate with a great deal of satisfaction the mathematical problem proposed by the President. How he can save 3.7 per cent in his living expenses with prices of farm products advanced 18.67 per cent is a Chinese puzzle for him to spend the lengthening evenings over.—Detroit Evening News.

One Industry that McKinley Benefited.

For several months past Democratic newspapers have been asking the Republicans to point out an industry which has been enabled to increase wages or increase the number of employes on account of the protection afforded by the McKinley law. The Albany Argus answers the inquiry in the following paragraph:

"There is one industry that has sprung up and flourished like the traditional green bay tree under the 'fostering care' of the McKinley bill for which our high protection friends do not profess much regard. That industry is the manufacture of shoddy. So far as we can learn at present there have been no strikes, shut downs or decrease of wages in this industry. Every shoddy mill in New England is running full time, with an abundance of orders. Those mills that were abandoned under the low wool tariff era have reopened, and are turning out shoddy clothing at a surprising rate. This prosperity in the shoddy industry is not without its disastrous effects upon the woolen trade. The number of failures in the legitimate woolen industry increases yearly. The manufactured article is becoming inferior and its price higher. Shoddy clothing, however, is everywhere, and shoddy because [illegible] which was imposed ostensibly to benefit the wool growers of the country."

The October Scribner.

The October number of the Scribner's Magazine begins a group of articles on "The World's Fair at Chicago." The first is a descriptive [illegible] Hamlin on "The Making of the White City." He looks with appreciation and enthusiasm on the wonderful transformation which has [illegible] into a [illegible] of buildings and ways never before [illegible] assembled for such a purpose, on such a scale, within such a time, and [illegible] such conditions. A series of illustrations by W. T. Smedley illustrates this [illegible] one of the best-known merchants of Chicago, will write on "Chicago Past in the Fair." November numbers, and Frank D. Millet, who has been associated with so many World's Fair projects, will write of "The Decoration of the World's Fair" (December). Mr. Millet's recent appointment as Chief in charge of the Decorations will enable him to write on this subject as no one else could. This group of preliminary articles on the World's Fair will, it is believed, give the general reader an adequate idea of the immense undertaking which is being so rapidly and artistically carried out.

Has Dropped Its Bundle.

The Republican party has dropped its force-bill bundle. Ex-Secretary Blaine, in his recent letter, wholly ignores that issue; President Harrison, in his letter of acceptance, is careful not to commit himself to it, and the Detroit Tribune and other g. o. p. organs are wildly calling on Democratic papers "to point out, if they can, any indorsement of the Lodge bill in the Republican national platform." And yet it was this very Lodge force bill that Blaine, Harrison and the Republican organs generally are now ignoring or repudiating that was forced through the House two years ago by a solid Republican vote, and only failed in the Senate through the defection of a few of the Republican Senators from all the silver states, who apparently voted against it in response to Democratic votes [illegible]. Now, however, the Republican managers repudiate this very force bill which two years ago was made the test of party orthodoxy. Indeed, the "grand old party" is on the run.—Grand Rapids Leader.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 19th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Margaret West, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Smeltzer, administrator, upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, that he is now ready to close said estate and render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be distributed to those persons by law entitled thereto, that he may be discharged and his bond cancelled and for such other order and decree as in this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday the 17th day of October next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

McKINLEY WAGES BREAK DOWN.

History of the Small List of Bogus Wage Advances That Now Supplies Two Parties With Campaign Material—Brief Facts in Regard to Each Case.

Hon. John Dewitt Warner, of the Reform club, has completed his investigation of the twenty-eight cases where, according to the American Economist and other high tariff authorities, wages have been advanced in protected industries since October, 1890. Trustworthy examiners were sent to each place to get the facts. Their reports were of such a nature that the Reform club has published them as a number of Tariff Reform, and the New York Weekly World of August 25 gave them a full page.

It will be remembered that the Reform club has prepared and published in the World and in Tariff Reform a list of nearly 500 wage-reductions and lock-outs in protected industries since the McKinley act took effect. The protectionists who had promised higher wages with the McKinley bill and had been shouting higher wages ever since, began to get uneasy because they could not tell anxious inquirers exactly where wage advances had occurred. They began to search, feeling confident that wages must have advanced in many of the thousands of protected mills in this country. They sent out circulars to managers asking them to report the percent that wages had been advanced in their mills since October, 1890. In this way and in other ways they got together what purported to be a list of wage advances. Apparently it did not occur to the American Economist editor (or if it did he was so anxious to publish the list that he did not consider the consequence of an exposure) that the manufacturers might misstate facts—perhaps to get free advertising, or it may be to attract laborers to their mills. The twenty-eight cases of "wage advances" were published with a flourish in the American Economist. Republican papers were not slow in copying the list. "At last McKinley has been vindicated and the free trade liars" silenced. But the one great fault with the list was that it was short; indeed, it was its brevity that betrayed it in more ways then one. It not only exposed the meager results of great promises, but it offered inducements to investigation which a more formidable list would have precluded. If the protectionists were attempting a game of bluff they should have made a list of several hundred advances—so many that it would be a very big and very expensive piece of work to make inquiry in regard to all. But twenty-eight cases were just enough to challenge investigation. If a few of them could be shown to be incorrect the already small list would be diminished so that even republican editors would be ashamed to publish it. It was not expected by Mr. Warner, when he began the investigation, that the whole list was a fraud and that he would in the majority of cases get wage reductions for his already long list. The following are the briefest possible summaries of the list—the quotations being from the American Economist's list of "examples of wages advanced under the McKinley tariff, showing increased per cent.:"

1. Haskell & Baker Car Co., Michigan City, Ind., 5 per cent.—Wages were reduced from 12½ to 25 cents per day in 1889 and restored 12½ cents in May 1890. No change since the McKinley act took effect.

2. Wooster & Stoddard, Walden, N. Y., 5 per cent.—Strike in May, 1892, causes a readjustment of wages by which some got more and others got less; total effect not certain.

3. Camden Woolen Co., Camden, Me., 10 per cent.—Four looms got a raise because they changed to heavier work; weavers' earnings were not increased.

4. Rider Engine Co., Walden, N. Y., 5 per cent.—No advances in ten years, but reductions of 10 and 12½ per cent. since 1884.

5. Hawthorne Mills Co., Glenville, Conn., 15 per cent.—One man advanced from $1.15 to $1.25 in July, 1892, and nearly all of the 200 employes reduced from 10 to 20 per cent. since 1890.

6. Alfred Dolge, Dolgeville, N. Y., 20 per cent.—Alfred Dolge has for years had a system of encouraging employes to work for little and to expect more, by advancing the wages of twenty or twenty-five of his more industrious workmen a shilling at the end of the year. In February, 1891, forty or fifty received this advance, but in February, 1892, no advance whatever occurred and many employes were disappointed. Numerous reductions each year fully offset these bunched and widely heralded advances.

7. Lake Superior Lumber Co., Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., 15 per cent.—No advance at all was made in this planing mill; report was purely for political reasons.

8. J. C. Bass, Roxboro, N. C., 25 per cent.—The two or three employes of this grist and saw mill never got less wages than now. The report furnished amusement for neighbors.

9. H. L. Chapman, White Pigeon, Mich., 15 per cent.—One of the two employes here is an apprentice and had his wages advanced to 50 cents per day from 25 cents.

10. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., Grafton, W. Va., 20 per cent.—No advances here, but the few that have not been discharged by closing of foundries, etc., have had their wages reduced in the last year from $2.25 to $1.57.

11. Wilkins & Close, Mayfield, N. Y., 15 to 25 per cent.—Mr. Wilkins says the report is false, as only the usual advances to new hands have occurred.

12. Close & Christie, Mayfield, N. Y., 15 to 25 per cent.—Same situation as No. 11.

13. Canastota Knife Co., Canastota, N. Y., 10 per cent.—In 1871 by threatening to strike the employes got back about 10 per cent. of the 20 per cent. reduction made four or five years ago.

14. New York Knife Co., Walden, N. Y., 10 per cent.—In April and in June, 1892, about two-thirds of the workers, by having a union and by threatening to strike, received advances of from 7 to 10 per cent. A general reduction of 10 per cent. occurred in 1885, which the company promised to replace if Harrison was elected.

15. Thomaston Knife Co., Thomaston, Conn., 10 per cent.—Same situation as at No. 13.

16. W. F. Epperson, Ladoga, Ind., 10 per cent.—Mr. Epperson's reply to the republican letter sent him is being widely circulated by democrats. Instead of advancing wages he has had to shut down his heading factory part of the time.

17. Pittsburgh Reduction Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., 10 per cent.—The proprietor knew of no advances and was surprised that such a report was made.

18. Sultan Buggy & Carriage Co., White Pigeon, Mich., 10 per cent.—No advances, but more work for the same pay.

19. B. Howitzer, Chaseburg, Wis., 10 per cent.—Chaseburg has fifty inhabitants. No Howitzer there.

20. Enterprise Manufacturing Co., Manheim, Pa., 30 per cent.—The girls making socks and overalls at $2.50 to $3 a week became dissatisfied and were irregular at work. The firm advanced piece prices from 35 to 45 cents and from 11 to 15 cents a dozen.

21. Shaw Stocking Co., Lowell, Mass., 10 per cent.—The reduction by law of working hours from 60 to 58 caused no reduction of wages of day laborers but piece workers may earn less.

22. Kings County Knitting Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., 5 per cent.—The ten or fifteen employes knew of no advance.

23. Western Knitting Mills, Rochester, Mich., 15 per cent.—Four apprentices were advanced; many others of the 100 employes received reductions from 15 to 12½ cents per dozen.

24. Western Knitting Mills, Detroit, Mich., 15 per cent.—Wages have not changed for eight years.

25. Langley and David, Oriskany Falls, N. Y., 25 to 50 cents a day—Two foremen and one apprentice advanced slightly; six weavers and one finisher reduced from 11 to 16 per cent.; wages of other five employes unchanged.

26. William Carter & Co., Highlandville, Mass., 15 to 50 cents a day—Five of 90 employes were advanced to prevent them from returning to England. A few other changes in the mills were made because new machines were introduced.

27. McCormick & Co., Harrisburg, Pa., 15 to 50 cents a day—Forty laborers whose wages were reduced from $1.20 to $1.10 last fall had the ten cents restored in June. Forty puddlers on February 15, 1892, were reduced from $4 to $3.50 per ton. Eighty-five were thrown out in March 1892 by the closing of one furnace.

28. He (John De Witt Warner) should not forget the 25,000 employes in the Fall River cotton mills, who had their wages increased on July 11.

The legal change of hours from 60 to 58 per week caused no reduction of wages, because the employes were contemplating a strike to get back a reduction of 10 per cent. in 1884.

HOW IT WORKS.

How the Tariff on Tobacco Makes the Manufacturer of Cigars "Tricky."

I hear so much in regard to the increase of wages the workingman receives since the passage of the McKinley bill that I would like to say a few words about the great (?) benefits derived by the people employed at the cigar trade.

Prior to the passage of the McKinley bill the duty on Sumatra tobacco (for wrappers) was 75 cents per pound. Since, it is $2.25 per pound. It takes three to three and a half pounds of Sumatra to make wrappers for a thousand cigars, so you can figure at least $5 more on a thousand. The retailer will not buy a five-cent cigar unless it has a Sumatra wrapper, and still he wants it at the old price, the same as before the McKinley bill was passed. So the manufacturer is at his wits' ends to know how he shall do it and yet make a profit. How does he do it? The first thing, where he could formerly afford to put a sprig of Havana in a five-cent cigar, he now puts in the commonest truck for filler; where previously the consumer was able to procure a fair cigar for five cents he now has to pay ten cents for the same thing. Second, when a foreman over the cigar-packer gives him a lot of 5,000 cigars to pack he gives 2,500 with Sumatra wrapper worth $4 a pound and 2,500 with Havana seed wrappers worth thirty to forty cents a pound.

The packer puts the cigars with the seed wrappers in the bottom of the boxes and the cigars with Sumatra wrappers on top. The deception is not perceptible to the average retailer. And lastly the numerous reductions the people in the cigar trade have been subjected to during the reign of the McKinley bill, is a warning.

I think the people in the tobacco business will know how to cast their votes this November, as their experiences tell them if they have to go through another four years of strikes (which have been lost by the working class in nearly every instance) and the reductions, they might as well give up the business and pursue something else for a livelihood.—"A Cigar Packer," in N. Y. World.

Peck's Anonymous Report.

The influence of the report will be in proportion to its truthfulness. If, as the report states, $85,000 in the state had their wages increased because of the McKinley bill, let every workingman ask: "Am I one of this happy band?" We are firmly convinced that the affirmative answers will be few.

As we said yesterday, the report is based on statements made in secret and concealed from public view. They are of equal value with anonymous letters. The figures are not Mr. Peck's. They are the figures of men interested in maintaining the system of high tariff. The people are asked to accept the statements of these interested individuals without verification rather than their own experience. They will not do it.

One further point about the report. Mr. Peck jumps to the hasty conclusion that the increase of wages which he hears of is because of the tariff. He reasons on the principle of Post hoc ergo propter hoc. It is unnecessary to point out the connection between the McKinley bill and the increase is simply assumed and not proven, or attempted to be proven.—Utica Observer.

AT HOME AGAIN.

Lieut. Peary and His Party Arrive in Philadelphia.

They Are Well Pleased with the Results of Their Trip to the North Pole—Greenland Thought to Be an Island.

WARMLY WELCOMED.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—The little whaling steamer Kite, with Lieut. Peary's exploring party and the Peary relief party on board, arrived at her dock in this city at noon Friday. A large crowd had assembled, and the arrival of the steamer was greeted with much cheering. As already reported by members of the two parties from St. Johns, N. B., both expeditions have been eminently successful, making exceptionally favorable passages without sickness or storm of any kind.

Lieut. Robert E. Peary, the explorer, and Prof. Angelo Heilprin, commander of the relief party, expressed their satisfaction with the results which have been achieved to crowds of their friends, fellow scientists of the Philadelphia academy and representatives of the newspapers, who steamed down the Delaware in tugs to meet the returning explorers.

A continual ovation from steam whistles and bells on every craft in the harbor greeted the Kite. It was 11:30 o'clock when the dock was reached and an anxious throng of waiting friends of the members of both parties at once swarmed the decks. A reception committee from the academy was already on board, having met the Kite some miles below the city.

Miss Verhoeff, a sister of John M. Verhoeff, who failed to return with his fellow explorers, being reported dead, accompanied the reception committee with her aunt and uncle. They discredit the theory that the missing mineralogist was accidentally killed and firmly believe that he is even now exploring the interior of Greenland, having voluntarily remained behind.

Lieut. Peary himself refuses to say anything concerning Verhoeff's disappearance beyond what has already been mentioned in the dispatches. He denies, however, that differences existed between himself and the independent but ambitious Kentuckian. Other members express ignorance of any trouble between the two men or of Verhoeff's intention to explore for himself.

William E. Mehan, the botanist of the relief party, said that the search for the mineralogist occupied seven days, and that every member of both expeditions, nine Esquimaux and the ship's crew were engaged in it. Traces of Verhoeff had been found on the sixth day near a number of large crevasses, into which there was every reason to believe he had fallen.

Peary himself thinks there is not one chance in a thousand of Verhoeff being alive. If he is living, however, the lieutenant declares he can communicate with his friends by whaling vessels which visit that country in November. On other subjects the explorer talks freely. He says he could get farther north if the sea of ice were unbroken. He is satisfied that Greenland is an island.

AT WORK.

President Harrison Holds a Conference with the Behring Sea Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—President Harrison turned his attention to business Friday for the first time since the serious turn in Mrs. Harrison's illness. The Behring sea commissioners called during the morning and were with the president for two hours. The subject was canvassed very thoroughly and with particular reference to the brief recently submitted by the British authorities.

The fact that the president was again attending to business argued well for the condition of Mrs. Harrison, for he has hardly been out of her room since her condition became alarming. Another important piece of public business to which the president gave his attention was the amending of civil service rule No. 10, under which soldiers and sailors who served in the late war are given preference in securing government offices. The rule has not heretofore applied to widows of soldiers, but now the president has extended it so as to include widows.

The commission declares that polygamy still exists in the territory though not to the great extent as formerly. The development of the territory's resources is going forward rapidly.

Cut the Throat of His Little Child.

MORRISTOWN, Pa., Sept. 23.—In a frenzy of delirium caused by typhoid fever William Loch, aged 36, of Harmanville, cut the throat of his 18 months-old baby, telling it as he did so that it would be an angel. Loch then bathed his face in the blood of his child. Witnesses were powerless to prevent the tragedy.

Deacon at Liberty.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—The Figaro says that Edward Parker Deacon was liberated from prison Wednesday evening. The Figaro adds that Mr. Deacon intends to reside in Paris and to institute legal proceedings for the custody of his children.

TECUMSEH HERALD

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

BY S. C. STACY.

A NEWSPAPER RELIC.

George Merritt, of this village, while recently searching through his father's papers, found an old newspaper that is a decided curiosity. It is a copy of the Madisonian, No. 18 of Vol. 1, published at Tecumseh Dec. 22, 1838. It is a six-column, four-page sheet, all home print. Patent insides were unknown in those days. It contains President Van Buren's message in full, occupying two full pages. The other two pages are given up to general reading and advertising. The local news proper fills less than half a column. We cull a few extracts therefrom which will be read with interest by our older residents.

The Madisonian Office is now in No. 1 Franklin Block, over the store of S. L. Spofford.

Lost! Lost! Who's found?—A paper containing a large amount of subscriptions to the Tecumseh Band, has been lost. The finder will confer a favor by leaving it at the Printing Office.

A single reflection is enough to determine why Mr. Van Buren so strenuously persists in urging the sub-treasury scheme, even against his own clear convictions, that a great majority of the nation disapprove of it.

He knows that he has nothing to lose in so doing, and he also knows that it is too late—that he has gone too far to retract—to gain any favor with the insulted people by abandoning it: that it would be obvious to them it was done tor self policy, had he have done it at this late period; so that "returning is as dangerous as going o'er."

Besides, his knowledge of mankind assures him that in politics, as in other matters, there are numbers in all communities who never reason or look into the real merits of any measure, and who are undecided but make up their decision of its utility solely from the zeal with which its advocates support it: admitting from their assurance in urging it that it must be right; and he has the shreweness to know that such unflinching adherence to this darling measure may secure, even yet, the approval of such wavering persons.

J. W. Dwinell has become editor of the Buffalonian. That paper has lost nothing of its spirit and interest by the change. It would be more creditable to that paper as an American publication if it would hold true American principles in regard to Canada affairs.

Mr. Van Buren holds the same judicious sentiments in relation to Canada which characterized his late proclamation on that subject.

Notice is hereby given that application will be made to the next Legislature for incorporation of a Company to build a railroad to connect the Palmyra and Jacksonburg railroad with the railroad from Tecumseh to Ypsilanti, commencing on the east side of the River Raisin at Tecumseh (sometimes called Brownville), on the Palmyra and Jacksonburg road, and intersect the Ypsilanti and Tecumseh road west of Macon, with all rights and privileges of said Company. Tecumseh Academical School. This School, formerly conducted by Mr. Perley Bills, will be resumed in the Court Room October 29th. E. R. Johnson, a recent graduate of Bowdoin College, Principal. The course of instruction will embrace Greek, Latin, German, French and Spanish languages; Natural, Intellectual and Moral Philosophy; Geometry, Trigonometry, Topography and Mathematics of Astronomy; Natural, Ancient and Modern History; Rhetoric, Geography, English Grammar, Elementary and Practical Arithmetic. Declamation, English and Latin Composition will receive a share of attention. The attention of the student will be particularly directed to English Orthography, Enunciation and Syntax.

The language and manners of the students will be critically observed and corrected; and discipline administered rather by appeal to the moral sensibilities than severe reprimand, withering reproaches, or corporal punishment.

No labor will be spared to dissipate the obscurity that seems incident to the pursuit of the classical student, to unite utility with pleasure, and to make the business of the scholar rather a pleasurable exercise than an irksome task. Terms of tuition: Reading and writing, $2.50; arithmetic and geography, $4.00; English grammar, history and rhetoric, $5.00; ancient and modern languages, philosophy, and higher classes of mathematics, $6.00.

ITALY'S GIFT.

The Columbus Statue Arrives on One of the Quarantined Steamers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The Italian transport Garigliano, bearing the Columbus statue, the gift of the Italians of New York to this city, arrived at quarantine Sunday afternoon. The monument is in the Garigliano's hold, packed in 170 parts. The Garigliano is commanded by Chevalier G. Ruggero, of the Italian navy, and on board is Maulio Garibaldi, of the royal Italian marine, the youngest son of Gen. Guiseppe Garibaldi, the hero of Italian liberty. The monument when put together will be 76 feet high. The 14-foot statue of Columbus stands upon a column of red granite 27½ feet high, which rests upon a large pedestal. The material of which the entire monument is composed was selected with a view to striking color effects. It will be erected in Central park, this city. Great preparations have been made for the reception of the monument — an event much looked forward to by the Italian residents of this city.

FOUND WATERY GRAVES.

Twenty-Six Lives Lost by the Sinking of a Lake Steamer.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 2.—The large freight steamer Western Reserve has been lost off Sable banks, near Deer Park, and of the twenty-seven persons on board only one has been saved. Six of them were passengers, one of the latter being Peter Minch, of Cleveland, O., the owner, who recently became a millionaire. The other passengers were the wife, son and daughter of Capt. Minch and Mrs. Mary Engleberry and her daughter Bertha, of Vermillion.

The Western Reserve was built by the Cleveland Shipbuilding Company and launched October 20, 1890. She was owned by the B. G. Minch estate and others of this city and was valued at $220,000 in Lloyd's Inland Register. The Western Reserve was 300 feet long and 41 feet beam. She was considered a thoroughly stanch and seaworthy boat.

IN MORE TROUBLE.

Leaders of the Strike at Homestead Arrested for Murder.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 3.—Again murder charges are made against the Homestead strikers. Five other warrants for murder were issued Friday, each charging the killing of J. W. Klein July 6. The defendants are Hugh O'Donnell, the Homestead labor leader; Hugh Ross, Matthew Foy, his son, William Foy, and Jack Clifford. O'Donnell, Clifford and Ross are already under $10,000 bail each on the charge of murdering T. F. Connor, a Pinkerton man, and Silas Wayne, a striker. Besides this O'Donnell is also under bail for $2,000 for aggravated riot and $1,000 for conspiracy. Ross is under the same bonds, and if O'Donnell and Ross are admitted to bail on this last charge both will be under $28,000 bonds.

Swept Overboard.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—S. C. Christiansen, a Danish steerage passenger of the steamer Island, was standing on the fore deck on August 24 when a heavy sea broke over the rail and threw him against the house under the bridge. He was probably stunned, as the wash of the wave carried him overboard and he was lost.

Government Receipts.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The government receipts during August aggregated $34,032,928, against $28,884,851 in August, 1891. Customs receipts aggregated $18,271,668, against $15,164,674 in August a year ago. Internal revenue receipts amounted to $14,063,459, against $12,501,829 in August, 1891.

Money in Circulation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The treasury department monthly circulation statement shows a net decrease in the circulation during August amounting to $2,092,741. The total circulation on the 1st was placed at $1,599,256,584, or a per capita of $24.32, against $1,506,131,133 on September 1, 1891.

The Public Debt.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The public debt statement issued yesterday shows the total debt to be $1,582,681,949; cash in the treasury, $242,543,969; debt less cash in the treasury, $828,074,075. Decrease during August, $2,254,573.

Crounse Resigns.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Crounse has formally tendered his resignation to the president.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

SLEPT NEARLY A YEAR.

Miss May White, the Michigan Schoolma'am, at Last Wakes Up.

May White, the Jackson county schoolma'am who has manifested such a desire to slumber that she has devoted most of her time the last year to sleep and has thereby puzzled the medical fraternity of the state, at last shows signs of returning consciousness. For a month past the stupor in which she has lain has grown less profound and she is now able to open her eyes and recognize her parents. For the first time in twelve months she sat up in bed and partook of solid food. Heretofore she has subsisted on liquor alone. The attending physician believes she is now on the road to recovery. When first attacked with her strange malady she weighed 148 pounds; now she weighs fifty-eight. Otherwise she seems in fair health, although her senses have grown dull and her memory is almost a blank.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy observers in different parts of the state for the week ended September 17 indicated that pneumonia, diphtheria and influenza increased, and inflammation of the kidneys, typho-malarial fever, cholera morbus and inflammation of the brain decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-three places, scarlet fever at thirty-nine, typhoid fever at sixty-two and measles at one place.

Left Wife and Baby.

After less than a year of married life Harold Jackson eloped from Caro with Miss Hazel Kirkland. Jackson came there from Indianapolis with his bride about six months ago and established an insurance and real estate office. He became infatuated with Miss Kirkland and the couple fled. A telegram was received from Jackson by his wife stating that he was bound for Montreal and would never return. Mrs. Jackson has a two-weeks-old infant to care for.

Michigan Library Association.

The following were elected officers of the Michigan Library association at the annual meeting in Lansing: President, H. M. Utely, Detroit; vice presidents, Celia F. Waldo, Jackson, and Mary A. Eddy, Coldwater; secretary, Fannie E. Parsons, Bay City; treasurer, Lucy Ball, Grand Rapids. It was decided to hold next year's meeting in Chicago during the session of the International Library association.

Detroit Is Safe.

Dr. C. Miller, president, and Mayor Pingree and Capt. Grummond, members of the Detroit board of health, returned from their tour of inspection of the Canadian quarantine stations, and reported that Detroit was in no danger so far as Canada was concerned, as no immigrant was allowed to pass through without being thoroughly inspected in disinfected.

Earnings of Michigan Roads.

Commissioner Whitman's statement gives the total earnings of the Michigan railway companies for June at $8,659,189, an increase of $978,974 over the earnings of June, 1891. The total earnings from January 1 to July 1, 1892, were $48,776,347. For the same period last year they were $42,667,528. This is an increase of 14.32 per cent.

A SAD DEATH.

A telegram was received here Tuesday, by the family, announcing the death of Lelma E. Stewart at Chicago. The following particulars appear in the Evening News of Tuesday, but whether they are correct cannot be known at present. It is a sad affair at best and the real cause is and will probably remain a mystery.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—L. E. Stewart said to be the son of a wealthy resident of Tecumseh, Mich., was found dead in Washington park, between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth streets, yesterday morning. In his pocket was a bottle containing morphine.

Some time ago he wrote to his father, H. L. Stewart, a capitalist, of Tecumseh, Mich., who is at present in Ocean Springs, Miss., asking him for $200, for the purpose of paying his debts and getting himself straight with the world once more. He received this money, and a short time afterword wrote his father again for an additional sum. His father refused this, on the ground that he had met with financial reverses and couldn't spare the money.

This increased the young man's despondency, and although offers of pecuniary assistance were made him by his friends here, he persisted in ending his life.

An incident occurred a year ago in Tecumseh which is thought to have a bearing on his act. He was riding one evening with a young lady in whom he was much interested when his horse became frightened and ran away. The young lady was thrown out and instantly killed. When Stewart was found at Washington Park, there was a diamond ring on his finger which belonged to the young lady. It is thought that his dispondency was due in some measure to his interest in the young lady. The inquest was held this morning at the morgue. C. P. B.

LATER

The following letter received yesterday by Mrs. Stewart explains many particulars, but leaves the affair still clouded in mystery. The firm of Van Vlissingen & Bro., were real estate brokers for whom Lelma was working at the time.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27th, 1892.

Mrs. H. L. Stewart, Tecumseh, Mich.

Dear Madam: We are in receipt of your telegram containing directions as to the disposition of the remains of your son, to which we replied by wire.

We found that Mr. C. L. Waring, with whom we had no previous acquaintance, but who informed us that his friendship for your family was a very intimate one, had partially made arrangements with Mr. Ralston, undertaker, and feeling that his acquaintance with your wishes would enable him to direct the details better than ourselves, we contented ourselves with carrying out your instructions as to the shipment of the remains.

They will be forwarded to you via the U. S. Express, over the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, by train leaving here at 11 p. m., today, and will arrive at Tecumseh between 11 a. m., and 12m., tomorrow, 28th inst.

We find it impossible to adequately express to you our sincere regret at your bereavement, and we can assure you that our entire force was surprised and shocked at the young man's untimely end.

He was very popular with us all, his prospects were bright, and his disposition was so uniformly sunny and cheerful, that the fact that he was embarassed and melancholy was not even suspected by us.

Very truly yours,

J. H. VAN VLISSINGEN & BRO.

In justice to the family we take occasion to correct some erroneous reports that have gained currency in regard to the matter. Dr. Stewart has not met with any financial reverses. He responded to the call of his son for money in every instance. The diamond ring on his finger was never the property of the young lady mentioned. The remains arrived yesterday noon, and the funeral obsequies will be held at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, at the family residence on Chicago Street. Dr. Stewart is in Mississippi and it will be impossible for him to reach home in time for the funeral. It is a most sad and shocking event, and the afflicted family will have the sympathy of our entire community in this awful visitation.

Local and Miscellaneous

What? When? Where? Answers next week.

Beautiful weather for the county fair this week.

Miss Marthena Hastings has gone to Shawano, Wis., to teach school there.

Peculiarly played political productions. Look out for time and place in our next issue.

Anderson & Co. have closed their Dundee store. They had a very successful season there.

A. D. Hall was the Tecumseh delegate to the Senatorial convention held at Dundee last Monday.

At the Republican convention held at Dundee on Monday, Geo. B. Horton was nominated for Senator.

David McNair attended the congressional convention at Monroe last Tuesday as delegate from Tecumseh.

Mr. and Mrs. V. B. Kennedy, of Hanover, were the guests of Mrs. M. C. Bryan from Saturday till Tuesday.

Persons who wish to pay their subscription in wood are requested to bring it along at once while the roads are good.

A social will be held soon, under the direction of the Baptist Young People. Watch these columns next week for particulars.

Rev. J. P. Varner, of Saginaw, new pastor of the M. E. church, Tecumseh, will preach his first sermon here next Sunday morning, Oct. 2d.

A peck or more of lime left in a cellar in an open keg will absorb an immense amount of moisture, which otherwise might form in mold on the walls.

The Lenawee County Pioneer society will hold their annual meeting at Britton on Tuesday, Oct. 11th. A good program is in preparation and a rousing meeting is expected.

The Annual renting of the Church pews in the M. E. church in Tecumseh, will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 12, 1892, at 2 o'clock, p. m., and continue afternoon and evening.

At the M. E. Conference for the Adrian district new appointments were made for Clinton and Tecumseh, Rev. D. H. Ramsdell and Rev. J. P. Varner. Elders. Pierce and Yager remain at Tipton and Ridgeway.

The County Fair is making a good record thus far during the week. Tuesday and yesterday surpassed the corresponding days of last year. The military parade occurs to-day and the political debate to-morrow.

Holloway is to be blessed with a new industry. Last week the capitalists of that vicinity subscribed enough money and took stock in the erection of a mammoth cheese factory. The site has been established, and work commenced.

"Alphabet suppers" are getting to be quite a craze. The young people of church societies arrange for an evening lunch the name of every article of which begins with the same letter. Each member is instructed to provide a portion of the feast, and forfeit is levied against delinquents. A "B" supper, for instance, would include bread, butter, bananas, beer, (possibly), beef, brick cheese, bologna, etc.

Dress Goods in all the new Novelties at ANDERSON & Co's.

Blissfield has a class for the study of the World's Fair.

Remember the benefit of the Library Association next Thursday evening.

The W. C. T. U. will meet during the month of October, at the home of Mrs. Jehiel Davidson.

Rev. J. P. Varner is the new M. E. minister who has been assigned to the Tecumseh charge.

Don't fail to come and see our new display of Dress Goods.
ANDERSON & Co.

The Union Gospel Temperance meeting, advertised for Saturday evening, Oct. 2d, has been deferred until Oct. 8.

There were no services at the M. E. church Sunday evening, as the pastor Rev. C. J. Perrin was absent at conference.

At the Congressional convention held at Monroe Tuesday, Congressman Gorman was renominated, and he will be elected.

The W. C. T. U. Social which was to have been held at Mrs. O. Q. Jones' on Friday of this week, has been postponed for one month.

Mrs. E. Swartout and Mrs. E. W. Hull and daughter, Florence, who have been visiting friends here returned to Toledo Saturday.

The widow of the late ex-governor C. M. Croswell is soon to be united in marriage to Thos. S. Merrill, a wealthy lumber dealer of Saginaw.

The monument to the memory of the late John K. Boies, at Hudson, will be one of the finest in the State, and will erected by Harrison, of Adrian.

The Greundler's dramatic recital at the Oper Thursday evening next for it of the Library Associatio there be a rousing house.

James H. Morrow received the nomination for senator at the Democratic convention held in Monroe last Tuesday. It will prove to be a wise and strong nomination.

The rains last week prepared the ground for fall plowing in good shape. Some farmers have already sown their wheat, but this week and next will probably be devoted by a majority of them to putting in the cereal.

A joint meeting of Beers Post and Relief Corps will take place Monday evening next, Oct. 6th. Musical and literary productions will be given. The members of the Post and Corps are earnestly requested to be present.

The annual national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, held this year at Washington, will be fully illustrated in the forthcoming number of Harper's Weekly. A front-page portrait of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid will be given in the same number.

A. W. Haight has been appointed state agent for the Guardian Assurance Co. This is a responsible position, carrying a good salary but Lon can fill it to a dot. He is in the upper part of the state now. He will probably make his headquarters in Tecumseh.

Special trains will run to the Hillsdale Fair on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. Half fare rates on those three days. Persons from this vicinity can attend the fair and return the same day, as the special trains on the main line will connect with the early and late trains on the Jackson Branch.

The state fair was a financial failure. The amount on the wrong side of the ledger runs up to over $5,000, making the total indebtedness of the association something over $19,000. Premiums are announced to be paid in full, however, although it will be six months before it is done.

The next regular meeting of the Macon Prohibition Club will be held at the home of Isaiah Hendershot on Wednesday Eve. Oct. 5th. All who are in sympathy with Prohibition are cordially invited. A literary program consisting of address, papers, select reading, elocution, song, etc., will be rendered. Come out and have a good time.

Earl W. Lenardson and Miss Nellie Easterly were married at the residence of the bride's father, Jas. Easterly, in the village of Milan, on Wednesday, Sept. 21st., at 4 o'clock p. m., in the presence of a few of the near relatives. The happy twain will take up their residence in Britton. The bride's friends will be glad to welcome her back. Both groom and bride will receive the congratulations of all and the HERALD begs leave to add its own good words to the rest.

The Democratic legislative convention for the first district was held in Tecumseh last Thursday. Every town in the district was represented by a full delegation. Dr. Todd was chosen chairman and served both as temporary and permanent President. Harry Stearns acted as temporary Secretary, and Dr. Williams as permanent Secretary. The contest was quite warm between Horace Holdridge and C. S. Burroughs for the nomination. The former received 45 votes and the latter 33, and Mr. Holdridge was then declared the nominee. Mr. Burroughs received a strong support from those best acquainted with him, but he and they will support Mr. Holdridge cordially. The latter will be elected and will make an excellent representative. The legislative committee for the ensuing year are Dr. Williams, of Adrian, David McNair, Tecumseh, and C. S. Burroughs, Clinton,

The surveyors for Caldwell's County Atlas are now at work in this vicinity and will be here about two weeks.

Four coaches on the Jackson train this morning conveyed about eight car loads of people to the County Fair.

Nancy Hanks has knocked the record end ways again. She trotted a mile yesterday at Terre Haute, Ind., in 2:04.

The Greundler's will give a dramatic recital next Thursday evening, for the benefit of the Library Association. Everybody should go.

Rev. James Gorton has accepted a call from the Universalist church of Tecumseh and will begin his duties on Sunday, Oct. 9th.

The Young Ladies' missionary society of the Presbyterian church, will hold its October meeting in the Lecture room of the church next Sunday afternoon, Oct. 2d. at half past three o'clock. All Ladies are invited.

S. H. Linn, of Ridgeway, brought to our office yesterday four potatoes, weighing five pounds. They are the Irish Belle variety and were planted on the 23d. day of June. They would be prize potatoes if taken to the fair.

The addition to the Globe Mill is now fully completed and the stones for grinding feed are in running order. The farmers can get their feed ground on any day in the week and at any hour of the day. Read Mr. Hayden's card on the first page for full particulars.

Frank A. Dean, who is one of the best stump orators in Michigan and one of the best posted men on the tariff issue will address the people of Tecumseh, on Tuesday evening next at the Opera House. People of all parties should attend, for they will hear the great tariff question ably discussed.

Valuable documents may sometimes be found in the waste paper purchased by the Palmyra paper mill. A few days ago L. E. Mitchell found two old curiosities in the shape of a land grant, issued on parchment by President John Adams, in 1800, to Richard Coleman, of Virginia, and another one issued by President VanBuren, in 1840, to George C. Miller, of Mississippi.

Mr. W. H. Chisholm's Comedy company played the farce comedy entitled, "Our Irish Neighbors," at the opera house last evening. It is no exaggeration to say that the play is a literal hurricane of fun. Every member of the troup is a skilled performer. The ludicrous situations, fine music, artistic dancing a... handsome girls fomr, a program that has rarely been equalled in this town. They had a good house, but if they will visit us again, standing room only will be at a premium.

We took a business trip down into Macon last Friday, and had the pleasure of taking dinner and supper at Thos. Murphy's. Tommy began his business life 20 years ago as a farm hand on Judge Stacy's farm. In five years he laid up enough money to buy a home in Macon. Now he has 160 acres, with good buildings, well stocked, without a dollar of indebtedness and with money out at interest. He is now serving his second year as town treasurer. His success shows what industry, integrity and economy can accomplish from a very humble beginning.

The Rev. J. M. Barkley formerly State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., for Michigan and at present Pastor of the third Ave. Presbyterian Church of Detroit, has an interesting lecture on his experience for a year as a union man in the rebel army. This lecture which has been highly spoken of by those who have heard it, will be delivered next Tuesday night Oct. 4th, at 8 o'clock in the Presbyterian Church, under the auspices and for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. Mr. Barkley is a former resident of North Carolina. Tickets 25 cents, to be had of members of C. E. Society.

"Who do you think will be United States senator in case the Democrats control the legislature?" was asked of Game Warden Hampton in his recent visit to this city. "It looks to me very much like Winans. Yaple could have it if he wanted it, but he has peremptorily declined. The farmers will be strong enough to prevent the election of any man they see fit to defeat, and I apprehend that a good many little booms will collapse. Winans would be most acceptable to both the Democratic and farmer element, and that is why I think he has the inside track." Does this explain why he declined to be a candidate for governor again?—Lansing Republican.

—It is poor economy to put off attending a Normal or Collage because of hard times. It would be equally wise to put off planting corn because of the expense of the seed. In gaining an education, time lost now is lost forever. The expense of attending some of our excellent higher institutions, such as the Fayette Normal University, of Fayette, O., is now so low that any one may find a way to meet it. Do not wait until another year. Attend now. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The Acme of Pressure on the cotton and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past twelve years. Indeed and no wonder demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgments that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents).

The Delicate Organism of Woman suffers both many peculiar ailments and unfortunate ills. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won the title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue free, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except Belt), and credit $3 on the price of new one. Remember the Electric Foot Warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

DEATH'S HARVEST.

Three Men Prominent in Their Pursuits Pass Away.

P. S. Gilmore, the Famous Bandmaster, Gen. James W. Husted, the Noted Politician, and Judge S. D. Puterbaugh, the Jurist, Are Dead.

GILMORE DIES SUDDENLY.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the leader of Gilmore's band, died at the Lindell hotel at 6:45 o'clock Saturday night. Mr. Gilmore was seized with a violent attack of cramps about 3 a. m. Dr. H. T. Todd was summoned. He found his patient suffering from what appeared to be a very severe bilious attack. He called in for conference three other physicians. Under their treatment Mr. Gilmore rallied and throughout the day seemed to be improving. At 1 o'clock p. m. he suffered a relapse, however, and the physicians gave up all hope of his recovery. He sank rapidly, and two priests were summoned to administer the last sacrament. Shortly afterwards he became unconscious, and at 6:45 death came to the sufferer's relief.

Patrick S. Gilmore was born near Dublin, Ireland, December 28, 1829. He connected himself with military bands at the age of 15, and after having been in command of an English band went to Salem, Mass., where he led a brass band. After this he went to Boston, where he organized "Gilmore's band," with which he made extensive tours. In 1861 he accompanied the Twenty-fourth Massachusetts regiment to the field and in 1863 was placed in charge of all the bands in the department of Louisiana by Gen. Banks. He organized monster concerts in this country and was the projector of the great "Peace Jubilees" held in Boston in 1869 and 1872. In 1878 he made an European tour with his band. He was bandmaster of the Twenty-second regiment of New York. He composed many marches and songs.

DEATH OF GEN. HUSTED.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Gen. James W. Husted died at his residence here at 7:30 p. m. Sunday. At his deathbed there were gathered Dr. Mason, the attending physician, Gen. Husted's wife and sons, Thomas, William and J. W. Husted, Jr., and his two daughters, Mrs. Frederick Shedd and Miss Husted.

Gen. Husted was born at Bedford, Westchester county, N. Y., on October 31, 1833. He was graduated from Yale college in 1854, one of his schoolmates being Dr. Chauncey M. Depew. He was admitted to the bar in 1857. He held many public offices and had the longest legislative service of any man in the history of the state—nearly eighteen years. He also had the distinction of having been speaker of the house of the legislature more times than any other man, having been speaker six times. For over thirty years Gen. Husted had been in active political life. He became a member of the republican party in 1859 and attended its national conventions as a delegate in 1876, 1880, 1884 and 1892. The deceased had also taken active interest in the national guard of the state, being a member of the organization and serving as judge advocate of the Seventh brigade and major general of the Fifth division. Gen. Husted was a distinguished member of the masonic fraternity and once held the position of grand master of that body. He was a thirty-third degree man.

JUDGE PUTERBAUGH.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 26.—Judge Sabin D. Puterbaugh, the eminent jurist, died Sunday morning after a brief illness. He was the author of "Puterbaugh's Pleadings and Practice," which was compiled while he was living in Chicago. This work is recognized as one of the best authorities in the practice of law. He was employed by the state of Michigan to revise the statutes of the state, and was accounted one of the best legal minds in the country.

ROBBED A BANK.

The Daring Exploit of Several Desperadoes at Roslyn, Wash.

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 26.—Three unmasked highwaymen rode into the coal-mining town of Roslyn, entered R. E. Snipe's bank, and while two of them covered the cashier, bookkeeper and two citizens with revolvers, the third emptied the contents of the safe, amounting to $10,000, into a sack. Remounting, they rode out of town. It was pay day at Roslyn, and $40,000 had been sent from Tacoma in the morning. The robbers probably supposed the money was placed in the bank, though it was taken to the company's office.

Sixty Houses Burned.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Sept. 26.—Fire to-night destroyed the town on the Northumberland coast in Kent county, has begun and is destroyed by fire. Sixty houses were burned. Not a store is left in the village, and the half-dozen hotels are all wiped out. The loss will be [illegible] about $125,000. The insurance [illegible] and far short of this amount.

Say the Orange Crop Is Short.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 24.—Experts who have been to Florida to examine the orange situation for local fruit houses say the crop is quite short, though fairly good. Bartow is the only county in the state with a full crop, and orchards there are loaded down.

Proclaimed a Holiday.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 23.—Gov. Fifer has issued a proclamation declaring October 21 a holiday, and calling upon all citizens to join in honoring the memory of Columbus and in celebrating his great discovery.

Another Record Smashed.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 24.—The world's record for double team (2:13) was lowered here yesterday to 2:12¼ by the famous trotters Belle Hamlin and Honest George.

WEAVER GIVES UP.

He Says the Privilege of Free Speech Does Not Exist in Georgia.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 24.—Gen. Weaver refused to make a speech here Friday, although 5,000 people had assembled to hear him. He issued instead the following address to the people of the nation:

"ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 23.—To Mr. R. D. Irwin, Chairman State Committee, People's Party, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Sir: At the urgent request of your committee I entered this state on the 20th inst. for the purpose of addressing the people of Georgia upon the political situation and the issues involved in the present national campaign. The places named for said meetings were: Waycross, Albany, Columbus, Macon, Atlanta, Madison, Augusta and Elberton. I find the spirit of organized rowdyism at some of the points visited within the state so great as to render it inadvisable for me to attempt to fill the engagements at the points not already reached. Personal indignity was threatened at Waycross, but was suppressed by the attendance of a large number of our friends and the careful management of Mr. Reed, the local chairman.

"At Albany we met a howling mob which refused to accord us a respectful and uninterrupted hearing. Our meeting at Columbus was a grand success, thanks to the superior management of Mr. C. J. Thornton. About 3,000 people attended this meeting and gave us respectful and enthusiastic attention.

"At Macon the conduct of the mob which greeted our advent into that city was simply disgraceful beyond description. Rotten eggs were thrown prior to the introduction of the speaker, one of which struck Mrs. Weaver on the head. Eggs were thrown repeatedly during the continuance of the mob; turbulent crowds continued to howl and hoot until past midnight.

"At Atlanta a similar crowd of rowdies gathered at the point of meeting, bent on tumult and disorder. Learning of this, Mrs. Lease and myself refused to appear either in the forenoon or in the evening. I am convinced that similar treatment awaits us at the points not visited. I decline to meet such appointments. The members of our party, although apparently largely in the majority in the state, are unable to secure for us a peaceful and respectful hearing.

"I wish to call especial attention to the fact that the disorder is almost exclusively confined to young roughs who infest the towns and who are incited to violence by persons who keep in the background. The country people are uniformly respectful and anxious to hear. It is especially worthy of note that the disorderly conduct does not proceed from the confederate soldiers, who are manly almost without exception in their conduct and generally in sympathy with our movement. The police force at the disorderly points named made no effort, so far as is known, to preserve good order. In some instances they gave open countenance to the tumult. I think it is but fair to say that many good people who are in sympathy with the people's party openly denounce these outrages, but they seem powerless to assert themselves. The mayor of Waycross made every effort to protect our meeting at that point.

MONTEREY, Mexico, Sept. 24.—C. C. Hogue, an American merchant of this city, has been expelled from the republic for criticising the administration of President Diaz.

DESERVING PRAISE.

We desire to say to our citizens that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. J. J. Orr, druggist.

WHEN HORACE USED TO SING.

Don't you remember Horace Brown?
Our singing master—'course you do,
There wasn't a man in all the town
Could pitch a tune an' care it thro'
Like Horace. Every Sunday night
He'd stand and make the old church ring,
It helped the parson out a sight
When Horace used to sing.

His voice was tenor—so they said—
I've never heard another like it,
An' every hymn the parson read,
No matter what the tune—he'd strike it.
"Greenville," "Boylston" or "Pleyel's Hymn,"
He'd sing in praise unto his king,
An' many an eye with tears was dim
When Horace used to sing.

He was a curis feller, too;
Not like the most of men you meet;
Maybe he wouldn't speak to you
If you met him on the street.
Sometimes. But, Lor', that was his way,
He wasn't built like most human things,
Somehow that feelin' didn't stay
When he began to sing.

'Tis twenty years since I've been home,
And things has changed a sight somehow;
I couldn't rest, so thought I'd come
An' see how the old town looked now.
I've seen the old [illegible]
The pillar where the ivies cling,
An' climbed the narrer gallery stair
Where Horace used to sing.

It almost seemed that he must be
Within the place he loved so well;
An' those old tunes came back to me
On which his sweet voice rose an' fell.
I've hearn them foreign fellers—ar,
An' split their throats, but couldn't bring
The tears that come in days of yore
When Horace used to sing.

He's dead, you say—that voice is lost?
I don't believe it—never will.
In that fair land with streets embossed
In shining gold, he's singin' still.
He's leadin' now an angel choir
An' makes the courts of Heaven ring,
An' some day when I get up higher
I'll hear old Horace sing.

A WILD HOG TRAP.

How Two Boys Made Money to See the Centennial.

Yesterday I heard one farm boy say to another: "Come and see my two calves. I'm going to keep them till they're two-year-old steers, and then sell them and go to the Columbian exposition on the money. They'll bring fifty dollars by that time."

"But I've got a colt that'll bring seventy-five by that time," rejoined his companion, triumphantly.

"Maybe," replied the first lad, composedly. "But I tell you, Frank, there's a good deal more risk on colts than on steers."

Their earnestness vividly recalled to me a time, fifteen years ago, when I was a boy of sixteen, and lived in the Arkansas "backwoods." I was making similar plans to visit the centennial exhibition of 1876 at Philadelphia.

A young neighbor, Benton Arbuckle by name, was equally desirous of attending the exhibition; but, like myself, he was in painful doubt where the dollars were to come from for railway fares, for a new suit of clothes and for other necessary matters.

Often we raised a little money by gathering pecan nuts in the woods and selling them at the store two miles away; but the pecan crop was light that year, and our hopes suffered blight with it. We knew that seventy dollars apiece was the least possible sum that would suffice to transport us to Philadelphia and return us to our native country. The case looked hopeless.

We studied hard to think of some other means. Wild turkeys were getting scarce in the woods. Formerly a good many had been shot and marketed every fall. Deer, too, were far from plenty.

After a careful canvass of the situation, Benton and I decided that our only chance to raise money lay in the wild hog, which were still to be found in considerable numbers in the river-bottoms in our part of the state.

These wild hogs are descended from ordinary swine brought into the country by the earlier settlers. In several generations of wildness they have developed the characteristics of the wild hogs of the old world. They run swiftly through the brush upon the slightest alarm, and are always difficult to approach.

Shooting is not the best method of hunting wild hogs, for unless shot through a vital part they squeal frightfully, and often run a long distance. The squealing may frighten the drove away, and cause them to desert the locality for another tract of forest.

My companion and I proposed to trap them, and so far as possible to conduct a still hunt. We intended to make bacon, for which we were reasonably sure of obtaining eight cents a pound. We fitted up a disused log-shanty as a smoke-house, and arranged to bring home the carcasses on mules from our traps.

Benton, who had more time than I, spent several days in looking about for a good place in which to set a trap, and chose one upon Sugar creek. At a point where a high bank had been washed out we set stakes and built a strong corral eight feet high, in such a way that the bank formed one side of the inclosure, and the fence skirting the margin of the stream formed the other sides.

The yard thus formed included a space fifty or sixty feet across, which on one side was overhung by a bank from twelve to fifteen feet in height. The earth had been cut away by freshets, so that the roots of the brushwood above hung down in a straggling fringe.

A trap gate was constructed to rise and fall between posts on each side of an opening five feet wide. To spring the gate a line was attached to it, which ran across to our hiding place on the other side of the stream.

We did the work very quietly, for we heard hogs moving about in the swamp. Carefully removing all the chips, we masked the corral and the gate with brush, causing it to look like a thicket.

For bait we had bought four bushels of corn on the cob. This we broke into short pieces, which we strewed on trails leading to the trap. We also gathered several bushels of acorns, and these and the corn trails were sown to a distance of half a mile in three directions—all leading to a generous heap of the provender inside.

We laid these trails very early the morning after the trap was completed. We were to take turns watching, day [illegible] to watch the trap the first day, and I went home. We hoped to capture at least one hog every day.

Before eleven o'clock that forenoon Benton appeared at our house, very hot and much out of breath from running. He could hardly speak, and wasted no words.

"Pulled the string on five!" he gasped. "Get knife and mule and gun, and come quick! They are foamin' round awfully! Guess we shall have to shoot 'em! Hurry! hurry!"

In five minutes I was on the way, urging my mule to the top of his speed. Benton got, his own mule and gun and overtook me.

We approached the corral from the opposite side of the creek, and securing the mules on that side, waded [illegible] and peered into the trap.

Sure enough, there were five porkers! Evidently they had calmed down a little, for they grunted softly as they devoured the remains of the heap of acorns. But scenting us, or sighting us through chinks in the fence, they began to dash around, springing up the sides of the corral so fiercely that we saw plainly it would be altogether unsafe to enter the inclosure before shooting them. There was an old boar in the group. They were yearlings and two-year-olds, apparently, weighing from a hundred to two hundred pounds each. From running in the swamp they were all nearly as black as bears.

We loaded our guns with ball, and, taking aim between the posts, shot the pigs one by one. All five came down, squealing terrifically.

I had never dressed a hog before, but we both knew that it was necessary to bleed them immediately. Laying down our guns, we climbed into the pen, got out our knives and proceeded to this least pleasant portion of the business.

The squealing was frightful. We had got to the third victim only when we became suddenly aware of a commotion in the woods outside.

"Bill!" cried Benton, straightening up to listen, "there's a whole drove a-coming, old boars and all! They're coming to the rescue, just as they do when a bear tackles a hog in the swamp!"

Above the outcry which the suffering porkers inside the pen were raising we could now plainly hear the barking and roaring of the approaching drove. It was a terrible noise; the underbrush cracked as if a forest fire were running through it.

"Whew! You don't suppose they can break in here, do you?" exclaimed Benton, turning pale.

"That's more than I know," said I. "But if they do break in, I shall break out pretty quick!"

We had scarcely more than uttered the words when the drove came foaming up the creek to the very gate of the trap. They stopped an instant, an old boar barking like a bulldog, and then all scurried around the fence on the creek side, through mud and water. Here they suddenly stopped short again, as if to locate their distressed brethren, then dashed around the north end of the corral and up the high bank a little way above.

Again finding themselves wrong, they turned and came dashing along the top of the bank, on the land side of the pen; and then they all charged headlong down over the bank into the corral.

Before the first hog had struck the ground inside the pen I was well on my way to the top of the corral fence, and Benton had climbed a small oak tree that stood within the inclosure.

"Great jingo!" cried Benton from the tree. "Isn't that old tusker a big one? See the foam fly! Bill, there's more than twenty of them! Will the fence stop 'em?"

"I think it will," I said. "Are you all safe?"

"I reckon I am," he answered. Then he looked down at the wild hogs foaming around the base of his small tree, snapping their jaws; and my sense of humor made me laugh in spite of myself.

However, I presently did better for Benton than laugh at him. I slipped down on the outer side of the pen, and getting a strong pole, pushed it over the top of the corral into the oak where he was roosting, and by the aid of this pole he was able to get to the fence.

Now was our time. We loaded our guns and opened fire on the drove inside, disabling the old boar first of all.

For half an hour the unearthly din of shooting and squealing kept up. Including the five which Benton had snared at first, there were now twenty-four hogs in the trap. Several of them were old settlers, and quite fat and heavy.

We worked fast and hard during the rest of the day and most of the night to secure the pork. It made a fine lot of bacon, and although we never met with any success afterwards, we went to the centennial mainly on the product of our hog trap.—A. J. Towle, in Youth's Companion.

A New Use for Kangaroos.

A new branch of the morocco business in this country has been the tanning and preparing of kangaroo skins. Some ten years ago kangaroos were one of the pests of Australia. The Australians were at their wits' end to devise ways of getting rid of them. They hunted and shot kangaroos, but two seemed to spring up where one was killed. Some bright genius, as an experiment, sent a small consignment of skins to this country. They were tanned, and found a ready market. More were called for. Kangaroo-skin became fashionable, and it is said that the factories of America now use one million kangaroo-skins yearly. The price of the skins in Australia has gone up from twenty-five cents to a dollar a pound.—Harper's Young People.

—Her Choice.—"Won't you come for a row, auntie?" "No, thank you, dear; awkward pura is very good for young people, but I prefer to remain on terra [illegible]"

THE OLD VETERANS.

Close of the Twenty-Sixth Annual Encampment.

Capt. A. G. Weissert, of Wisconsin, Chosen as Commander in Chief—Resolutions Adopted—The Union Veterans Union.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The Grand Army of the Republic closed its twenty-sixth annual encampment yesterday. Capt. A. G. Weissert, of Wisconsin, was elected as commander in chief; Comrade R. H. Warfield, of San Francisco, senior vice commander; Hoter B. Avery, of Delaware; junior vice commander; surgeon general, W. C. Weyl, of Danbury, Conn.; chaplain in chief, D. B. Lowell, of Kansas.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Among the resolutions adopted were the following:

Recommending that the commander in chief issue a circular requesting teachers in all schools to set apart one day of each school year for inculcating lessons of patriotism.

Asking congress to pass a law giving the same right of precedence in appointment to all honorably discharged soldiers that is now given by law to soldiers that were discharged for disabilities, and recommending that the edition of the official records of the rebellion published by congress be increased from 11,000 to 50,000.

Commending the order of Commander in Chief Palmer forbidding any Grand Army of the Republic post to march under the confederate flag.

Authorizing the commander in chief to issue a circular commending the Veterans' Protective association bureau of information in connection with the world's fair in case he shall find it worthy.

Declaring it to be inexpedient for the national encampment Grand Army of the Republic to express an opinion on the subject of opening the world's fair on Sunday.

Favoring the establishment of a soldiers' home in the Marine hospital building at New Orleans.

Requesting that the census of veterans of the war and their post office addresses be published immediately.

Asking congress to provide for the erection of a monument to the private soldiers of the army.

Asking the secretary of war to provide a flagstaff at Fort Sumter upon which the national flag shall float the same as at all government forts.

Advising the council of administration to call the meeting of the next annual encampment not later than the first week in September, 1893.

NEW OFFICERS INSTALLED.

Having exhausted the business of encampment, the installation of officers for the ensuing year took place, Comrade Beath, of Pennsylvania, the ranking past commander in chief, administering the obligation to the officers-elect. After the new commander in chief had been installed, he declared the twenty-sixth annual encampment Grand Army of the Republic adjourned sine die.

SKETCH OF CAPT. WEISSERT.

The new commander in chief was born August 7, 1844, at Canton, Stark county, O., and removed to Wisconsin in 1849. He graduated at the high school at Racine and the university of Michigan, the last-named conferring the degree of LL. B. He enlisted early in September, 1861, in the Eighth Wisconsin (Live Eagle) regiment volunteer infantry, and participated in all the many battles of that regiment up to the time of his discharge, serving over four years. He was brevetted for meritorious conduct in battle, and was severely wounded at the battle of Nashville, Tenn. His wounds have never healed. They are constantly open and at times very painful, the bullet still remaining in his leg. Seventy surgeons have operated on his wound or been consulted in relation thereto. He joined the grand army in 1866, and is a member of E. B. Walcott post, Milwaukee. He attends all the meetings when at home and takes an active interest in all its affairs, has represented his post and department at numerous state and national encampments, was elected department commander of the department of Wisconsin in 1885 and unanimously reelected to succeed himself in 1889, but after his election as senior vice commander in general Milwaukee he resigned the commandership, believing that the honors should go round. He is a member of the legal profession and has a large practice.

UNION VETERANS UNION.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The encampment of the Union Veterans' union yesterday in Harris' theater was well attended and was specially marked by the cordial cooperation manifest between the U. V. U. and the Woman's Veteran Relief union. Gen. Roberts, commander of the department of Massachusetts, invited the union to hold its next annual encampment at Boston, and the invitation was accepted by a unanimous vote.

POISONED BY DRINKING MILK.

Twenty-Three Persons in Cincinnati in a Serious Condition.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 24.—The health department was notified Friday night that about forty persons in the different parts of the city were suffering from symptoms of cholera. Health Officer Prendergast investigated and found the persons suffering from poisoning due to the drinking of milk. About noon and in the afternoon a number of persons who drank milk were seized with cramps and vomiting. Physicians were sent for and found them in a serious condition. They at once pronounced them suffering from poisoning due to drinking milk. All those seen said the milk was of a bluish white, with a bitter taste. An investigation is to be made of the milk and of the dairies whence it came.

Refused Transportation to America.

QUEENSTOWN, Sept. 24.—In consequence of an order issued by the United States authorities declaring that no second-class passengers would be allowed to land from trans-Atlantic steamers unless they could show that they were United States citizens or had residences in the United States, the Cunard line steamer Cephalonia, from Liverpool for Boston, put forty passengers ashore at Liverpool.

Lived Over a Century.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Elizabeth Stanton died at her home in Patton township, this county, yesterday, aged 117 years. Her maiden name was Elizabeth Jamison and she was born in the spring of 1775 in Lancaster county, this state. Her age is beyond question.

Killed His Father.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 24.—Robert Stratton quarreled with his son Robert over a set of harness at their home in Graves county, and the two came to blows. The father drew a knife and the son grasped a hoe and hit him on the head, killing him.

GET THE BEST

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as everything else! By the universal satisfaction it has given, and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption has proven itself unequalled for Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Chest. Do not experiment with any unheard of or untried article which you are told is "as good as Dr. Fay's," for its equal does not exist, but be sure to get only Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Sold by all druggists, 50c., $1.00 and $5.00. Prepared only by Dr. O. J. Fay & Co., Chemists, Carleton, Mich.

FREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION.

The political campaign brings the tariff again to the front. But, after all, the strongest free traders believe in protection to the home, the family, the health. There are many ways of doing the latter, but if one is bilious, dull, poor in appetite, with headache, heaviness and lack of energy, there is no better way than to use a few bottles of Parmelee's Mannrake and Dandelion Bitters. They will improve your appetite, aid digestion and brace you up generally. Only 25 cents a large bottle. Sold by dealers.

A PILE OF MONEY WASTED.

People have wasted piles of money trying to cure Piles. A cheaper and surer way is to buy a box of Parmelee's Pile Suppositories for 50 cents, and see what they will do. You can get your money back if they do not benefit you. The proprietors are that sure of them. Sold by dealers.

WHEN YOUR STOCK IS SICK

Use Parmelee's Condition Powders. They are acknowledged the best by all who have used them. Full pound 25 cents. Sold by dealers.

BURNING PETROLEUM AT OIL CITY

Wrought terrible havoc to life and property. Yet Petroleum is one of nature's great natural remedies. It enters very largely into Parmelee's Household Ointment, which is positively guaranteed to cure ulcers, old sores, erysipelas, salt rheum, scratches on horses, hard or cracked hoofs and foot rot in sheep. Sold everywhere and used by every one who knows anything about it.

LOOK OUT FOR THAT FALL COUGH.

Do not allow it to become settled on you for the winter. It will prove a serious matter if you do. Stop it now. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will surely do this. It is guaranteed to. Compare the size of the Hamilton Cough Balsam bottle with other Cough remedies of the same price.

THE CHEAPEST IS NOT ALWAYS THE BEST.

But in the case of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla the two features seem to go together. It is as strong, as effective, as certain in its action, as positive in its cures as any higher priced article of similar nature in the market to-day. It sells for only 50 cents a bottle. Ask for Parmelee's and be sure you get Parmelee's.

A common cold should not be neglected. Downs' Elixir will cure it.

"Pretty hard sledding"—washing without Pearline. Whatever you do is done "by the hardest"—the hardest of work, and the hardest of wear. Pearline makes washing easy—easy for the washer, easy for the things washed. It is easy to see why millions are using it; if it were harmful or inefficient, it would be hard to get it used.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 579 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

ACHE

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., New York.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

She: How angrily those little waves dash against the boat! They seem to be clamoring for something. He: They are; but they won't get it if I can hold on to it.

Constipation is caused by loss of the peristaltic action of the bowels. Hood's Pills restore this action and invigorate the liver.

Joseph Ruby, of Columbia, Pa., suffered from birth with scrofula humor, till he was perfectly cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

When man pictures a heaven for himself he always has own mansion right in the center of it.

Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Most people need to use it.

Mrs. Corey was quite sick last Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Ella Rose returned from Detroit Monday night.

George Freese spent the first of the week in Chicago.

Mrs. McMaster made a business trip to Toledo Tuesday.

Rev. and Mrs. Stalker returned Wednesday for a few days.

Morning service was held at St. Dominic's church last Sunday.

James Clark, of Milford, visited at Will Dewey's the first of the week.

Mrs. E. VanDeMark is in Adrian this week, the guest of Mrs. M. J. Mickly.

Irv. Kennedy and George Adamson, of Tecumseh, were in town Tuesday.

C. S. Burroughs and wife went to Ann Arbor Monday, returning Tuesday.

Rev. A. W. Stalker has been assigned to the Preston M. E. Church at Detroit.

Lee Conklin and wife, of Hillsdale, came to attend the funeral of Mrs. Calhoun.

James Higgins and family left here Tuesday for Weston, where they will live.

George Ulrich and wife have left Clinton to make Adrian their future home.

Philip Kehoe attended the Democratic Senatorial Convention at Monroe Tuesday.

F. D. Lancaster and wife and C. S. Burroughs and family are at the County Fair to-day.

Daniel O'Reilly attended the Democratic congressional convention at Monroe Tuesday.

Mrs. Josephine Cook left here Tuesday for a visit with friends at Olivet and Battle Creek.

The regular meeting of Clinton Chapter O. E. S. will be held Wednesday evening, October 5th.

E. R. Smith went to Adrian Monday; also attended the Congressional Convention at Monroe Tuesday.

The Republicans will have a pole-raising and a speech in the evening by Hon. Jas. O'Donnell Saturday, Oct. 1st.

George Kelly came over from Wheatland last Saturday on a bicycle to visit his brother, Alfred Kelly. He returned Monday.

Mrs. Calhoun, whose sickness was referred to last week, died Tuesday afternoon and the funeral is held to-day at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Ruel Mills, Miss Vesta Mills and Mr. Crofoot, of Saline, visited at E. R. Smith's and L. W. Kimball's Saturday and Sunday.

The regular meetings of the Masonic bodies will be held next week, beginning with the Blue Lodge Saturday evening, Oct. 1st.

W. W. Hess is at the Lenawee County Fair this week exhibiting his hay and grain slings. Will Burton is at the Ann Arbor Fair for the same purpose.

Rev. Reeves commences a short course of lectures next Sunday evening. The subject of the first one will be "The Spiritual World; What is It, and Where is It?"

Water was struck at a depth of about 100 feet on E. R. Smith's lot one day last week. There is a plentiful supply, the water coming to within a few feet of the surface.

Nelson Gardner and wife have sold their household goods and will leave for Dakota about the middle of next month, in the hope that the change of climate will benefit Mrs. Gardner's health.

We understand that Tobias Mudgett, now living in Tecumseh, was seriously injured at Moscow last Thursday by being thrown from a flat car while the train was motion. He struck on his feet, injuring both ankles badly.

Lecture Course tickets are on sale by VanTuyle & Silvers, Smith, Richmond & Co., Bainbridge & Hause, and at the woolen mill office. If 400 tickets are sold by Oct. 1st the course is assured. If not, no further effort will be made. Price of season tickets $1.00, limited to 400.

W. S. Whittelsey has sold his business in Ypsilanti and expects to start in about three weeks for New Mexico to remain during the winter for his health. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Whittelsey, their children remaining at E. W. Freese's during the winter.

A. L. Smith's mustang indulged in its usual Saturday matinee last week. This time it occurred on Tecumseh street near the M. E. Church. The usual amount of kicking and plunging was gone through with, when he ran into F. D. Lancaster's yard, where he threw himself and was held until unharnessed. No one was injured.

The death of Mr. Samuel Kriedler which occurred Thursday at 5 o'clock p. m., was very unexpected to nearly everyone, as his sickness was of such short duration. He was taken ill the first of the week with erysipelas and grew worse rapidly until the end came. He leaves a wife, three daughters and a son. The funeral was held Saturday at 2 p. m.

School-Census Taker—Many children in this district?

Citizen—Great many; have you got to count 'em?

School Census Taker—That's what I'm here for.

Citizen—Well, just hang around a little while, I'm going to chop down a tree.

"Ethel," said the young man, with a break in his voice, "it comes hard, but I think it best that we should part. I did not know the dread circumstance or I should never have proposed. Now that the terrible fact is out, now that I know you play the piano and paint in water colors, let us part. Sadly, may be, but not in wrath.

Rally Around Our Standard.

Air—A Thousand Years.

Lift up your heads, desponding freemen
Fling out the flag, and shout with glee
He, who unfurls the people's, banner,
Says it shall wave till we are free.
CHORUS:
Then rally around our glorious standard,
Shout for our leader, brave and bold;
This is the morn, whose early twilight,
Jefferson saw in times of old.

What if the clouds some dreary morning
Hide the blue sky, which should appear?
Soon the bright sun will tint them crimson
Banishing doubt and bringing cheer.
CHORUS:

Blot out, at once, our war taxation,
Wipe out the robber tariff now!
This is our party's proclamation
This is our leader's pledge and vow.
CHORUS:

Fight for the man, ye toiling millions,
Who bares his breast to fight for you,
That man, who, like Hickory Jackson,
Fights for the right, the just and true.
CHORUS:

School Sketches.

William Hatch, of Macon, was a visitor at the High School on Monday morning.

Mary Brown bade the Tecumseh high school good bye on Friday last. She removes to Adrian with her people and will resume her studies there. Tecumseh loses a faithful student, who has hosts of friends, at Adrian's gain.

The large physiology class necessitates two divisions.

Eighty-six pupils in the high school study Algebra in five classes, while seventy-eight are in the five Latin classes.

Every seat in the high school is full and extra desks and chairs have been brought into use.

That first half hour is devoted to music—oh, how sacredly? Even the teachers see to it.

Preparations are going forward for Columbus day celebration, Oct. 21st.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks, to the friends and neighbors, who so kindly remembered us in our sad bereavement.

Methodist Appointments.

The appointments at the M. E. Conference at Owosso, made on Monday, resulted as follows for the Adrian district:

L. P. Davis, presiding elder; Addison, C. W. Baldwin; Adrian, J. M. Kerridge; Ann Arbor, C. M. Cobern; Blissfield and Palmyra, D. H. Yokum; Carlton and Scofield, J. L. Newkirk; Chelsea, L. N. Moore; Clayton, M. H. McMahon; Deerfield and Petersburg, M. T. Seelye; Dexter, F. E. Pearce; Dixboro, L. S. Tedman; Dundee, W. J. Palmer; Fairfield, H. Palmer; Grass Lake, J. H. McIntosh; Hudson, A. F. Bourns; Lambertville, Henry King; Manchester and Sharon, R. L. Cope; Medina, supplied by M. E. Lyons; Milan and Oakville, G. E. Sloan; Monroe, W. B. Pope; Morenci, F. Bradley; Munith and Fitchburg, H. W. Hicks; Napoleon and Brooklyn, A. W. Wilson; Ridgeway, Eugene Yager; Saline, T. G. Potter; Stony Creek, C. B. Case; Tecumseh, J. P. Varner; Tipton, E. P. Pierce; Waterloo, supplied by F. G. Moorehouse; Weston, Calvin Gibbs; Clinton, D. H. Ramsdell.

A Good Republican Gun.

One of the very best Republican "guns" for this 1892 campaign, or any other campaign, is E. V. Smalley's "History of the Republican Party." It is much more than a mere campaign book, in fact is a most valuable history, for every citizen of every party. It deals with the history of parties from the foundation of the government, down to the present year, giving brief sketches of the most noted leaders, every Republican platform from the first to the last, and a vast fund of valuable information. It appeals especially to the "thinking voter," every one of whom ought to read it. Of course no worker in the campaign is equipped without a copy of it, more than a carpenter would be without his saw, or a hunter without his gun. Mr. Smalley is a writer of rare ability, a long-time intimate friend of Garfield, Blaine and other leaders, staff correspondent of the New York Tribune, etc., and thus richly fitted for writing such a work. Another good thing about the book is that it is issued by the famous publisher of cheap books, John B. Alden, 57 Rose St., New York, and therefore to be had at a low price only 56 cents, post-paid. His catalogue over 100 pages, of choice books to be had for 2 cents ought to be in the hands of every lover of good books.

Joseph A. Vannier, the Democratic nominee for Auditor General, is a resident of Marquette. He is in partnership with A. M. Bigelow in the jewelry business, the firm title being Vannier & Bigelow. Mr. Bigelow is a son of Rev. W. E Bigelow a former M. E. pastor of the Tecumseh church and a brother of Mrs. Geo. N. Stacy, of Elgin, Ill. Mr. Vannier is a smart, hustling Frenchman, full of business push and energy, possessed of ample means and an upright, reliable citizen. His acquaintance extends all through that section, and he is very popular throughout the upper peninsula. He will pole far more than his party vote in the Lake Superior region. At this stage of the canvass his prospects of election look very favorable.

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills. They should be in every home medicine chest.

"In the example on the board," said the teacher of the class in algebra, "what does the x represent? Lucy Forbes you may answer." "It represents a —a pair of suspenders," hazarded the frightened little girl, regarding it intently.

"Don't Stand in Your Own Light."

You Certainly do if you buy your FALL SUIT OR OVERCOAT without visiting the Largest Clothing Store in this Locality. Our Fall Stock of OVERCOATS, ULSTERS, SUITS, and CAPS, is Larger and Finer than ever. We can show you ten styles to any other dealer's one, FIT YOU BETTER, suit you and sell you CHEAPER than anyone. A Suit or Overcoat lasts a great while; YOU SHOULD SELECT FROM THE LARGEST STOCK. The great variety will enable you to choose a pattern of goods that will always please you. Come in when you come to the fair. WE SHALL BE PLEASED TO SHOW YOU WHETHER YOU BUY OR NOT.

THE BOOK AUCTION.

Mr. McDevitt, who is now holding an auction sale of Books in the Usborne Block, is found to be a genial, good-natured man, and void of those tricks that so often characterize the traveling auctioneer. He has nothing but standard works, and no book is found on his shelves that would not find a welcome place in the choisest selected library. A Natick, Mass., paper has the following:

"As a rule it is the policy of the citizen to frown down and discourage the itinerant vender of merchandise who visits our good town with some stereotyped "bankrupt," or "damaged by fire" lie and succeeds in deluding some of our townsmen to purchase their wares to their detriment as well as our local dealers. But the case of Mr. McDevitt, who is now holding a book auction in Tash's block on Summer street, is a most noticeable exception to the above general rule. He bears the impress of an honorable gentleman and he certainly is a boon to our book-loving people whose shelves he has loaded with standard books at prices which makes us wonder who gave them to him. We take great pleasure in giving our unsolicited approval to this man who is adding to the pleasure of our Natick homes at such a small expense."

This is the last week of Mr. McDevitt's stay here, as he will positively close out on Monday next. People should avail themselves of this opportunity, while it remains within their reach. We regard Mr. Mc Devitt's work in Tecumseh as a substantial and lasting good to the community. Our citizens all speak in praise of his honorable dealing.

We'll Turn Ben Out.

AIR—Kingdom Coming.

Say, darkies, hab you seen de massa,
Wid de whiskers on his face,
Go long de road some time dis mornin',
Like he gwine to leab de place?
He saw a ghost dat weighs free hun'red
Way up on Buzzard's bay;
He took his hat and lef berry sudden,
An' I spec he's run away.
CHORUS:
'Tis granfer's hat, ha, ha!
And baby McKee, ho, ho!
We'll turn Ben out ob de White House now,
And put Grover in—jes so.

De darkies am jes tired ob workin'
For de busted G. O. P.
As hewers of water and drawers ob water
We've taken our last degree.
De party bosses make us ante,
An' dey dribe us roun' right well
But when "de office seeks de brudder"
Den Sambo don't get a smell.
CHORUS:

De darkies now'll pull off dere jackets
And work as dey believe,
And whoop it up for de Demmies now
And shout for Cleve and Steve:
We'll down wid de robber war taxation.
De laborer disenthrall
We'll vote for de leader ob dis nation
Grover de brave, the best of all.
CHORUS:

The Arena for October.

The October Arena contains the fourth and closing paper in the Brief for the plaintiff, in the now celebrated Bacon-Shakespeare case. In this paper Mr. Edwin Reed groups in a masterly manner much strong internal evidence in favor of his side. In the November Arena, the Brief for Shakespeare will be opened, Mr. Reed contributing the opening paper. He will be followed by Prof. W. J. Rolfe, the eminent American Shakespearean critic, and by Dr. F. J. Furnivall, of London, and Rev. Dr. A. Nicholson, of Warwickshire, two of the most celebrated Shakespearean scholars of England. Ignatius Donnelly will furnish a brief closing argument for the plaintiff. Among the eminent personages who have already consented to serve as jurors in this most notable literary trial, are Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes, Gov. Wm. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, Joseph Jefferson, Edmund C. Stedman, Appleton Morgan, (President of the New York Shakespeare Society,) Rev. Minot J. Savage, Prof. A. E. Dolbear, (of Tufts College,) Mary A. Livermore and Rev. E. A. Bartol. The Arena has long since forged its way into the very forefront of the great liberal and progressive reviews. Now it enters the field of literary criticism in such a way as to command the attention of America and Europe. The Bacon-Shakespeare controversy will elicit the attention of more eminent critics than any other purely literary discussion of the year.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 19th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of David Smeltzer, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Smeltzer, executor of the last will and testament and upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to the terms of said will: that he may be discharged and his bond canceled, and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper,

It is ordered, That Monday, the 17th day of October, next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A True Copy.)

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Elder Yager made a business trip to Detroit, Monday.

Sweet fragrance of the orange perfume fills the air.

We are informed that Linnie Coryell is failing quite rapidly at present.

Tillie Anderson visited E. W. Rappleye's family the first of the week.

A goodly number of our citizens attended the fair at Adrian last week.

G. C. Arner spent a few days' lay-off at home, returning to Marshall Monday.

Rob. Hicks, of Toledo, was the guest of Miss Minnie Barrett over the Sabbath.

There are quite a number in the village under the Doctor's care, at present.

G. W. Jackson and wife, of Tecumseh, spent Sunday with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Farrah, of Adrian, visited their uncle, John F. Temple and family Sunday.

Elmer Pocklington, who has been very sick for the past two weeks, is on the gain at present.

W. R. Wilson, Chas. Underwood, and J. W. Baker, went to Chicago Monday, on important business.

Ed and May Harrison were called to Macon Wednesday evening by the sickness of her mother, Mrs. Ace Smith.

B. F. DePuy, wife and daughter Fern left Tuesday afternoon for a few weeks' visit in the East, going on the Olin excursion.

Kate Sherman, who has been at Clifton, N. Y., for the past year, was called home last week by the severe illness of her father.

Renting of the pews of the church will take place next Friday afternoon. The church will be open at 2 o'clock and renting will begin at 3 o'clock sharp.

Sabbath evening services will begin half an hour earlier commencing next Sunday evening as follows. Epworth League service at six and preaching service at seven.

The Epworth League will give a literary entertainment in the lecture room of the church on Friday evening of this week. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission free.

Rob Bailey left for Chicago Friday night, having accepted an agency of Powers Bros. to canvass for the Chautauqua Combination drawing board and writing desk, and will work Central Illinois.

Rev. E. W. Frazee, one of our former pastors, occupied the pulpit both Sunday morning and evening. In the evening he gave a very interesting temperance discourse. His field of work is in the Upper Peninsula for the present year.

On Friday evening a large company of friends gathered at the parsonage and surprised Elder Yager on his return from Adrian. After a few moments of handshaking they went to the church, when Rev. James Wright in a few well-chosen words presented the Elder with a beautiful antique oak and crushed plush base rocker, also a gold Epworth badge, a gift from the members of the League. The pastor responded with a few heartfelt remarks, thanking his friends for their support in the past, and asked God's blessing on them in the future. The gifts were in remembrance of his birthday and the gathering of friends to welcome him back for another year. Refreshments were served and an hour spent very pleasantly.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank the neighbors and friends who lent such valuable assistance during the sickness and death of my wife; also to those furnishing the floral pieces at the funeral.

JACOB BARRETT AND FAMILY.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." DEATH OF ANOTHER PIONEER.

F. R. Stebbins, the veteran furniture dealer of Adrian, passed quietly away last Thursday evening, at his home on the corner of Toledo and Comstock streets. He has been gradually sinking from a disease of the heart all summer, but was able to get about and ride out up to a few days ago.

F. R. Stebbins was born at Williamstown, Vermont, Oct. 26, 1818. His parents were natives of Massachusetts. Mr. Stebbins commenced to learn the cabinet maker's trade when only 16. In '37 he came to this state, settled in Palmyra, and engaged in the cabinet business with his brother, C. Stebbins. Four years later he moved to this city, and has ever since made it his home. In 1852 he, with his brother, in connection with Jermain Bros., built the four story brick block, which is still partly occupied by the furniture business he founded. Mr. Stebbins was alderman of the second ward two years. It was he that planned the making of Monument square, caused No. 1 engine house to be erected, and as chairman of the school board's building committee, had much to do with the constructing and planning of the Union school building. He was on the school board six years.

He became a member of the old hook and ladder company in 1842, and was a member of the volunteer fire department for several years. He was editor of the Expositor from '50 to '60, and was always found on the alert for the advancement of the city's interests. He designed the plan of the soldiers' monument base, and was an original stockholder in the Illinois brass works and the opera house. Religiously he was a Presbyterian, and in politics always Republican. He was twice married, first to Mary E. Myer, of Buffalo, in 1841, who died April 17, 1852. October 24, 1853, he married Miss Sarah L. Briggs, of Claremont, N. H., who is left to mourn his disease. Three sons and a daughter, Mrs. H. A. Colvin, also survive him.

The funeral obsequies were held at his family residence on Sunday afternoon last, and were very largely attended by old neighbors and friends.

Question Box.

Heavy Damages Against the Lake Shore.

Monroe, Mich., Oct. 3—The suit of John H. Conway against the Lake Shore and F. & P. M. railroad companies, was decided to day. The suits were brought to recover damages for being injured in the frightful railroad accident last November, at Air Line Junction, near Toledo, caused by a collision of a F. & P. M. railroad train with the Michigan Southern train No. 6 known as the Boston & Chicago special, from Chicago.

The decision is in favor of the F. & P. M. The claimnant was awarded $21,903, which the Lake Shore company will have to pay.

Suits for damages aggregating nearly $300,000 are pending.

The question of responsibility has been decided, and the amounts to be awarded in the other courts, are the only points now being adjudicated.

THE OLD PLATFORM.

AIR—Tenting on the Old Camp Ground.

We are standing to-night on the old platform;
Give us a song to cheer.
Let us lift our voices loud and long
For the leaders we revere.
CHORUS:
Many on the prairie [illegible] are longing to-night
For our war taxation to cease;
Standing on the platform of truth and right,
Justice, free trade and peace,
Standing to-night,
Standing to-night,
Standing on the old platform.

There were no modern trusts in the old platform
Of the good old days gone by;
When Presidents sought to protect our rights
And their chair to dignify.
CHORUS:

We are fighting to-day on the old platform,
Then lend us a helping hand,
While we battle for right under Grover's lead
And follow his command.
CHORUS:

The people will win on the old platform;
For the Lord is on our side;
We will scatter the hosts of monopoly rule,
With Grover for our guide.
CHORUS:

S. C. STACY.

WHO WILL TRY IT?

The United States Investor has decided to offer $1,000 in prizes for essays of not more than one column each respecting American cities and towns.

We take pleasure in announcing that the following distinguished gentlemen have consented to act as judges to award these prizes:

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, of Mass.
Hon. Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia.
Hon. Julius C. Burrows, of Michigan.

The prizes will be subdivided as follows:

For the best essay respecting any American city or town, $500; for the second best essay respecting any American city or town, $300; for the third best essay respecting any American city or town, $200.

Each essay is to deal with the merits of the city or town chosen as its subject, either as a desirable place of residence: as affording opportunities for investment; as a place of peculiar location; as a place of unusual rapid growth; as a place in which an unusally large amount of capital and labor is employed in any particular industry; as a place possessed of great undeveloped resources, such as water power, coal and iron, etc., which is peculiar because it has long escaped attention; as a place of great historical interest; or as possessing any other claim to unique interest or special distinction.

In awarding the prizes, the judges will consider the literary merits of the essays, as well as the merits of the town or city described. They will not, however, go outside of the essay itself for evidence that the town or city poesesses any special interest. Any claims which even a well-known city may have to distinction within the intent upon which these prizes are offered must rest wholly upon what is said by the essayist within the space of the column alloted to him. This condition, together with the consideration of literary merit will give the essayists an even chance. All the essays which are intended for competition should be marked as such and forwarded to either of the offices of the United States Investor, 19 Pearl street, Boston; 335 Broadway, New York; 241 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 6, 1892.

The announcement that Judge Gresham has come out for Cleveland is a big card for the Democracy. It will strengthen Cleveland's cause very much in both Illinois and Indiana.

Cleveland's letter of acceptance meets with universal approbation. It is brief, and yet all the issues of the canvass, big and little, are properly covered. It will be very generally read and will be a vote winner.

Mrs. Taylor, the widow of Ex-Minister Bayard Taylor, has written a cook book. If the women of this country would pay as much attention to the instructions of good cook books as they do to indifferent fashion magazines, divorce lawyers would lose a large slice of their business.

Whitelaw Reid hears testimony that the preliminary work in new York State has been thoroughly done. No doubt of it. The victims of the fat-fryers have gracefully yielded of their surplus adipose and Dave Martin has his wires shrewdly laid for secret and discreet work among Democrats who may be induced to vote the Republican ticket.

There is a scarcity of corn in Mexico and the people threaten to revolt in consequence. Here is a good field for the McKinleyites. If they could persuade the Mexicans to levy a heavy tariff on imported corn the neighboring republic would soon revel in McKinley cheapness and some Mexican Peck would arise to prove to the consumers how much their prosperity had been increased by taxation.

The Republican organs are still explaining that Vermont and Maine "incident." The "incident" was that about one-third of the Republican voters in each State stayed at home and refused to vote, in spite of the most desperate attempts to get them to the polls. The significance of the incident is that if there should be an equal number of stay-at-home Republicans in all the States Harrison wouldn't have 100 votes in the Electoral College.

Apropos of the Republican Conference in Washington, the report is given out that a special effort is to be made by Elkins et al. to defeat Congressman William L. Wilson of West Virginia. The Democratic National Committee can well afford to take a hand in this and render Mr. Wilson all the help that he needs in the way of speakers and money. Mr. Wilson is one of the ablest and most useful members of Congress and his absence from the next House would be nothing short of a national misfortune.

It is safe to say that the full text of Mr. Cleveland's letter of acceptance will be read by ten persons where one reads Mr. Harrison's. The President's letter was so extremely long that only the "great dailies" could afford the space it took, and it has been the rare exception to find a weekly journal which attempted to print it in full. As a rule the Republican editors of country weeklies were compelled to "boil it down," giving occasional passages and summarizing the remainder. On the other hand, Mr. Cleveland's letter is so short that even the smallest weeklies can easily give it in full. As the first object of every candidate is to have the people read his statement of his views, the man who "cuts it short" gains a great advantage over the long-winded man.—N. Y. Weekly Post.

The renomination of Congressman Gorman in the second district was not only an honor due the man but for the best interests of one of the strongest and most important districts in the state. It is something unusual to see one Congressman pitted against another but such is the case in this instance, and Mr. Gorman is not the man who will remain at home. His valuable services in both branches of the Michigan Legislature and during the term he has served in Congress, mark him as a capable, faithful and conscientious worker whose endeavor is to best serve the interests of his constituency and the entire people. He has always thoroughly informed himself upon matters demanding legislative consideration, and while a quiet man in his methods, has wielded a strong influence and cast his vote in the right direction. His nomination insures a Democratic Congressman from the second.—Detroit Free Press.

MR. CLEVELAND'S LETTER.

The calm tone of Mr. Cleveland's letter is entirely suited to that of the present campaign. If the country is quiet and is entering upon a Presidential election free from the excitement and uproar which usually accompany such contests, Mr. Cleveland is equally undisturbed. He states his principles and his attitude towards the leading questions of the canvass, and submits his fortunes and those of his party to the verdict of the people, without making any effort to excite their prejudice. In this respect his letter is almost or quite unique in political literature of the kind. It is in marked contrast with the letter of President Harrison, for that contained a comprehensive and complete assortment of all the current demagogic "slogans" of his party, including an extract from an anonymous correspondent of a British free trade journal, a quotation from Peck's statistics, and a final war-whoop on Democratic free trade as an infernal machine designed to "blow up" the entire commercial and industrial interests of the country.

The strongest portion of Mr. Cleveland's letter is naturally that relating to the tariff issue, for it is with this that he is most closely identified, and it is upon this that the election will turn. Those persons who have been hoping that he would "dodge" on this question and fail to stand squarely upon the Chicago platform will be disappointed. He does nothing of the kind. He accepts the platform in the spirit in which every genuine tariff reformer accepts it. He believes in a "tariff for revenue only," and that "Republican protection is a fraud," but, while believing this, he does not propose to do what Mr. Harrison declares to be the Democratic purpose, "blow up" the entire existing system without delay and put absolute free trade in its place. On this point his words are clear and so unmistakable that misrepresentation of them is going to be a difficult task:

"Tariff reform is still our purpose. Though we oppose the theory that tariff laws may be passed having for their object the granting of discriminating and unfair Governmental aid to private ventures, we wage no exterminating war against any American interests. We believe a readjustment can be be accomplished in accordance with the principles we profess, without disaster or demolition. We believe that the advantages of free raw material should be accorded to our manufacturers, and we contemplate a fair and careful distribution of necessary tariff burdens rather than the precipitation of free trade."

It has been a favorite device of the high-tariff-advocates for many years to claim that every tariff-reformer was a free-trader and that every free-trader was in favor of immediate and absolute free trade. There has never been any truth in this claim. All tariff-reformers have recognized that, while the protective system has been carried to extremes which make it a most unjust and oppressive burden upon the people, still it would be unjust to large vested interests, and would cause serious and unwarranted commercial and industrial disturbance, to "wipe it all out" at once. Every sensible tariff-reformer believes that the work of reconstruction must be gradual and done in the interests of the whole people.

There is something grotesque in the idea that any political party, representing a majority of the American people, should on coming into power adopt and carry out a policy which would be certain to unsettle the business interests of the country. Even if they had the disposition they would be powerless to carry it out in the present division of party power in Washington. The industrial spstem of the country cannot be "blown up" by the Democratic House and a Democratic President so long as there remains a Republican majority in the Senate. Even if there were a Democratic majority in the Senate, the enormous pension demands upon the revenues of the Government, demands which during the next few years will absorb nearly our entire customs revenue, will make anything like absolute free trade an impossibility. Mr. Cleveland is quite right, in view of these considerations, in relying upon the intelligence of the American people sufficiently to believe that they "cannot be frightened by the spectre of impossible free trade."

The other points traversed by Mr. Cleveland in his letter are treated with equal simplicity and directness, but call for no special comment. He rightly says at the close that his record as a public servant leaves no excuse for misunderstanding his belief and position on the questions which are presented to the voters of the land for decision. His record and character constitute his strongest platform, and will have greater effect in the election than anything he can say for himself or his party can say in his support. If he is elected, it will be because the people have faith in him as an honest man and a faithful public servant, who will do what he believes to be right without fear of personal consequences. Free trade and all other "scares" will have very little effect to shake the confidence of the people in these traits of his character.—New York Post.

The October North American.

One of the most remarkable papers ever published in a periodical is the article by Mr. Gladstone, Prime Minister of England, in the October number of The North American Review. It is entitled "A Vindication of Home Rule: A Reply to the Duke of Argyll," and it sets forth with vehement earnestness logical clearness the claims of the Irish people to some measure of self-government. Mr. Gladstone takes up in detail the statements made by the Duke of Argyll in his paper in the August number of The North American Review on "English Elections and Home Rule," the purpose of which article was to prove the indentity of the Irish movement with the principle of secession that was encountered in the American Civil War. As foreshadowing the policy of the Prime Ministry in the affairs of Ireland "A Vindication of Home Rule" will attract universal and profound attention. The October number of The Review also contains a symposium of articles under the head of "Safeguards Against Cholera," in which Surgeon-General Walter Wyman; President Charles G. Wilson of the New York Board of Health; Dr. Samuel W. Abbott, Secretary of the Board of Health, Boston; and Dr. Cyrus Edson, Sanitary Superintendent of the New York Board of Health, give a comprehensive account of the origin and the nature of cholera, of the scientific methods of treatment, and of all that has been done by way of quarantine, prevention, and preparation. The statements of these experts will carry to the country a large measure of reassurance. Henry Labouchere, M. P., writes on "The Foreign Policy of England," berating the expensive and what he believes to be the unwise policy of attending to the affairs of other nations. M. Naquet has an article on "The French Electoral System," and to it Mr. Theodore Stanton adds some comments. Lady Jeune reviews her critics in a closing article on London Society. Home politics of pressing importance at this time are treated by Senator Vest, of Missouri, in "The Real Issue;" by the Governor of Oregon in "Paramount Questions of the Campaign;" and by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Doane, of Albany, on "The Excise Law and the Saloons."

Being a sufferer from chronic catarrh, and having derived great benefit from the use of Ely's Cream Balm, I can highly recommend it. Its sales are far in excess of all other catarrh remedies. --B. Franken, Druggist, Sigourney, Iowa.

"Mudge is still looking for a snap, I suppose?" "Yes, but he doesn't seem to have the necessary ginger to make it."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Cleveland's Letter.

Grover Cleveland does all things well. His statesmanship is in advance of the ability of average persons called statesmen and he has the happy faculty of expressing in the plainest language the greatest truths and principles of government. His state papers were never prosy. In the letter of acceptance, published to-day, Mr. Cleveland stands so squarely upon ancient democratic ground, and so firmly for everything American that the blindest partisan opponent cannot fail to credit him with vantage ground in everything he advocates.

He is for tariff reform that will leave the bulk of the people's earnings in their own pockets.

He is radically and everlastingly opposed to the bayonet in politics.

He is for all the money that can worthily be bestowed upon the brave soldiers and sailors of the rebellion.

He is favorable to restricting immigration to the classes that will make good American citizens.

The letter is short, terse, unequivocal, right to the point, and in and of itself is as good a party platform as the democratic party ever presented for the commendation of the American people.

The letter contains bristling points that will be remembered long after election. Sentences and thoughts which he gives to the country will inspire the democratic speakers and furnish material for intelligent newspaper discussion.—Toledo Bee.

RICH'S RECORD.

While a Legislator He Was Opposed to the People and to Political Purity.

Facts from the Michigan Records.

The whole record of Candidate John T. Rich as a legislator, as revealed by the legislative journals, proves that he has always been opposed to the interests of the people and taxpayers, and at every opportunity has favored corporations and capitalists. In 1875 he was opposed to reciprocity, and voted for a resolution in the legislature asking congress to prevent the ratification of the reciprocity treaty then pending between the United States and Canada. But that was before the man now sulking in his tent at Bar Harbor had forced reciprocity on the republican party. Mr. Blaine had not said then as he has since that he favored unrestricted reciprocity with Canada. If the republican party is right now, Mr. Rich was wrong then. If Mr. Rich was right then, the republican party is wrong now. On the other hand we find that Allen B. B. Morse, ever true to his convictions and always in favor of the people, voted against the same resolution in the senate, when he was then a member.

John T. Rich is a land shark and mechanic or laborer. In proof of this we find that in 1875 he voted against a bill to secure the assessment of mortgages for taxation. Of course this vote was in accord with the wishes of men whose wealth was invested in stocks, bonds and mortgages. Of course the man with a farm heavily mortgaged could pay the taxes, and the owner of the mortgage could enjoy the benefits of his investment without contributing anything to the support of the government. Of course, too, the mechanic or laborer who owned only a cottage, and whose every dollar of wealth was in sight of the assessor and tax gatherer, should be compelled to support the government and pay extravagant, reckless and thieving republican officials, but the rich man whose money was invested in mortgages, and therefore out of sight, could be exempt from taxation. Such are the sentiments of John T. Rich as disclosed by his vote as a legislator.

Fishing, for food and commerce, in Michigan, is an extensive industry and employs thousands of men, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are invested in nets alone, to say nothing of boats and other outfits. The state has shown its appreciation of this industry by the passage of laws for the protection and preservation of the best food fishes. The tariff on gilling or seine twine before the passage of the McKinley law was 25 per cent., which of course increased the cost of this twine just one-fourth. The McKinley bill has since increased this to 15 and 20 cents on every pound of twine besides a duty of 35 and 45 per cent on every dollar's worth of the goods. But it is not to the McKinley bill we wish to call attention, but to the action of Mr. Rich on this subject. In April, 1875, a resolution was before the house asking congress to admit gilling twine for fishing free of duty, and as usual we find Legislator Rich and in this case against the fishermen in particular. He was active in his opposition to this resolution and voted against it.

ARRAYED WITH THE ENEMIES OF THE PEOPLE,

We find also by reference to house journal of 1879, Vol. I, pages 1053-6, that Mr. Rich voted against a bill to prohibit the sale of tobacco to minors. It would never do for John T. Rich to vote against the interests of the tobacco manufacturers. Notwithstanding the fact that petition after petition, signed by the best citizens of Michigan, had been presented to the legislature, it would not be policy for Mr. Rich to oppose the wishes of wealthy manufacturers.

OPPOSED TO POLITICAL PURITY.

The legislature of 1877 passed a law entitled: "An act to maintain political purity." (See page 204, laws of 1877.) This was an act, as its title indicates, to prevent bribery and corruption in elections. The act provides a penalty for the offer or promise of money or other consideration, and the offer or promise of office or employment to voters, and provides that voters shall not be bribed or bought to vote or refrain from voting, and that members of the legislature should not be influenced to vote or refrain from voting for United States senator by the promise of office, place or employment under the United States government, etc.

This bill passed the house by a vote of 71 to 16, and among the sixteen who voted against it was John T. Rich, then speaker of the house, and very active in his opposition to the bill. Voters, bear in mind on November 8 that the Elba candidate is not only very strongly in favor of the damnable force bill but is just as strongly opposed to political purity. The act became a law even in a republican legislature, in spite of his opposition, and contains not a single feature that any good man, either democrat or republican, should object to. Yet John T. Rich opposed this law by both voice and vote.

THEY DON'T LIKE HONEST VOTING.

Already in Vermont republicans are suggesting that the secret ballot law must be repealed.

Queer, isn't it, that republicans lose and democrats gain wherever the laws permit voting without the corruption of bribers and the prying interference of employers and bosses!

The republican explanation is that their voters stay away from the polls rather than exhibit their incapacity to master the difficulties of the process of marking ballots.

This is hardly consistent with their boasting that their party comprises all the intelligence and the democratic party all the ignorance of the land.

But it is much easier for them to be inconsistent than to acknowledge the simple and significant truth.

THE DIFFERENCE IN $$$.

Democratic vs. Republican Management of Public Property.

Another Illustration of Republican Negligence.

The state of Michigan owns a valuable block in the city of Lansing. The care and rental of the property are lodged with the state board of auditors. Whether or not the state should continue to own the property, it is incumbent upon the auditors, while it does continue its proprietorship, to manage it with the same business sagacity as they do their private interests. That the republican auditors failed to do this is evidenced by their offer to sell the property for $17,000, notwithstanding that the rentals it yields netted six per cent. on $20,000. Thus its market value was easily $20,000.

Under the scrupulous management of a democratic board of auditors

THE VALUE OF THE PROPERTY

has been practically doubled to the state. This is due not to an increase in value, but solely to arigid, businesslike method of handling the rental-value of the block. During the present fiscal year there has been collected in rentals from this block, and paid into the state treasury by the clerk of the board, the sum of $2,649.29. This is sufficient to pay for the insurance and repairs and net six per cent. on $40,000, not calculating in this result the use of seven rooms in the building for state purposes. This shows the value of having officials who pay as careful attention to public affairs as to their private interests.

Milton Bretz, as clerk of the board of auditors, has proved himself to be

THE RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

He makes a monthly statement to the board, showing on what conditions, by whom, and for what purpose the building is occupied and whether any tenants are delinquent for rent. He also makes a monthly statement showing the rents collected and turned over to the treasurer, accompanied by the treasurer's receipts. Under the rule adopted by the democratic board he has given a bond of $25,000, so that there can be no default without a remedy. These careful, safe, business methods are in striking contrast with

THE SHIFTLESS COURSE OF THE REPUBLICAN BOARDS.

They allowed the clerk to manage the matter as he pleased. He failed by hundreds of dollars to collect for the state the rents that should have been paid, and finally failed to turn over about $1,600 that he did collect. He was under no bond and there was no means of exacting payment from him.

The following statement shows the rents collected for the fiscal years named:

1882	$1,880 72	1887	$1,408 80
1883	2,015 04	1888	1,183 50
1884	1,698 62	1889	1,425 27
1885	1,828 21	1890	897 00
1886	1,228 29	1891	1,054 21
		1892	2,649 29

The average under republican boards was $1,507.31. The sum collected by the democratic administration for the year ending June 30, 1892, was $2,649.29, showing an average annual gain of $1,141.98. The first six months of the fiscal year 1891 fell under the republican administration, so it is necessary to take 1892 to obtain the result under the first full year of democratic management.

IN A NUTSHELL.

How the Republicans Have Perpetuated a $5,000,000 Debt.

The Trust Fund Matter Briefly Stated.

The trust fund debt of Michigan on June 30, 1892, amounted to $5,446,180, drawing an annual interest of $365,000. These funds represent money received from sales of public lands granted by congress and the legislature to the state for school purposes and intended to be kept as a fund bearing a revenue for the support of our free school system. Since 1836 interest has been paid amounting to $5,051,000, or $300,000 more than the debt itself. This interest has been paid by the state because the state, as trustee, has borrowed and used these funds, and must continue to pay the annual interest. By reason of republican legislation these funds have been used in paying the bonded debt of the state, which in 1886 amounted to $3,890,500, and providing money for building the present state capitol, costing $1,500,000, and contributing largely to the support of state institutions.

This necessarily makes an important political question when the question of economy enters so largely into state affairs. The land grants and the early treatment of these funds by our pioneer legislators, the democrats, show that they received from the sales of these lands in interest-bearing securities. In Wisconsin and certain other states this was done, and those states have a revenue rather than an interest-bearing debt. But the republican party saw no doubt that the revenue from this source could be used in paying the current obligations of the state. It has been so used, and consequently reduced direct taxes just that amount.

Another phase of the question is that, had these bonds been invested, the $365,000 annual interest, which the state must now pay, would have been paid by those loaning these funds, and this much more would have been of taxation.

AVAILABLE IN REDUCING THE BURDEN

The situation, by reason of this policy of the republican party, is that to-day this and future administrations find the revenue from the sale of public lands practically nothing, while this interest and the expenses of the state are continually increasing, forcing every future administration to provide its revenue in the levy of direct taxes; and, except by the practice of the most rigid economy, this tax levy must be greater than at any period in the past history of the state.

GALE IN JAPAN.

Hundreds of Persons Lose Their Lives and Property.

Trees Blown Down, Crops Ruined and Buildings Wrecked by the Thousands —Death and Destruction Causes Terrible Scenes.

THE AWFUL TYPHOON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—The Pacific Mail Company's new steamship Peru arrived Friday evening twenty-two days from Hong Kong via Yokohama. She brings Japanese news up to September 16 of the gale which swept over southern and central Japan last month inflicting such terrible damage in Tokushima prefecture, also devastated the Rinkin islands. A report from Okinawa gives the following figures:

Four hundred persons crushed to death; missing, 24; boats blown into the sea, 23; houses completely overthrown, 1,500, and 1,100 partially; outhouses blown down and injured, 2,000; trees blown down, 3,500. Crops were also greatly injured. The above figures do not include the devastation wrought in the smaller islands.

The typhoon of September 4 did much damage in Shizuok, Aichi and Gumwa prefectures. At Homamatsu the courthouse, school, sixty-two dwellings and a brick railway shed were blown down and ten persons were killed and twenty wounded. In Shiznoka prefecture 800 dwelling houses were blown down or partially destroyed, six bridges washed away and four embankments broken. Seven houses were swept away and seventy-one stores destroyed.

During a festival at Mom temple, near Kobe, a terrible accident occurred. The temple is approached by a flight of 250 steps, very steep. While a dense crowd was ascending the steps a man at the top slipped and in his fall brought down thirty people. Five were killed outright and others terribly injured.

FELL FROM A BALLOON.

Two Men at Peoria, Ill., Sustain Accidents That Will Prove Fatal.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 8.—James Gomes and J. A. Loomis went up in a balloon from Central park Sunday and were thrown out. Gomes' back was broken and Loomis had his breast caved in and an arm and leg broken. Gomes had both arms broken and it is doubtful if either of the men will live. Both were experienced aeronauts. Gomes is a Portuguese who has been in the business all his life and Loomis made his one hundred and sixtieth trip Sunday. The feat of going up in a balloon and dropping from a parachute is so old here that something new had to be devised. The men went up in a balloon, hanging on to a trapeze bar, on which they performed in mid-air. They made the ascension all right, although the wind was blowing hard. They drifted fully a mile and alighted in a clump of trees. As soon as the balloon struck the trees the trapeze bar broke and they were dashed to the ground. Neither of them is 30 years of age. Last Sunday they attempted a similar feat and the wind blew them into the lake. They were taken out half drowned.

VILAS' MOTION DENIED.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court Renders Judgment in the Apportionment Case.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 3.—The supreme court has denied the motion of Senator Vilas, attorney for the secretary of state, for "leave to interpose an answer" in the legislative apportionment case, and ordered judgment for relief entered for the relator, thus finally and ultimately closing the case against the secretary of state and in favor of the relator, C. F. Lamb. An extra session of the legislature to enact a new law will undoubtedly be called at an early day.

Our Finances.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The public debt statement issued from the treasury department Saturday shows a decrease in the debt during the last month amounting to $3,451,829. There was an increase of $90 in the interest bearing debt; a decrease of $708,345 in non-interest bearing debt, and an increase of $2,743,574 in the cash balance or surplus. The surplus including the one hundred million gold, greenback redemption fund, is $181,895,919.

A Remarkable Operation.

COLDWATER, Mich., Oct. 1.—Nora Standish was thrown from a buggy Friday night and fell on her head, dislocating her neck. It was thought she was dead. The physician summoned two strong men; one seized her by the feet, the other by the head, and at the word pulled as hard as they could. The bones sprang into place with a snap, she soon recovered consciousness and will live.

Official Figures from Maine.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 30.—The official figures of the gubernatorial vote of the last election give Cleaves (rep.), 67,585; Johnson (dem.), 55,073; Massey (pro.), 3,781; Knowlton (labor), 1,860; Bateman (people's), 3,005; scattering, 17; total, 129,629; Cleaves' plurality, 12,512.

A Terrible Deed.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 30.—Mrs. James Pike, to settle an old grudge, shot and killed the 8 and 10-year-old daughters of Charles Billups, her brother, who lives near this place.

No More Cholera Bulletins.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The health department issued the following bulletin Saturday morning: "On account of the entire absence of cholera from this city since September 1 no more bulletins will be issued."

Value of Two Feet.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Henry L. Pfeffer secured a verdict here yesterday of $20,000 against the Street Railway Company for the loss of both of his feet in an accident.

The Tecumseh Herald.

Issued Every Thursday Morning

BY S. C. STACY.

THE FIRST DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

A Brilliant Audience Listen to a Brilliant Speech by Hon. Frank A. Dean of Charlotte.

Last Thursday evening, Oct. 4th, at 8 o'clock, the Opera House was crowded to its utmost capacity by the citizens of Tecumseh and vicinity, who had assembled to hear Michigan's Tariff Reform orator and champion of the people's rights, Frank A. Dean, of Charlotte.

At 8 o'clock the people were enlivened by strains of sweet music from the Kid Band, after which the orator of the evening, Hon. Len Hoch, of Adrian, Chairman Lenawee Democratic Committee and candidate for Sheriff, Hon. Bert R. Chandler, of Hudson, Circuit Court Commissioner and candidate for re-election, Hon. F. R. Wood, Prosecuting Attorney, Hon. Horace Holdridge, candidate for State Legislature, C. F. Field and Alfred James took seats upon the stage.

Alfred James introduced Hon. Len Hoch, who, in a very neat and appropriate speech, introduced to the people of Tecumseh Hon. Frank A. Dean.

Mr. Dean opened by speaking of the free ballot that the people of this country are enabled to cast; of the great injustice of the class legislation which has been so prevalent for the last twenty or thirty years; evils of the day which are threatening the people; of the tariff, which is a taxation for the benefit of a certain privileged few, and of the danger in which this country is to-day of becoming governed by a Plutocracy.

He went into a long and extremely interesting historical discussion of the evils and benefits of Protection and Free Trade; likened the tariff laws to the old Feudal barons, whose vassals went out into the highways and byways and at the point of the sword and spear extorted money and tributes from all who might be unfortunate enough to come in contact with them; only, under a protective tariff, the modern feudal barons extorted their money lawfully, by the McKinley bill and the fostering protection given by the government to infant (?) industries during the last twenty years; and that some of those infant industries were in their two hundred and eighth year; that the so-called protection was for the benefit of a few favored ones, not the masses; that the free American should be allowed to purchase where he might obtain the most for his dollar and sell where he could obtain the most for his product. That the tariff is a tax he stated without fear of contradiction by his Republican friends. If the tariff was removed, they say, the country would be flooded with cheap goods. If, then, under a protective tariff we are not flooded with those self-same goods, we must certainly have to pay the difference for protection. What is it then but a tax?

His closing was a brilliant effort and held his listeners' attention, as did every word that fell from his lips during the entire evening. As to those cheap goods he said: "Let me see that flood that the Republicans talk about. I would like nothing better than to take a continual surf bath in that flood of cheap goods," and ended with the admonition that every voter should lay party prejudice aside and look to his fireside, home and own interests in the coming conflict, and closing with "Vote for Grover Cleveland, Morse and Gorman."

His speech was one of the finest and most learned ever listened to by a Tecumseh audience.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

STARVED TO DEATH.

Discovery of a Veteran and His Dead Wife in an Old Shanty.

In a two-room shanty in the suburbs of Bay City, foul with the gathered filth of weeks, the dead body of Mrs. Clara Hosmer was found lying on the bed, where her helplessly crippled husband has lain for years. She had been attacked with fever several days ago, and with no one to nurse her had literally, so the physicians say, starved to death. The husband, too, was also near death from lack of food. He was scarcely able to speak, but said over a week had elapsed since anything passed his lips. He is a veteran of the war, but, in spite of wounds that made him a helpless cripple, has steadily refused to apply for a pension.

FELL 200 FEET.

Four Men Disobey Orders and Lose Their Lives in a Mine at Bessemer.

Four men fell 200 feet down a shaft in the Eureka mine in Bessemer township and were killed. They were Frank Bender, John Leon, Julius McKaley and John Randem. The four men, with two others employed in the mine, started to ride up in the skip. When 200 feet from the bottom the skip dumped, four of the occupants being hurled to the bottom of the shaft, where they were crushed to death. It was contrary to orders for the men to ride in the skips and the coroner's jury therefore exonerated the company from blame.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-one observers in different parts of the state for the week ended September 24 indicated that pneumonia, inflammation of the kidneys, scarlet fever and pleuratis increased, and diphtheria and whooping cough decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-three places, scarlet fever at thirty-seven, typhoid fever at fifty-six and measles at one place.

A Church Burned.

The Court Street Methodist church at Flint was destroyed by fire. The building, including contents, was valued at $35,000 and was insured for $20,000. The church was built in 1888 of brick and was still heavily in debt. The fire caught in the organ loft from an oil stove which was being used to dry the paint. Rev. J. P. Fryer, who occupied the parsonage adjoining, had his household goods badly damaged by water.

Murdered for His Money.

Mike Sullivan, a private in company C at Fort Mackinac, went to Sault Ste. Marie to spend his holidays. The last seen of him was when he went into the Chippewa house and was seen to have in his possession a large roll of bills. His body was picked up in the river the next morning, when it was ascertained he had been dealt a heavy blow across the bridge of the nose and shot through the eye. No money was found on him.

Hanged Herself While Insane.

Mrs. Agatha Zabrinskie, formerly a Detroit society woman and sister of Sydney D. Miller, one of the wealthiest men in the state, committed suicide by hanging herself to the door of her room. Mrs. Zabrinskie was one of the brightest literary women in Detroit, and was well known through Michigan and the west for her work.

Short But Newsy Items.

Blanche Besaw, aged 16, escaped from jail at Bay City on a rope of bedclothes.

Martin Fisher, a line repairer on the Detroit, Lansing & Northern railroad, fell under the wheels of a train at Beech and was killed.

A beautiful eagle was shot while foraging for a swamp breakfast at Macomb. Its wing was broken, but it is now a very lively captive.

Charles Wightman shot and instantly killed Walter Carr at Henry. A quarrel over Carr's wife and whisky were the causes of the shooting.

George P. Anderson, of Ludington, was killed by a stroke of lightning while standing in the doorway of his home during a storm.

Frederick Kramer, the 6-year-old son of G. Kramer, of Menominee, was run over by a wagon and killed. The little fellow was walking on a loose paving block, when he slipped and fell under the wheels.

Ex-Speaker Diekema lost $35 by burglars at Holland.

J. H. Wicks, a millionaire of New York city, fell out of the second-story window of a house of ill-repute in Detroit and was instantly killed.

Bicycle races, horse races, baseball games and balloon ascensions made every day a big day at the Eaton Rapids fair.

J. E. Greilick, an old resident of Traverse City, died of heart disease. Mr. Greilick was a member of the village council.

During the two fiscal years ended June, 1892, 5,321 books were added to the state library and $9,031.66 was expended.

The Davidson shipyard at West Bay City has just launched the steamer City of Naples, a sister ship to the City of Genoa and City of Vienna, built this summer. They cost $150,000 each.

Patsy J. Dillon, of Manistee, was sentenced to five years in state prison for taking improper liberties with a young girl whom he enticed to his office while justice of the peace.

A little 8-year-old son of J. H. Harvey, of Kalamazoo, was run over and killed by a train.

Wm. Walton, one of Ishpeming's prominent citizens, dropped dead on the street. He was talking to several men and in reply to a question said that he had never felt better. Just as he had spoken the words he fell to the ground dead.

The yacht Ino, with Spencer and George Dalby, Dr. Kelly, John Prevost, Edward McCready, Arthur Donaldson and George Willett, all of Mount Clemens, capsized in Lake St. Clair. The men clung to the keel ten hours, when all were rescued.

Orange Blossoms.

The beautiful home of Mr. J. R. Colvin in Raisin was the scene of a very pleasant wedding party last week Wednesday evening, Sept. 28th, when in the presence of between fifty and sixty invited guests, mostly relatives of the bride and groom, Mr. Colvin gave his youngest daughter, Nora V., in marriage to Mr. Walter H. Cornelius, also of Raisin.

At precisely eight p. m. the bridal party, to the music of the wedding march, entered the parlor, which seemed a sylvan bower of foliage and flowers, the bride and groom elect tarrying a few minutes beneath the floral horse-shoe while the Rev. Frank Arnold, late pastor of the Tecumseh Baptist Church, spoke the happily chosen words which made them husband and wife. The usual congratulations followed and a sumptuous repast was elegantly served. The remaining hours of the evening were pleasantly passed in social chat, interspersed with music, both vocal and instrumental, and in looking over and admiring the numerous beautiful and costly bridal gifts which testified to the love and esteem in which the young couple were held by those present.

The newly married pair are well known in our community, having grown up from childhood in our midst. We can most heartily congratulate Mr. Cornelius upon his choice of a wife, feeling assured that the daughter who, while yet a mere child, so lovingly watched and tended the dear mother all the way to her eternal rest, and has since then in the same beautiful manner, borne the sacred responsibilities of her father's and brother's home, must surely be "a crown of glory to her husband."

After a brief stay with the friends at home Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius will depart for California, taking with them the warmest wishes and most fervent prayers of those left behind for a pleasant journey and a safe return. Upon their return from the West they will take up their permanent residence in Raisin.

A modest but very enjoyable wedding party enlivened the residence of James B. Kennedy of Raisin last evening. About sixty guests assembled, mostly relatives, to witness the marriage of Bertha Bryan, a sister of Mrs. Kennedy's, to J. Marvin Hayden of Tecumseh. The exercises were very simple and informal. The bride and groom received the guests in person as they assembled, and when the appointed hour arrived, 6:30 o'clock, the happy pair quietly took their places beneath a large white ribbon knot suspended from the ceiling, and the nuptial knot was tied by Rev. J. Phelps, who said the marriage formula from the Episcopal ritual in his usual impressive manner. The bride was attered in white silk en train; the groom in a suit of plain black. Congratulations followed and the guests partook of a wedding tea, in harmony with the other appointments of the affair.

A fine array of wedding gifts gladdened the hearts of the happy couple and challenged the admiration of the guests. They took their departure on the ten o'clock evening train for Grand Rapids, where the groom has a home all prepared to receive them and where their permanent residence will be. Both groom and bride passed the years of their childhood in Tecumseh and have formed many friendships here which will last as long as life. They leave for their new home accompanied by the good wishes and benedictions of all, in which the HERALD heartily joins.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend our hartfelt thanks to the kind neighbors and friends who so willingly assisted us at the death of our mother, also for the beautiful floral gifts. Mr. Samuel Minor and family.

A reason for the faith that is in him. A responsible citizen of the South writes: From observation covering a great number of cases I unhesitatingly pronounce Salvation Oil to be the most wonderful remedy for burns I have ever tried.

"I have used Salvation Oil for frosted feet and backache and found it to be the best remedy and pain killer on earth. Mrs. Maggie Nieder, Mt. Pleasant, Westmoreland Co., Pa."

H. C. Ingraham and family have moved to Zanesville, Ohio, where he has a business position. Their many friends in Tecumseh will greatly regret their departure, but wish them good luck in their new home.

Ralph E. Hoyt, of California, will speak at Macon Grange hall, on Friday evening, Oct. 14th. He is a tariff reformer of advanced views, thoroughly posted and a vigorous talker. The voters of Macon should turn out to a man to hear him and they will hear some new truths presented in a new way.

Commissioner Field is entitled to considerable credit for the excellent School exhibit at the County Fair. The Tecumseh Schools carried off three prizes: A $10 steel engraving for the best general exhibit of graded schools; a framed portrait of Brayant for the best language work; Brewer's Reader's hand book for best examination papers above the eighth grade.

The County Fair last week was, in a financial point of view, the most successful ever held in the county. The receipts will pay all expenses and leave a good balance on hand. The exhibition itself was equally praiseworthy in nearly all the departments. The cattle department was deficient, but all others were well filled. The school exhibit was especially good.

Tecumseh will be represented at the State University this year by three students. W. V. Wolven has entered the Dental department. Claude VanTyne enters the Sophomore class in the Literary department. Miss Anna Bailey begins her Senior year; also in the Literary department. They all began their college duties the first of October.

The new mail route on the Jackson Branch was opened last Monday. An elegant new car has been provided for that train, consisting of a mail car and smoker combined. The new route will be a great convenience to our business men as it gives us a second daily mail both ways over the Lake Shore.

The live stock dealers of Tecumseh and vicintiy were well represented at the County Fair. Our horsemen had several of their best steppers on exhibition. Holloway & Osborne had 50 head of Poland Chinas; Will Osborne had 24 head of sheep; J. F. N. Bowen 14 head, and W. C. Witherell 17 head, all thoroughbred merinos. Walt Osborne had a fine exhibit of turkeys.

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC
BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements, and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. A HUNGRY MOB.

Starving Mexicans Overpower a Regiment of Troops.

They Seize a Storehouse and Sack It of Thousands of Bushels of Grain — One Man Killed—Speculators Responsible for the Famine.

FOUGHT FOR BREAD.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 3.—Homer Finlay, formerly a well-known citizen of San Antonio, but who for the past six years has been engaged in the mercantile business in the city of Morlia, Mexico, arrived here Sunday and gave a vivid account of the famine riot which occurred in that city last Sunday, and of which but very brief mention was made in the City of Mexico newspapers. He says that it was one of the most exciting and pitiable scenes ever witnessed in the republic, and that another serious outbreak of the same kind is threatened at any time.

Morila is the capital state of Michoacan and the residence of the archbishop of the diocese. It is one of the most beautiful cities in southern Mexico, but notwithstanding all of its attractions its several thousand poor people are on the verge of starvation, owing to the total failure of the crops for the last four seasons and a scarcity of all food supplies. Mr. Finlay said:

"When the famine was threatened several months ago several of the wealthy merchants of Morlia contracted for large quantities of corn in the United States, the total shipments amounting to 75,000 bushels, which is enough to have supplied the suffering people. These speculators, however, put up the prices and extorted what little money the poor people had in a short time. For the past two months the suffering among the poor has been intense and many deaths have occurred. The streets became thronged with beggars and the hungry men, women and children made a heartrending appeal for help.

"This was kept up until last Sunday, when the starving horde organized themselves into a mob and driven by desperation began a concerted attack upon the food stores of the city. There were fully 6,000 people in the mob, and the police were utterly powerless to stop its progress. One maiceria, or feed store, was entered and but little corn was found. The frenzy of the mob increased. The two regiments of federal cavalry and one of infantry stationed at Morlia were called out to quell the riot, but their appearance only added to the desperation of the starving people. The commander planted the soldiers in front of the mob, but they fought their way through. Several persons were injured.

"Gen. Mercado, the governor of the state, by this time had made his appearance and came near falling a victim to the vengeance of the mob, who claimed that he should have taken steps to relieve their suffering. The soldiers opened fire upon the people and one man was killed and several wounded. Acting on command of its leader the mob started for the granaries of Joseph Martinez, in which 5,000 bushels of corn were stored. They broke down the doors and supplied themselves with all they could carry away. As soon as their temporary wants had been supplied the mob quietly dispersed."

FOUR BODIES RECOVERED.

Remains of the Entombed Men Taken from the Norrie Mine.

ASHLAND, Wis., Oct. 3.—Up to 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening the bodies of four of the imprisoned miners in the Norrie mine were found. Two more are in sight. Those recovered are M. Downs, John Hermanson, Matt Mattson and one so badly mutilated he cannot be identified. All bodies were terribly mutilated. Decomposition had set in. The men are unable to get out the bodies that are in sight owing to broken timbers which are on top of them. The remains of the unfortunate miners were buried on Sunday.

TRADE IS GOOD.

Favorable Reports Come from All Over the Land.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—R. G. Dun & Co. say in their weekly review of trade:

"Business continues larger than ever at this time of the year and the commercial sky is without a cloud. Money is everywhere in ample supply and collections have rarely been more generally satisfactory. The outgo of money from western centers for purchases in the country is larger than usual, and yet there is no embarrassment. Crop reports are uniformly favorable and the promise is distinctly better than it was a few weeks ago. General business is not only large and healthy, but the outlook for the coming months is everywhere regarded with the utmost confidence.

"In the east and south trade is generally improved. At Cleveland trade is improving and larger than last year, and at Cincinnati the clothing trade is better than previous years, though a slight decline is seen at the south, for the western trade largely exceeds previous records. At Indianapolis general trade is fair. At Detroit trade increases over last year in some lines. Business is satisfactory at Milwaukee and crops secured in good shape. Chicago reports merchandise sales greater than last year and all conditions good. Receipts of products show increase in everything except rye. At St. Louis trade is distinctly better and collections prompt. At St. Paul business is larger than a year ago; at Omaha active; at Kansas City good, with heavy receipts of cattle and grain, and elevators about full. Business at Denver is moderate.

Speculation in breadstuffs is lower, with small transactions. Wheat and oats are nearly a cent and corn 1⅛ cents lower. Hog products are higher, pork 75 cents per barrel, lard 55, and ribs 25 per 100 lbs. Coffee is an eighth stronger, but oil about 2 cents lower.

"The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 208, as compared with 211 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 220."

INDIAN CORN.

Progress of Its Introduction Into Germany—Mills Established at Hamburg.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Colchas J. Murphy, special representative in Europe of the United States agricultural department, has written a letter from Berlin to John C. New, the American consul here, stating that Charles Scholvin will open his new Indian corn mill at Hamburg this month. He will grind only American corn. He has the latest improved American machinery. This will make two corn mills in Hamburg for the exclusive grinding of the American grain. The first mill erected had to work night and day, and then could not fill its orders. Col. Murphy adds that he expects to place the corn in every part of the country. He will begin by giving the people gratis large quantities of the flour as samples. A large bakery is soon to be opened in Berlin where nothing will be produced but what is made of corn. He further says that the report of the government commission appointed to examine into the method of preparing corn will soon be issued, and that he has been assured that it will be highly favorable to corn as human food.

A NIGHT IN THE CLOUDS.

Aeronaut Baldwin Crosses Two States at an Altitude of Four and a Half Miles.

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 1.—Prof. Ivy Baldwin, the aeronaut, and Col. Franklin Eugene Brown, editor of the Quincy Herald, returned to this city Friday night. The twain made a remarkable ascension in the new white airship Mars. They left Quincy at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon and remained all night in the clouds. During the journey they passed over the cities of Keokuk, Fort Madison, Montrose, West Point and Burlington, Ia.; Carter, Mo., and Carthage, Gladstone and Monmouth, Ill., landing at 10 o'clock Friday morning 4 miles from Biggsville, near the latter place. The journey was a record breaker in many particulars. They attained the altitude of 4½ miles and traversed Iowa and Illinois Friday morning at a speed exceeding 60 miles an hour. The landing was a perilous one, made without anchor or ballast.

BODIES BLOWN TO PIECES.

The Boiler of a Locomotive Explodes, Killing an Engineer and Fireman.

DU BOIES, Pa., Oct. 1.—At 12:10 a. m. Friday, the boiler of an engine on the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railroad exploded near Grove Summit, and Levi Wise and Charles Flynn, engineer and fireman, were blown to pieces. The engine was used for pushing coal trains from the yards here over the summit. A run had just been completed and the engine men were awaiting orders to return.

An Extra Session.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 3.—Another special session of the legislature to enact a new legislative apportionment to take the place of the gerrymander law No. 2, which was overthrown by the supreme court Saturday, will be held Tuesday, October 11. This was settled at a conference of democratic leaders held here Sunday, and as soon as the supreme court formerly hands down its decision a call for the special session will be issued by Gov. Peck.

Flax Works Burned.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 1.—The works of the American Flax Fiber Company at Austin, Minn., were destroyed by fire Friday night. Loss, $15,000 to $20,000; no insurance. This is a serious blow to the flax industry of southern Minnesota. The plant was but recently established. It was to have used a large amount of the flax straw grown in that locality. The mill will be rebuilt. It was owned by New York capitalists.

A MOTHER'S WAKING.

All night the dews in silence wept,
And through the pale the moon's pale beams
Played on the floor in silver streams,
While by my side my baby slept.

So soft, so sweet, the midnight stole,
It stilled the breezes on the lea,
And hushed the murmur of the sea,
And hushed the strife within my soul;

And silenced all the questions wild,
That come between our faith and God,
And bade me lie beneath the rod,
Calmly as lay the sleeping child.

Then slumber on my eyelids pressed,
And dimmed the moonbeams silver clear,
And hushed the sound I loved to hear—
The breathing of the babe at rest.

Till o'er the sea in rosy light
The flush of morning slowly crept,
And whispering breezes softly swept
The silent shadows of the night.

Then wrapt in dreamland far away,
I saw the angels come and go,
And flutter of their white wings show
Like ocean bird at dusk of day.

They came and looked within my eyes,
With their sweet eyes so pure and true,
And sang low songs all strange and new,
The music of the eternal skies.

But waking, lo! a cherub smiled.
Heaven in her soft eyes' azure deep,
And radiant from her rosy sleep,
An angel half, and half a child.

And little hands were touching me,
And tiny rills of laughter broke
From lips that kissed me as I woke,
And called my name in baby glee.

And all the vision Heavenward swept—
Lost in the gold and crimson sky,
Their farewell whispers floating by—
One angel in my arms I kept.

TO SPITE CUB CONNERS.

Why Abel Chased Bruin—The Discouraging Result.

The bear would never have been chased so long nor so far, at that time of year, when its fur was worthless and its meat not yet in condition fit even for hungry campers to eat, if it hadn't been that old Woodsman Abel Fuller, of Kettle Creek, was determined that it shouldn't fall into the hands of Cub Conners.

"It's a 'tarnal shame to out that b'ar's campaign short," old Abel had said, "him just a-startin' in fer the summer, an' promisin' to swell out three or four hundred pound o' the best kind o' hide, meat and taller, 'long about Thanksgivin' time; but Cub Conners 'll get him, sure as powder, if we don't, so it'll be doin' the b'ar a mercy an' spitin' Cub at the same time fer us to pitch in an' save him by killin' of him ourselfs."

This was down on Barley run, on the edge of the big hemlock woods. Abel had returned to the cabin on the creek after a day's trout fishing just in time to see the bear walking out of the shanty with a piece of pork and disappear in the laurels. There was only one gun in camp. The gun was Abel's. Wherever the old woodsman goes he takes his gun with him, and it is always loaded for bear. So Abel, when he saw the bear walking away with the pork, had stood still in his tracks for a moment, and then said:

"That b'ar hain't good fer nothin', but we'll have to git him. If we don't Cub Conners 'll gether him in' an' I wouldn't have that happen fer a hull menagerie full of b'ar. So I'll go over to Jim Souser's an' git another gun, an' tell Jim to come over here 'arly to-morrow mornin' hisself, 'n fetch his dog. Keep your eye peeled fer the b'ar, sonny, while I'm gone, an' if he comes out o' that laurel patch an' goes to crossin' the creek, with his head p'intin' north, give him both o' them bar'ls o' my gun an' tumble him, fer if he gits acrosst that creek an' p'ints fer north he'll be goin' straight fer Cub Conners', an' Cub 'll git him, an' it's to pertect the b'ar from Cub Conners that we're goin' to kill him ourselfs."

Then Abel started for Jim Souser's shanty, which was down on Fair Run, two miles distant, through the woods. Cub Conners was a dweller in that wilderness that none of the hunters liked. He lived by himself in the center of one of the best hunting and fishing regions and had a cheerful way of shooting the dogs of other hunters who went into woods, of burning down their shanties, of even taking a sly shot at hunters themselves once in awhile, it was said, and of making himself as offensive and damaging to them as he could find ways and means of doing. Consequently he was hated and feared of all other woodsmen, and they lost no opportunity of checkmating him in the way of getting game, even if they had to put themselves to no end of trouble, or remove a deer out of season or run down a bear under a July sun. It was to prevent the possibility of this camp-looting bear that Abel had discovered from falling into the hands of this despised Cub Conners that the old woodsman was going to so much trouble to run it down himself, right in the height of the best trout fishing.

It was long after dark when Abel got back from Jim Souser's. Three men with guns were with him and two dogs.

"The b'ar hain't p'inted fer Cub Conners', has he?" asked Abel.

No; the bear hadn't.

"Then he won't p'int there to-night, an' we'll save him from the disgrace o' doin' of it to-morrow," said Abel. "Jim Souser wan't to home, an' I'm dum sorry, fer I don't know anybody as could keep that b'ar out of Cub's hands as well as Jim could. But we've got his dogs, an' here's some fellers as has come to help us save the b'ar, though they hain't never experienced b'ar yit. But they're jist spilin' to git a whack at one."

"That's jist what we be!" exclaimed one of the three. "We'd like to git at him to-night!"

"You kin see him jist as well by daylight," said Abel. "So we'll wait till mornin'."

Early next morning the old woodsman sent the dogs into the laurel patch, having stationed us in various positions around the big thicket. The dogs worked about in the swamp for nearly an hour before they routed up the bear. Then there was a sudden burst of yelps and growls and loud snapping of savage jaws. The laurels crashed and swayed. The bear had been started, and, contrary to the expectation of old Abel, his head was p'inted north. Crash! crash! Snap! snarl! yelp! growl! Away toward the edge of the laurels dogs and bear tumbled and fought. Abel himself was on one side of the patch, a long distance from where the bear was making a break to escape from the tangle of laurels. He ran toward the spot as fast as he could. He had stationed there two of the ardent "fellers" he had brought from Jim Souser's camp, but he wanted to be there himself. When he reached the spot all was quiet. One of the hunters was leaning against a tree. He was as white as a sheet. He was Dan Space, the hunter who had wanted to start right in after the bear without waiting for morning.

"Where's the b'ar?" exclaimed Abel.

"Didn't see no b'ar!" replied Dan, his teeth chattering.

The bear had come out not twenty feet from him, crossed the creek and gone on north.

"That b'ar 'most run over you, by Juniper!" cried Abel, "an' you've stood by an' made a present of it to Cub Conners, 'stid o' fillin' it with lead!"

But the dogs were on the trail, and, led by Abel, we followed, in the hope of still saving the bear from Cub Conners. All but Dan Space. Abel told him his eyesight was too poor to hunt bear, and sent him home. For six miles, over hills, through thickets, across hollows we followed the bear and the dogs. Harassed by the dogs, the bear's progress was slow, but rapid enough to keep just far enough ahead of us to prevent anyone getting a shot.

"If we don't gether in that b'ar 'fore he gits through that laurel patch yender, or else git him p'inted south ag'in," said Abel, "he's Cub Conners' meat, an' nothin' surer."

The laurel patch was off to the right, and the bear was heading for it. Abel made a short cut across a hill to reach the patch and go around to its upper edge before the bear could reach it, directing us to take positions in the hollow south of the patch.

"If the b'ar gits through them laurels," said he, "I'll be there an' stop him with some lead. If the lead don't heft him down so he can't travel no more, he'll turn an' lead the dogs back ag'in, an' then you fellers kin put some more lead in him. If he keeps on a-goin', we've saved him anyhow, fer we'll be gittin' him back out o' the reach o' Cub Conners."

Abel got around the patch before the bear got into it, and we got to our places in the hollow some time after the bear disappeared in the laurels. Ten minutes later the report of Abel's rifle echoed among the hills. Not long afterward the bear and the two dogs came tumbling out of the thicket and rolled in a heap down a knoll into the hollow. When the bear got to his feet and shuffled on his way again only one dog followed him. The other he had crushed to death in the struggle down the knoll. Three rifle balls were sent after him as he crossed the hollow, the remaining dog at his heels, but he kept right on. We were soon joined by Abel, who, although the bear had successfully run the gauntlet of every gun and had killed one of the dogs, was radiant.

"We've euchered Cub Conners, all the same!" he exclaimed. "I wish that dog layin' over yender had a ben him! We'll git that b'ar back into our laurel patch, an' then he's our meat!"

Back over the six miles of hill and thicket and hollow, weary, hot, hungry, thirsty, tattered and soiled, we followed the trail once more. It was late in the afternoon when we ran the bear into the laurels we had started him from in the morning.

"Now, then, by Juniper!" exclaimed Abel, "I'm gointer foller that b'ar right into the patch, an' have some fun with him. We got him away from Cub Conners pooty slick, an' I'll twit the consarned pirate of it next time I see him."

Abel was about to plunge into the laurel patch, after directing us where to go, when the report of a rifle, quickly followed by another, came from the edge of the patch, off to the right. Abel looked surprised. I hurried off in the direction of the shots, and Abel came along. On that side of the laurels I came suddenly upon a strapping big backwoodsman. He was leaning on the muzzle of his rifle. One foot was on a big bear that lay dead on the ground, with Jim Souser's remaining dog sniffling at it. The woodsman was looking at us with a peculiar grin. Abel stopped as if he had been shot when he saw the man. As soon as he found his voice he exclaimed:

"Cub Conners, by Juniper!"

"I ben tryin' to round up this cunnin' old b'ar fer two weeks," said the woodsman, "but he was too many fer me alone. I'm much obleedged to you fellers for helpin' me out with him."

He grinned worse than ever. Abel turned on his heel and strode back to camp, and I followed him. He didn't speak for an hour. Then he smote the flat of one hand with his fist and exclaimed:

"B'ars hain't safe in these woods no more!"—N. Y. Sun.

UNDER ARREST.

Strikers at Homestead, Pa., Charged with Treason.

The Supreme Court Issues Warrants for the Arrest of the Leaders Under the Charge of Their Being Traitors to the State.

FIRST OF THE KIND.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 1. — The supreme court of Pennsylvania assembled here Friday for the October term and its first act was to issue warrants for the arrest of the members of the advisory committee of the Homestead strikers on the charge of treason for setting up in defiance of the constituted authority of the state a traitorous and rebellious government of its own in Homestead in July last. The information was made before Chief Justice Paxton by County Detective Harry Beltzhoover in the name of the commonwealth against the following persons:

David H. Shannon, John McLuckie, David Lynch, Thomas J. Crawford, Hugh O'Donnell, Harry Bayne, Elmer E. Ball, Isaac Byers, Henry Bayard, Y. W. Brown, George Champano, Isaac Critchlow, Miller Colgan, John Coyle, Jack Clifford, Dennis M. Cush, William McConegly, Michael Cummings, William Combs, John Dierken, Patrick Fagan, W. H. Gusher, Matthew Harris, Reid Kennedy, John Miller, O. S. Scaright, John Murray, M. H. Thompson, Martin Murray, Hugh Ross, William I. Roberts, George Rylands and George W. Sarver.

THE INFORMATION.

The information states that the defendants, who are inhabitants and residents of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, "did ordain, prepare and levy war against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to the end that the constitution, laws and authority were defied, resisted and subverted; and that the said defendants, on July 1, with hundreds of others, armed and arrayed in warlike manner, that is to say, with guns, revolvers, cannons, swords, knives and clubs, did unlawfully, maliciously and traitorously assemble together in the borough of Homestead, in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and then and there with force and arms did falsely and traitorously and in hostile and warlike manner array themselves in insurrection and rebellion against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania contrary to the duty of allegiance and fidelity of the said defendants."

WARRANTS ISSUED.

Chief Justice Paxton at once issued warrants for the arrest of the accused and officers were dispatched by the sheriff to Homestead to serve them. The action of the county authorities was entirely unexpected and carried consternation into the camp of the strikers. This is the first time in the history of the state that any resident has been charged with treason against the commonwealth and the outcome of the cases will be watched with interest. The penalty, which was formerly death, is twelve years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

AT HOMESTEAD.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Oct. 1.—Chairman Thomas J. Crawford, William Baird, George Ryland, John Dierken and T. W. Brown, of the advisory committee, were arrested Friday night. The prisoners were hurried to the provost guard tents. It was intended first to keep the prisoners all night and hunt for others, but through fear of an attempt at rescue they were taken to City Farm station, placed on the train, brought to Pittsburgh at 11 o'clock and landed in jail. At the station a crowd of 150 angry men assembled with astonishing rapidity and their determined looks caused apprehension. Two deputies tried to keep them back, but by the time the train arrived they had almost surrounded the group of prisoners and officers. When the train pulled out a sullen jeer of defiance went up and Chairman Crawford said: "They can persecute us, but they can't make us go to work."

STRIKERS ARRAIGNED.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 3.—The five members of the advisory board of the Homestead strikers who were arrested Friday night on a charge of high treason were arraigned before Justice Paxson Saturday. They pleaded not guilty and Justice Paxson on application fixed the bail of each at $10,000. Only one of them, William Baird, had bondsmen at hand and the attorneys for the others said they would furnish bail on Monday. W. J. Brennan, chief counsel for the strikers, said that the probable outcome of the arrest would be the preferring of charges of high treason against the Carnegie officials.

At Homestead the strikers say that if a conviction is obtained they will carry the cases to the United States supreme court. They claim that as a state cannot declare war there can be no treason to a state government, and that therefore the old law is not valid. The Lawrenceville strikers are expecting that a like move will be made against them.

Sale of Sawmills and Pine Lands.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Oct. 3.—The Mississippi River Logging Company sold its sawmills and pine lands on the Eau Claire river to the Northwestern Lumber Company, of this city. The mills are located here. The consideration was about $700,000. The deal has been pending for two years.

New Trial Refused.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1.—The circuit court has refused a new trial to P. J. Elliott, one of the Elliott Brothers, publishers, one of whom is serving a life and the other a twenty years' sentence for precipitating a shooting affray last year.

Killed by a House Blowing Down.

UVALDE, Tex., Oct. 3.—A house near Bennet Ditch farm, 18 miles below town, was blown down Saturday in a hurricane. Two Mexicans were killed and three others were badly crippled.

Broke the Wheel Record.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 30.—W. W. Windle lowered the world's 5-mile bicycle record here yesterday, riding the full distance in 11 minutes 41 seconds.

Dr. O. J. Fay & Co.:
Gentlemen.—It is with pleasure that we reply to your letter asking about our success with Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Six months ago we gave our first order and since then we have sold eight times as much as our first order amounted to more than any other lung medicine we sell. Our customers after once using it want no other and they are always sure to recommend it to some other sufferer. It could not give better satisfaction and we have so much faith in what it will do that we are not afraid to recommend it to any person in need of a lung medicine. With many wishes for your success,
Yours truly,
W. UAGER & SON.

PHYSICIANS CALLED IT CONSUMPTION.

What Two Bottles of Hamilton's Cough Balsam Did.

Bristol Center, Ont. Co., N. Y., June 24th, 1892.
I sold Hamilton's Cough Balsam to John Worden for his daughter Delia, who was suffering from a severe lung disease following after a serious attack of typhoid pneumonia, four years ago in May. Physicians said she had Consumption and everything indicated they were not far from right. She came to my store resting upon pillows and could not sit up, with a bad cough and apparently not long to live. I persuaded her to take a sample bottle of Hamilton's Balsam. She took it and two regular sized bottles, and picked hops the next September, seemingly in good health and has been well and healthy since then.
Yours truly, E. W Burge Druggist.
Hamilton's Cough Balsam is sold by your druggist. Large bottles 25 cents. Extra large bottles 50 cents.

DO HORSES THINK?

If they do, they certainly think Parmelee's Condition Powders are the best medicine they get. Full pound 25 cts. Red wrappers.

TO ESCAPE THE CHOLERA.

Don't get scared. Keep clean in person and surroundings. Keep the system generally in vigorous tone Keep the secretions active. See to it that the stomach and bowels are in good condition. Especially have the liver, that great cleanser of the system, active and vigorous. If these points are carefully attended to there is little chance for disease germs to find lodgement in the system. These conditions are not difficult to produce. One of the simplest and best aids toward all this is Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. Their action upon the stomach, liver and bowels, is such as to correct any irregularity or derangement and put them in normal, active condition. Only 25 cents a bottle at druggists.

GOOD FOR MAN! GOOD FOR BEAST!

Parmelee's Universal Liniment for all Bone, Flesh and Muscle Diseases. It is guaranteed to give relief. The best Liniment made. Sold by dealers.

The Dearest Spot on Earth is the spot that's washed out without Pearline. It costs in clothes, in the rubbing and scrubbing that wears them out quickly; it takes twice the time, and double the labor. It's expensive washing before you get through with it—and the cost comes home to you, no matter who does the work.

Pearline saves money by saving work, wear, and time. It hurts nothing; washes and cleans everything. It costs no more than common soap, but it does more. It's cheap to begin with—but it's cheapest in the end.

Beware of imitations of Pearline which are being peddled from door to door. 196 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head

ACHE is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

FAIL TO DO THEIR DUTY.

Everybody has at times failed to do their duty toward themselves. Hundreds of lady readers suffer from sick headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and female troubles. Let them follow the example of Mrs. H. Herbechter, Stevens Point, Wis., who for five years suffered greatly from Nervous Prostration and sleeplessness, tried physicians and different medicines without success. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine caused sound sleep every night and she is feeling like a new person. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Laramie City, Wyoming, who tried all other remedies, declares that after three week's use of Nervine for headache, nervous prostration, etc., she was entirely relieved. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists. Trial bottle free.

Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Most people need to use it.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., OCT. 6, 1892.

Mrs. Ed VanDeMark returned from Adrian last Saturday.

Mrs. Ella Rose and daughter Blanche left here Tuesday for Detroit.

B. F. Thompson has been with friends in Clayton since last Thursday.

Henry Fox, of Tecumseh, visited his mother in Bridgewater over Sunday.

Daniel O'Reilly returned to Lansing last Saturday after a two weeks' visit here.

Neil Williams went to Ann Arbor last Saturday to commence his third year at the University.

Dr. J. L. Tuttle left last Thursday for a stay of a week or two with friends in Ann Arbor and Flint.

Mrs. E. M. Conklin and son and Master Bennie Root, of Manchester, spent Sunday at A. G. Burton's.

Mrs. John Heesen and Mrs. G. W. Jackson, of Tecumseh, were guests of Mrs. Frank Lancaster Wednesday.

Messrs. Hogan and Richmond are painting the interior of the Muir market and expect to open it in a few days.

Frank Johnston, of Oxford Junction, Iowa, and Charles Johnston, of Detroit, have been visiting at L. H. Johnston's.

Miss Eva Shimman left Clinton Monday morning for Adrian. She has a position in Miss Whipple's millinery store.

The Baptist Society will hold their next social at E. L. Clapp's, Evans Lake, Tuesday, Oct. 11. Dinner will be served about noon. All are cordially invited.

The Woolen Mill Co. changed time Oct. 1st. The working hours are now from 6:45 a. m. to 12, and from 12:45 to 6 p. m., except Saturdays, when the mill closes at 3 p. m.

Mrs. Will Hall accompanied her mother home from Milwaukee last week Tuesday. She will return Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Hall are well pleased with their new home.

Mrs. Lew Hendershot, of Harvey, Ill., arrived here last Thursday for a few days' visit. She expects her husband soon and they will leave here for Maine, where they have decided to locate.

The Democrats have secured Ralph E. Hoyt of Chicago to give an address on "Tariff Reform" at the town hall Monday evening, Oct. 10th. An interesting address is looked for, inasmuch as Mr. Hoyt stumped the country for Harrison four years ago.

The ladies' society of the M. E. church held their annual social in the church basement Wednesday afternoon. A large crowd was present, officers for the ensuing year were elected, and a good time enjoyed by all.

ONLY ONE CENT.

A Radical Departure Made by The Detroit Evening News.

On Monday, Oct. 3. The Detroit Evening News, the largest and most popular afternoon paper in Michigan, made a new and radical departure by dropping its price from two cents to one cent per copy, or six cents per week; this action will be supported by renewed and far reaching improvements in the matter of news gathering, editorial, literary features, illustrations, etc., which will not only place the paper far in advance of its present excellent standard, but detailed plans have been made to make The People's Paper of Michigan the finest and best one cent paper in the west.

The News was the pioneer in the two-cent newspaper field in the west, and prospered in that field. The facilities it now has, in the way of men, material and machinery, and the fact that paper, ink, etc., is far cheaper than ever before, makes it a duty the paper owes to the public to reduce its subscription price down to the lowest possible notch, and at the same time raise the standard of excellence of product to the very highest point attainable. That duty will be performed, and no thought, labor or money shall be spared in the effort.

Push, persistency and progress shall be the watchwords. The News has never broken a promise it made to the public, and never will, and it now declares that this time henceforth, it will be the largest, best and cheapest daily paper in Michigan, and its circulation and influence, now, by far the greatest, will be extended to the fullest possible limit.

There is not a town in Michigan where it does not circulate, and the work has just begun.

The Evening News, henceforth for one cent a copy, six cents per week, or three dollars a year, and you can get it of the newsboys in every town in Michigan, or at every news stand, or by mail.

THE SINGLE TAX.

Its Adoption Would Solve the Labor Problem.

The single tax is a tax on land values, irrespective of improvements, to the exclusion of all other taxes. The value of land is caused by the increased competition for its use, and is due to the growth of population and public improvements.

If in force in this country—
It would raise wages.
It would lower rent.
It would encourage industries.
It would equalize opportunities.
It would benefit all (except land speculators, as such).

Land is now held idle because it is not assessed at its full value. The present system discriminates against the land user and in favor of the land speculator. In some localities it is a greater crime to build a hen-house than to steal hens. The latter is punished by the payment of one fine, but the former offense involves payment of a penalty annually. The levying of taxes on land values cheapens land. With such a tax it will not pay to keep land idle, therefore the owner will either seek labor and capital to make it productive, sell it at a low price, or abandon it to others. Natural opportunities will then be opened to labor. Workmen who can not make fair bargains with employers will then be able to employ themselves, not that every body will take to farming, but that with agricultural, mining and building lands accessible to those willing to put them to use, there would be no lack of employment, and wages in all industries would rise to their natural level—the full earnings of labor. The labor problem is—how shall all men willing to work always find opportunity to work and thus increase wealth? The single tax, by opening to labor all the forms of natural opportunities embraced under the general term land, solves the labor problem.

By the erection of dwelling houses upon vacant lots, house rents would be reduced by the competition between landowners for tenants.

As a result of taxing the coal lands of Pennsylvania as agricultural land, the coal barons are enabled to hold out of use whole counties of coal land. They curtail the output and raise the price of coal at will. If the coal land was taxed at its full value, the coal barons would only pay tax on the land which they were using. Labor and capital would then have free access to the unused coal land, and the competition between mine operators for customers would make coal cheaper than it could be furnished by such a charity scheme as the nationalistic fad of municipal coal yards. When a coal mine is closed, the world is deprived of the wealth which labor would have extracted from it had it been kept open. When a city lot is kept vacant, the community is deprived of the building which labor would have erected had it been put to use; and in each case laborers are deprived of the wages they would have earned.

As lack of employment is the cause of poverty, the adoption of the reform offered would abolish unnecessary poverty, and the greed, intemperance and vice that spring from poverty and the fear of poverty.

Single taxers advocate the abolition of every form of restriction that in any way abridges the free and equal rights of all to sustain life by having free access to all common bounties of nature, without the use of which life can not be sustained. Those natural bounties are air, water, sunshine and land. As the first three elements are now free to all, we propose to take by taxation the rental value of land, in order that the equal right of all to the use of the earth may be established.

And if equal rights to all are to be secured, it is not only just but becomes necessary that ground rent should go into the public treasury, in order that no one shall derive any advantage over his fellows by the possession of natural advantage. Ground rent is sufficient to defray all the expenses of government, and it is not necessary to have a multiplicity of taxes.

The necessity for government and the value of land are both the result of population, and the revenue of ground rent from the one should be made to pay the expenses of the other.—W. L. Crossman, in St. Louis Courier.

Farmers and Taxes.

It requires no grasp of abstractions for the working farmer to see that to abolish all taxation, save upon the value of land, would be to his interest, no matter how it might affect larger landholders. Let the working farmer consider how the weight of indirect taxation falls upon him without having power to shift off upon anyone else; how it adds to the price of nearly everything he has to buy, without adding to the price of what he has to sell; how it compels him to contribute to the support of government in far greater proportion to what he possesses than it does those who are much richer, and he will see that by the substitution of direct for indirect taxation he would be largely the gainer. Let him consider further and he will see that he will be still more largely the gainer if direct taxation were confined to the value of land. The land of the working farmer is improved land, and usually the value of the improvements and of the stock used in cultivating it bear a very high proportion to the value of the bare land. Now, as all valuable land is not improved as is that of the working farmer—as there is much more of valuable land than of improved land—to substitute for the taxation now levied upon improvements and stock, a tax upon the naked value of land, irrespective of improvements, would be manifestly to the advantage of the owners of improved land, and especially of small owners the value of whose improvements bears a much higher ratio to the value of the land than is the case with larger owners, and who, as one of the effects of treating improvements as a proper subject of taxation, are taxed far more heavily, even upon the value of their land, than are larger owners.

CHAMPIONS OF TRUTH.

AIR—America.

Champions of truth and right,
We hail thy names to-night,
With loud acclaim;
We'll lift our voices high,
And with each other vie,
For Grover and Adlai,
Their worth proclaim!

Let strains of music swell,
And victory fortell
In joyous song;
Let every patriot voice
Sing for the people's choice,
And in their deeds rejoice;
Their praise prolong!

The plutocratic lash,
The tariff baron's cash,
Can ne'er enslave
The freeman of this land,
So long as we shall stand
A sturdy, patriot band,
Our homes to save!

Hail, then, our leaders true,
Grover and Adlai too,
Of thee we sing;
From vale and valley wide,
From ev'ry mountain side,
We in their power confide
To victory bring!

Hon. J. R. Bennett, who was complimented by the Republican county convention with the nomination for coroner, is also a candidate on the state ticket as an alternate elector. In order to avoid any complication, Mr. Bennett has withdrawn from the contest for coroner, and at a meeting of the executive section of the county committee a few days ago, Mr. Bennett's withdrawal was formally accepted, and Mr. Samuel M. Hamilton named for the vacant place.

European and American Ideas.

Chairman Clarkson, in his address to the National League of Republican Clubs, reitered his old charge that American colleges were teaching European ideas upon economic questions. He forgot, as he has at all times, to state that sound ideas upon economical and financial questions are not of any country, but apply equally to all. What is sound doctrine upon these subjects for France, Germany or Russia is likely to be sound for our own country as well in the long run. General Clarkson is not the first or only man who has promulgated the idea that the U. S. are exempt from the laws which govern the financial and business world, but, General Clarkson to the contrary notwithstanding, it is true that the policy which lays the least burdens upon the majority of the people and gives them the soundest currency on which to carry on their busines transactions, is the best whether it be labeled European or something else. Water can't be made to run up hill in the United States any easier than in Europe or elsewhere. —Philadelphia Times.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee. ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 19th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of David Smeltzer, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Smeltzer, executor of the last will and testament and upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to the terms of said will: that he may be discharged and his bond canceled, and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper,

It is ordered, That Monday, the 17th day of October, next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Aunt Ann Allen is still very sick. Considering that her age is almost ninety three, there seems but slight hopes of her recovery. The Dr. we are happy to say, thinks she will get well.

Jehiel Wisner has been spending a few days with his brother, Edward and other friends. In a few weeks he expects to move his family to his son Eddie's colony in Louisiana where they mean to make a permanent home. Mr. Wisner is enthusiastic about the South, the infection has spread and a number of people here have the Louisiana fever.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

James Smith, one of our oldest settlers, died last week Wednesday. The funeral was held Friday, at 10 a. m., at the home of his son George, with whom he had lived since the death of his wife three years ago.

The Republican meeting Tuesday afternoon called out quite a crowd. Mr. O'Donnell gave an able and comprehensive talk and understandingly portrayed the advantages of the protective system and the objects of the party for which he flies his colors. He left immediately afterward for Deerfield, where he delivered another address in the evening.

The Morning Light is Breaking.

AIR—"Webb."

The morning light is breaking,
The darkness disappears,
The people now are waking;
Freemen, discard your fears!
Each breeze that sweeps the ocean
Brings tidings of good cheer,
Of laboring men's devotion
To the cause which they hold dear.

We'll end our war taxation,
Pull down the tariff wall;
McKinley's pet vexation
Will totter to its fall.
The tariff barons' plunder
Will soon forever cease;
The clouds will break asunder
And bring the dawn of peace.

If we stand up for Grover
The battle will be won;
The cruel war is over,
The days of peace have come.
The people now will hear us
Reveal their mighty power,
And new recruits to cheer us
Are gathering every hour.

The plutocrats are bending,
They soon will get their due,
The people are commending
Our leaders, tried and true.
We'll find our full salvation,
Sail in, on rising tide;
Give Benny a vacation,
With Grover for our guide.

S. C. STACY.

Marching to Victory.

AIR—"Tramp, tramp, tramp!"

We will plant our flag to-night
In the thickest of the fight,
While we shout for Grover and for Adlai too,
And we'll all go marching on,
Till the victory shall be won,
Guided by our noble leaders, tried and true.

CHORUS—
Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching,
Close battalions, here they come;
And beneath our honored flag
We will battle once again,
Till a grand and glorious victory shall be won.
We will wipe the tariff out,
And we'll send it up the spout,
And we'll ship the robbers up Salt River sure;
While the Grover Cleveland squall
Will intoxicate them all,
Till they need a course of Dr. Keeley's cure.

CHORUS.
The hosts of laboring men,
They are with us once again,
By the million they are rising in their might;
They are battling for their homes,
For their wives and little ones,
And enlisted till the closing of the fight.

CHORUS.
And the farmers at the plow,
They are also with us now,
For at last they've got the wool from out their eyes;
While war taxes they will cease
And the people live in peace,
When our Grover draws the Presidential prize.

Golden Wedding.

A happy event took place at Britton October 5th, that being the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Rev. E. W. Borden and wife. Except the oldest son, whose home is in Colorado, all their children, with their families, were present.

The most honored guest present was a sister of the bride, Mrs. A. Love, of Shiawassee county, Michigan, who was the only one present who had witnessed the early marriage in New York City.

The occasion was interspersed with music, recitations, the reading of the family history, and an original poem. The aged father administered the pleasing and impressive rite of baptism upon the youngest child of the youngest son. He then gave a brief and tender recital of his eventful pioneer service in the Gospel ministry in this State, and closed with the father's blessing.

The rooms were beautiful with choice flowers from the couple's own garden, the tables being decked with roses and pansies. It is rare that roses are gathered in handfuls from the open garden in October and it would seem that these were spared to them for this special occasion.

The guests present were a daughter, Mrs. H. B. Palmer, of Buffalo, N. Y.; a daughter, Mrs. A. B. Rice, her husband, daughter and son, of Clio, Mich.; a son, the Rev. Geo. W. Borden, of Gladwin, Mich., with wife and three children; a daughter, Mrs. F. E. B. Exelby, and her husband, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Love and daughter, of Shiawassee county, Mich.

The golden gifts were many, beautiful and valuable.

THE GOLDEN.

Though through seeding and through tilling,
By labor hard and cares we're holden,
When at last the bins are filling
The harvest time we call the golden.

Though spring's length'ning day inviteth,
And summer's wings with hush are folden,
Autumn's richness most delighteth
The waning days we call the golden.

Though youth and vigor, grace and beauty,
Lent enchantment to days the olden,
Yet age, matured in love and duty,
Wedded still to truth, is golden.

Golden wedding, golden days!
For golden labor, golden praise!
From your children, far and near,
And their children, love with cheer
Cometh greeting,
Father, mother, dear!

Combination Sale.

On Tuesday, Oct. 18, there will be offered at public sale on the Dundee race track, a choice of highly bred trotting horses and roadsters, consigned by different parties. The stock to be sold includes Stallions, Brood Mares, Geldings, Colts and and Fillies, from noted trotting families. It is the first combination sale in this section of Michigan and will give the horsemen of this vicinity an opportunity to purchase first class stock without the expense and inconvenience of a trip to the great horse markets of Kentucky. Every horseman in this section should attend this sale.

Sale commences at 11 o'clock a. m. and continues until stock is sold.

A Model Husband.

John Dillon the eminent comedian, who has been one of the greatest favorites of the decade, for over thirty years, is said to be making the hit of his life this season in his new comedy by C. T. Dazey entitled, "A Model Husband." Benjaman Bascum, (Dillon's character) is an elderly New York stock broker, who has the power to successfully fight the bulls and bears on Wall street, but is unable to contend with a superior force at home, therefore filling the role of a hen pecked husband. His extremely strong-minded and jealous wife, "Marie" having held the reins of domestic government for twenty-one years finally concludes, that through her unremitting training she has indeed, a model husband, and decides to trust him alone while she goes to Loon-Lake on a visit, little heeding that warning, "O'h What may man within him hide though angel on the outward side, Marie's leaving gives vent to the repressed and concentrated wickedness of twenty-one years, boiling within Bascum's breast. He lets himself loose, and indulges in frivolities of every discription. His last escapade is to assume his nephew's name and carry on a flirtation with a charming young widow, which leads him to Tarrytown, where he meets his wife and complications follow each other in rapid succession. While Bascum appears as hero of every trouble and gets the credit of all wrongdoing, it is proven in the end, that he is more sinned against than sinning. He learns the moral that forbidden fruit isn't always the sweetest, and his wife sees her mistakes in drawing the reins too lightly and forgivingly reflects, "Virtuous and vicious every man must be; few in the extremes, but all in the degree."

A Promising Trotter.

The Bidwell Stock Farm Co. are owners of the six year old stallion John L., who has this season made a proud record for himself. He trotted at South Bend, Ind., on Sept. 15, making a record of 2:26, 3-4 and four days later at Sturgis, Mich., lowering his record to 2:23 1-4. At the County Fair at Adrian he won the 2:25 trot in three straight heats, and did it without effort. He is a beautiful blood bay, 16 hands high, and shows his splendid breeding in every line of his lithe, sinewy shape. For a horse of his age and training he has proven to be remarkably fast, and if no harm befalls him will undoubtedly perform some phenominal work next year. He trots before one of the celebrated Frazier pneumatic tire sulkys.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 13, 1892.

The McKinley tariff is not taxation but confiscation. That is the cardinal fact for the voters to keep in mind until the day comes to vote it down.

The force bill is doing its own talking in the South most effectually. We believe that the McKinley tariff iniquity is doing its own talking just as effectually in the Northwest. It is thundering all around the sky. Vox populi vox dei.

The brains and conscience of the Republican party began leaving it many years ago, and Judge Gresham's exit leaves an aching void at the top. In the region of the pocket, which is now the only sensitive spot in the Republican anatomy, he will not be missed.

Congressman Burroughs is still anxious to shoot the men who are managing the coal trust. Why doesn't he shoot a letter into the mails directed to President Harrison urging him to instruct the Attorney-General of the United States to indict the coal trust under the Sherman anti-trust bill and prosecute it in the courts, as he ought to.—Bay City Press.

The announcement that Judge Thos. M. Cooley, of Ann Arbor, will vote for Cleveland is undoubtedly true. He was educated in the Democratic school of politics and only left that party on the slavery question. With the settlement of war issues he naturally returns to his first love. On the great questions of local control of elections, economical government expenditures and a revenue tariff he is essentially a Democrat. His present position does not surprise his most intimate friends in the least.

This is certainly a "campaign of education" on the part of the G. O. P. One piece of the "literature" which they are sending out is entitled "Reasons Why I am not a Democrat." The first reason given is "Because the man who shot Lincoln was a Democrat." This will probably settle the election unless the dazed Democrats can get themselves together and stem the tide by sending out a similar tract, explaining that they are not Republicans because the man who shot Garfield was a Republican.

The people are entitled to sound and honest money, abundantly sufficient in volume to supply their business needs. But whatever may be the form of the people's currency, National or State—whether gold, silver or paper—it should be so regulated and guarded by governmental action, or by wise and careful laws, that no one can be deluded as to the certainty and stability of its value. Every dollar put into the hands of the people should be of the same intrinsic value of purchasing power. With this condition absolutely guaranteed, both gold and silver can be safely utilized, upon equal terms in the adjustment of our currency.—Cleveland's Letter.

The elections in Florida and in Georgia last week resulted in sweeping Democratic victories and indicate that the so-called People's party in the South is more prolific of noise than of votes. In both States the Republicans declined to run tickets, leaving the field to the Democrats and the so-called Populists, who don't seem to have polled votes enough to justify their high-sounding title. These elections are simply in line with those which have preceded them, and show that the political tide is running strongly in the Democratic direction. There seems to be no reasonable doubt now that every Southern State, except possibly West Virginia, will give more than usual Democratic majorities.

Tariff legislation presents a familiar form of Federal taxation. Such legislation results as surely in tax upon the daily life of our people as the tribute paid directly into the hand of the tax-gatherer. We feel the burden of these tariff taxes too palpably to be persuaded by any sophistry that they do not exist or are paid by foreigners. Such taxes, representing a diminution of the property rights of the people, are only justifiable when laid and collected for the purpose of maintaining our government and furnishing the means for the accomplishment of its legitimate purpose and functions. This is taxation under the operation of a tariff for revenue. It accords with the professions of American free institutions, and its justice and honesty answer the test supplied by a correct appreciation of the principles upon which these institutions rest.—Cleveland's Letter.

Two Views of a Tariff for Revenue.

It is a relief to turn from the President's narrow stump-speech consideration of the tariff contained in his letter of acceptance to such an examination of the principle at issue between the parties as David A. Wells makes in the September Forum under title of, "A tariff for revenue; what it really means." Mr. Wells' conclusions are (1) that the unimpaired maintenance of equal and honest taxation is essential to the continued existence of a free government; (2) that to be equal and honest taxation must be justified by necessity or be essential for fulfilling the object of every truly free government which is not to abridge the liberty of any individual citizen in respect to his person, business or property, but to increase it by preventing encroachments upon it, and such taxation must not bear more hardly upon one man or class than another, and its exercise by the state must contemplate no other purpose than the raising of money for defraying its expenses; and (3) the instant that these limitations of taxation are violated and the state begins to take property from citizens that is not needed or takes inequitably that which is needed, that instant the exercise of the power becomes a matter of will and might and not of law and right, and the worst abuses of individual rights known to free government are on the way of being realized.

Shall these abuses be recognized and tolerated, asks Mr. Wells, and a tendency to further progress in this same direction be encouraged? or shall they be met with stern and uncompromising protests, immediate check and ultimate complete arrest and prevention? These are the real questions at issue between the two great parties on the tariff, he says, "and the situation exemplifies anew the lesson of history—that all the great contests for freedom from the earliest times have originated in abuses of taxation." So of course Mr. Wells claims that the democratic denial of the constitutional right to enforce and collect tariff duties except for revenue, if it be a radical departure as is claimed by some, is a departure in the nature of true progress and in the direction of freedom.

We look in vain through the President's long speech on the tariff for any sign that he has ever considered or even thought of, or might comprehend such a view as Mr. Wells presents, which penetrates a little deeper than the superficial declamation of the letter of acceptance over the goodness of high and higher tariff and the wickedness and lack of patriotism of those who would scale it down. Mr. Harrison's administration invited the protected interests to Washington and allowed them to pervert the taxing power of the government to their own uses and profit as they pleased; and this after the Republican party had been promising for twenty years to reduce the lower tariff that existed when the Harrison administration came into power.

And now when in protest against this intolerable abuse of taxation the opposition sets up the fundamental principle of the unconstitutionality of such employment of the tax power as the guide by which it would be governed in seeking to reduce the tariff to an ultimate revenue basis, the President talks about "this mad crusade against American shops," "this trifling with great interests," "this destructive un-American doctrine," and this "alliance between foreign producers and the Democratic party" for the destruction of American industries. But even though the President cannot or dare not be brought honestly to face and treat decently principles in taxation and government, the people are giving them a closer examination than heretofore, and that is the main thing.—Springfield Republican.

GEORGIA AND FLORIDA.

The bottom has fallen out of the People's party movement in the South. It was like a bee—biggest when it was born—and after the brain-clout it received in Alabama it languished into feebleness in Arkansas, and now sleeps the sleep that knows no waking in Florida and Georgia.

While Florida was regarded as reasonably certain to elect the Cleveland State ticket, Georgia was claimed by the fusionists by a large majority, and the Republicans expended large amounts of money to break Democratic prestige; but the vote in both States is overwhelmingly Democratic and the attitude of every Southern State may now be regarded as settled for November. West Virginia will be contested, but it is likely to remain anchored in the Cleveland column.

The force bill has settled the South. But for that colossal blunder the People's party would have rent that section from center to circumference; but Republicans and Democrats, white and blacks, who have any property interest in the South, have all revolted against that policy; and Harrison, as its embodiment, was defeated in the South from the start. Had Blaine been nominated at Minneapolis, he would, with the aid of the People's party, have taken half the Southern States from Cleveland; but Harrison has made them solid as adamant against him.

The notable feature of the sweeping Cleveland majorities in the South is the open, aggressive aid given to his cause by the colored voters. In Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia and Florida colored voters were active in their support of the Democratic State tickets, and in Alabama it seems certain that they decided the election in favor of the Democrats. The lesson of this revolution in the colored vote is that the intelligent black man joins the white man against race agitation and race disorders, and the demagogues of the North who are ever seeking to disturb sectional tranquility, must now cease to ply their vocation because the black man himself commands it.—Philadelphia Times.

"Salvation Oil cured me of a shoulder lameness and pain in back, contracted playing ball last season. I tried several other remedies and all failed. Chas. Mears, 122 Water St., Cleveland, Ohio.

"I can highly recommend Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for croup. I have used it for several years and find it the best remedy ever tried. Mrs. Hannah Morrison, Burlington, W. Va."

It is a plain fact that twenty per cent. of the deaths in our larger cities are caused by consumption; and when we reflect that this terrible disease can be prevented by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; shall we condemn the sufferers for their negligence, or pity them for their ignorance.

TO PREVENT THE GRIP.

Or any other similar epidemic, the blood and the whole system should be kept in healthy condition. If you feel worn out, or have "that tired feeling" in the morning, do not be guilty of neglect. Give immediate attention to yourself. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla to give strength, purify the blood and prevent disease.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, jaundice, biliousness, sick headache, constipation.

"Handsome is that handsome does," and if Hood's Sarsaparilla doesn't do handsomely then nothing does. Have you ever tried it?

Being a sufferer from chronic catarrh, and having derived great benefit from the use of Ely's Cream Balm, I can highly recommend it. Its sales are far in excess of all other catarrh remedies.—B. Franken, Druggist, Sigourney, Iowa.

"Mudge is still looking for a snap, I suppose?" "Yes, but he doesn't seem to have the necessary ginger to make it."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Cleveland's Letter.

In its spirit and in its diction Mr. Cleveland's letter is in sharp contrast with Mr. Harrison's. Mr. Cleveland goes straight to every point, in clear-cut, axiomatic sentences. Mr. Harrison doubles in and out through column after column of such special pleading as he has often heard Indiana pettifoggers address to an ignorant jury in a justice court. Cleveland appeals to the popular sense of right and justice. Harrison endeavors to so rouse and confuse self-interest that it may be alarmed at the prospect of the enforcement of right and justice. Cleveland trusts the ability of the people to see the right and to do it. Harrison trusts in his own ability to deceive them by concealing or distorting the truth.

The two letters so well illustrate the two men that it is a pity every voter cannot read them together, but Harrison's letter, on account of its inordinate length, was not read by one voter in a thousand, and only the few who did read it will be able to fully appreciate the superiority of the straight-forward directness which characterizes Mr. Cleveland's comments on the leading issues of the campaign.—St. Louis Republic.

FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default of payment having been made of a mortgage, made and executed by Samuel W. Temple and Hettie A. Temple, his wife, to Sarah Edwards and Phebe U. Hunt, dated the twenty-fourth day of May, A. D. 1882, and recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee County, Michigan, in Liber 106 of mortgages, on Page 152, upon which mortgage there remains due and unpaid at the date of this notice of the principal and accrued interest the sum of Twenty-five Hundred dollars and twenty-four cents ($2,500.24), and no proceedings at law or in equity have been taken to collect the same or any part thereof.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power and provisions in said mortgage contained and of the statutes of the State of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the moneys above mentioned and interest thereon and costs of this foreclosure and sale including also an attorney's fee provided by law, I, the undersigned, Phebe U. Cairns, as one of the two mortgagees of said mortgage, and also as the administratrix of the estate of said Sarah Edwards, now deceased, shall, on the 17th day of October, A. D., 1892, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian, in the county of Lenawee and State of Michigan, (that being the place of holding the Circuit Court for said County of Lenawee) all that parcel of land situate in the Village of Tecumseh, in the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to wit: Bounded by commencing at the intersection of the North line of Shawnee street with the East line of Pearl street extended North, running thence North on the said East line of said extension of Pearl street twelve rods; thence East parallel with Shawnee street ten rods to the A. Stearns lot; thence South on the west line of Stearns lot twelve rods to Shawnee street; thence west on North line of Shawnee street ten rods to place of commencement.

PHEBE U. CAIRNS,
Administratrix of the estate of Sarah Edwards, deceased.

CHARLES BURRIDGE,
Attorney for said mortgagee and for said administratrix.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the 19th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Margaret Weimer, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Smeltzer, administrator, upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and that he is now ready to close said estate and render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be distributed to those persons by law entitled thereto, that he may be discharged and his bond canceled and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 17th day of October next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said estate, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

A SHAMEFUL SAMPLE.

Of Republican Mismanagement.

How the Ionia Prison Was Brought Into Competition with Free Labor.

The republican state platform maliciously and falsely says of the present democratic administration in Michigan: "It has so mismanaged state institutions as to seriously impair their usefulness and imperil their future." On what score this assertion is based it does not attempt to say, and nobody knows. It may be that the republicans had in mind their own work at the state house of correction at Ionia. That is the only institution in the state whose usefulness has been seriously impaired. There by "wise" republican management the labor of a large number of convicts employed in operating the furniture plant is practically donated to the contractors. The convicts are using and wearing out machines belonging to the state in the manufacture of furniture which is sold on a contract. By the terms of this contract the state is bound for a term of years, and the prices set by it are so low that the state does not receive for the manufactured output the cost of the lumber used and the expense of buying, shipping, etc.

This is a situation that the republicans have

PRECIPITATED BY SHORT-SIGHTED MANAGEMENT

when in control of the prison board of managers. A republican warden and a republican board instituted and put the plant in operation. Their warden induced the board to make the contract, and their report to the governor, dated October 8, 1890, when they expected the next governor and the next legislature to be republican, recommended that more men be put on the furniture contract. They also asked that $40,000 be appropriated to enlarge the plant, which was already being run at an actual loss to the state, and was being run in competition to the factories of the state employing free labor.

By republican mismanagement

FREE LABOR WAS COMPETED AGAINST.

Republican mismanagement made it necessary for organized labor to protest against the proposed appropriation of $40,000 to enlarge the plant, and for the democratic legislature of 1891 to refuse to grant it. It now has its logical result in necessitating an actual loss to the taxpayers of the state under the terms made by the republican board. This board made a contract to manufacture eight styles of bedsteads and sell them to the firm of Cochrane & Miller at a stated price for a term of years, regardless of the fluctuations in the price of lumber. This, notwithstanding that every business man knows that lumber is annually increasing in price. The state uses from 200,000 to 250,000 feet of choice lumber every month in the manufacture of these bedsteads. The prices of beds range from 65 cents to $1.85. The best beds are of elegant pattern, well finished with carved trimmings, and made of oak or ash. They are as fine as commonly sell in suites for $20 and $25. What could have persuaded the board to make such a contract is difficult to surmise. It seems to have been chiefly

THE FAULT OF THE WARDEN.

What object the warden could have had for desiring the board to enter into the contract and for desiring the legislature to appropriate $40,000 for increasing the plant is a matter of conjecture.

Cochrane & Miller are certainly in great luck. They are getting furniture manufactured in the best manner and of the most modern and elegant designs for less than the cost of the lumber in the rough. It gives them a great advantage over the factories and firms who have to hire honest free labor to manufacture their own furniture from their own lumber, using machines furnished, not by the state, but by their own pocketbooks.

It is disgraceful and humiliating that the state should be bound by such incompetent officials. It is an abominable and an injustice, a gross injustice, to those who manufacture and sell furniture in competition with Cochrane & Miller. The republican party is solely to blame for it. It pretends to protect the laborer and the manufacturer against the cheap labor two thousand miles away, but forces unjust competition with labor at home. Not only this, but it results in a financial loss which is taxed against the people.

INSULT TO FREE LABOR

Manufacturers of Michigan, do you see the point? Do you intend to further impose upon yourselves by voting the republicans back into control of the state and the management of the prison in question?

Laboring men, you who demand that you shall be protected from competition with these convicts, will you stultify yourselves on election day by voting for the instigators and upholders of such employment of convicts? Show your intelligence, independence and manhood at the polls in the support of the democratic state ticket.

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE.

Shown in the Republican Management of Ionia Prison.

Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars a Year Saved Under Warden Parsell.

It is due to Warden Eugene Parsell, of the Ionia prison, and to the democratic state administration as well as to the taxpayers in general, that a statement be made of the condition that the Ionia prison was in when turned over by the republican warden to his successor in 1891. The facts reveal the characteristic looseness and extravagance of republicans in the management of state institutions.

The democratic warden on assuming office found almost everything in a run-down and neglected condition. Not only was the institution dilapidated, but in a condition that imperilled the health of the inmates. For example, the inmates' bath-room was so filthy that new floors and stalls were an absolute necessity. Almost every room and wall within the institution had to be renovated. The walls of the reservoir, which furnishes the protection in case of fire, were broken and leaking. The stock of clothing for the inmates was run down and ragged. There were but eighty-seven extra shirts for a change for four hundred men. Some of the inmates had not changed for six weeks. Some had no underclothes, and only a small number had garments sufficient to keep them warm.

Bedding was short. Most of the men were without change of pillowslips or sheets for four weeks. The cell blocks were alive with vermin. The stock of medicines in the hospital was low. Material for work in the knitting and shoe shops was lacking; there was but little lumber in stock for the furniture factory, while the tools and machinery in all the shops were old, and in some cases worn out.

This was the condition of affairs that confronted Mr. Parsell. He at once set about righting things, putting the institution not only in good sanitary condition, but on a business basis as well.

The necessary repairs that were made in and about the prison, with the consent of the then republican board, amounted to $14,438.34. In every department of the prison all is now neat, healthy, and in ship shape. The men are decently clothed, and sufficiently fed. And the management of the institution is a credit to the administration and an honor to the state.

Economy in the purchase and use of food supplies, clothing, etc., has

ENABLED THE WARDEN TO RECOUP THE STATE

more than double the amount expended for repairs. The cost per capita for supporting the inmates for the last fiscal year of republican management was $348.08. For the first full fiscal year under democratic management it is but $238.40, making a difference in favor of the democrats of $109.68 for each convict. The average number of convicts for the year was 328, making an aggregate saving to the state of $35,426.64. This comparison ought to be satisfactory to every taxpayer and citizen of the state. It commends the democratic administration as wise, safe and economical.

TAXES DIMINISHED.

Democratic Economy as Shown by the Saving in Dollars.

Two Hundred Thousand Dollars Saved to the People.

Notwithstanding the falling off in revenue from the sale of public lands during the last two years, taxation for state purposes under democratic rule has been less than for the last four preceding years under republican rule. This was pledged to the taxpayers two years ago by the Michigan democracy. And the pledge has been kept:

The state tax leved in 1887 was	$1,950,085 16
The state tax levied in 1888 was	1,458,466 04
Total for first term under Luce		$3,408,551 20
The state tax levied in 1889 was	1,820,521 10
The state tax levied in 1890 was	1,263,744 00
Total for second term under Luce		$3,085,265 10
The state tax levied in 1891 was	1,443,849 61
The state tax levied in 1892 was	1,419,201 61
Total under Winans' administration		$2,863,051 22

Comparing the last two years with the first two years under Luce, there was a reduction of $545,500, and as compared to the last term under Luce, there was a reduction of $222,213.88.

It must also be remembered that the tax levy of 1891 and 1892 contains two items—appropriations for the world's fair and soldiers' bounty amounting to $200,000—not included in the other tax levies. Following is a comparative statement of what it has

COST TO RUN THE STATE.

Disbursements for all purposes for the fiscal year 1889 were	$3,134,929 99
Disbursements for all purposes for the fiscal year 1890 were	3,342,168 03
Total disbursements during last term of Luce		$6,477,098 02
Disbursements for all purposes for the fiscal year 1891 were	$3,107,924 27
Disbursements for all purposes for the fiscal year 1892 were	$3,193,505 40
Total disbursements under Winans		$6,301,429 67
The disbursements for all purposes were less under Winans than under Luce by	$175,668 35

This difference does not represent the saving made by the institutions and represented by an increase of cash in the hands of their treasurers, which amounts to $25,000 more than two years ago, thus accounting for $200,000 saved the taxpayers by the present democratic administration. To be sure, that $420,000 received from the United States as direct tax was credited to the general fund and thus made available for paying the current obligations of the state. But this is a comparison of disbursements and not one of receipts. With a treasury balance September 1 of $1,275,000, this $420,000 is accounted for and many dollars of the people's money saved by the present administration is found.

On the other hand, the republicans received in 1887, from the sale of public lands, $615,694, or $515,000 more than the present administration received from the same source in 1891. This exceeds the $420,000 by $100,000 and serves to illustrate the ridiculous statements made by republicans to defeat the showing of democratic economy.

A FESTAL SEASON.

All Preparations Complete for the World's Fair Dedication.

The Order of Exercises as Officially Adopted—A Programme Covering Three Days of Festivity—Details Will Be Found Below.

READY FOR THE DEDICATION.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—The programme for world's fair dedication ceremonies was completed Friday at a joint meeting of the national and local committees on ceremonies. It now has the approval of all authorities. It was decided to put no limit upon the time of speakers, but to allow their good judgment to dictate the proper length of their orations.

There will be three days of ceremony under the direction of the exposition company, beginning Thursday, October 20, and ending Saturday, October 22. Other entertainments of a semi-official character have, however, been planned, and will be carried out. Day by day the arrangements are as follows:

The night of Wednesday, October 19, an inaugural ball and reception will be given in honor of President Harrison and other distinguished visitors. It will be held at the Auditorium hotel and will be conducted under the auspices of a citizens' committee. This is the ball formally intended to be given by exposition officials. Tickets are for sale upon invitation for $25 for two persons and $15 for single tickets.

The morning of October 20 the first official exercises will begin. Arrangements have been made for a monster civic parade, representing fraternal and other civic organizations. This parade will be under the direction of Gen. Joseph Stockton, of Chicago. Applications for position have been received from a sufficient number of societies to warrant the estimate that 80,000 people will be in line. Gen. Miles will be grand marshal of the parade, which will be reviewed by the president.

The night of October 20 Col. Henry L. Turner will give a reception and ball to officers of the army, navy, marine corps, national reserve, national guard and Loyal Legion. The entertainment will be held in the First regiment armory, Michigan avenue and Sixteenth street.

October 21 will be dedication proper and the national salute at sunrise will inaugurate the ceremonies. The procession of invited guests will be formed near the Auditorium hotel on Michigan avenue and proceed southward to Jackson park in the following order:

1. Joint committee on ceremonies of the World's Columbian commission and the World's Columbian exposition.
2. The director general of the World's Columbian exposition, and the president of the Centennial commission of 1876, at Philadelphia, and the director general thereof.
3. The president of the United States, the president of the World's Columbian commission and the president of the World's Columbian exposition.
4. The vice president of the United States, the vice president of the World's Columbian commission and the vice president of the World's Columbian exposition.
5. The secretary of state and the secretary of the treasury.
6. The secretary of war and the attorney general of the United States.
7. The postmaster general and the secretary of the navy.
8. The secretary of the interior and the secretary of agriculture.
9. The diplomatic corps.
10. The supreme court of the United States.
11. Speaker of the house of representatives and the mayor of Chicago.
12. Ex-President Hayes, escort Hon. John Sherman. Lyman J. Gage, ex-president of the World's Columbian exposition.
13. Ex-President Cleveland, escort ex-Secretary Thomas F. Bayard and W. T. Baker, ex-president World's Columbian Exposition.
14. The senate of the United States headed by the president pro tem.
15. The house of representatives.
16. The army of the United States.
17. The navy of the United States.
18. The governors and their staffs of the states and territories of the United States.
20. The orators and chaplains.
21. Commissioners of foreign governments to the World's Columbian exposition.
22. Consuls from foreign governments.
23. The World's Columbian commissioners, headed by the second, third, fourth and fifth vice presidents thereof.
24. The board of lady managers, headed by the president thereof.
25. One woman to represent each one of the thirteen original states.
26. Board of directors of the World's Columbian exposition, headed by the second vice-president thereof, and the director of works.
27. Board of management United States government exhibits.
28. The department chiefs.
29. The staff officers and the director of works.
30. The city council of Chicago.

This procession, escorted by United States cavalry and light artillery, will proceed south on Michigan avenue to Twenty-ninth street, where it will receive the president of the United States, after which it will proceed south on Michigan avenue to Thirty-fifth street, thence east on Thirty-fifth street to Grand boulevard; thence to Washington park, where it will be formed in parallel lines on the west side of the parade grounds of the park.

The national and state troops will have been formed in the meantime by brigades in line of masses on the east side of the field at Washington park. As the president approaches the ground the president's salute will be fired, and on his taking his position opposite the center of the line the commands will change direction by the left flank, forming columns and pass in review in the usual order, except that the distance in column will be that in mass. The troops having passed in review will then become the escort of honor for the entire procession, and will continue the march via Fifty-seventh street to the exposition grounds, thence to the manufactures and liberal arts building, where the troops will take positions assigned them, the officials occupying the platform prepared for them. As the president's carriage passes through the exposition grounds a battery on the lake front will fire the national salute.

At 12:30 o'clock the following programme of exercises will take place in the manufactures building under the director general as master of ceremonies:

1. "Columbian March," composed by Prof. John K. Paine, of Cambridge.
2. Prayer by Bishop Charles H. Fowler, D. D., LL. D., of California.
3. Introductory address by the director general.
4. Address of welcome and tender of the free

THE FIRST REPUBLICAN GUN.

A Fine Meeting at the Opera House, Addressed by Congressman James O'Donnell.

Last Monday evening a good-sized house greeted Hon. James O'Donnell, Republican nominee for Congress from this district.

Mr. O'Donnell opened his address with one of his stock Irish anecdotes and then sailed into the Democratic free trade policy. Among other remarks he said that the people of these United States had been saved in taxation during the past year a sum of about fifty-four millions of dollars by sugar being placed on the free list, thus admitting that the tariff is a tax. He compared the exports of to-day with those of 1860 and thereabouts, showing an increase under protection; told how the farmer of Michigan had received such a great increase in (?) price for his wool under the McKinley bill, and that under free trade to-day would have received about eleven cents less; compared the taxation of the different countries under free trade and protection, and told his audience what they would have to pay per capita if a direct tax was levied, but did not say how much of a tax they are obliged to pay indirectly by way of the tariff: went out of his way considerably to rake the People's party in respect to its views on free coinage and gave very good illustrations of the evils which would befall the country if its views could be enforced, in which every Democrat within his hearing and the great majority of the Democratic party at large agrees.

He paid Mr. Weaver a very nice compliment and talked about the Prohibition party, then reverted to the great issue between the two great political parties,—the Republican and Democratic:—the tariff.

He spoke at length in praise of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Reid: spoke about the former's great coldness of character with which he is often charged, saying that he knew he had a warm heart, and gave some very touching examples. He spoke very highly of Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Stevenson and said that the latter and he were very warm friends at Washington during Mr. Cleveland's administration: spoke about the many postmasters he decapitated during his reign, but nothing concerning the "Clarkson guillotine" which operated at Washington during the first two years' reign of President Harrison.

He spoke about what the Republican party had done for the old soldier, the great number of pensions which had been granted during the reign of Raum, the great increase over those granted during the reign of Commissioner Black, but not one word as to the cause of this great increase, which every old soldier who has attempted to get a pension allowed under the old pension laws knows, that up to the Act of Jun 27, 1890, it took on an average ten or twelve years to get a claim allowed, and a great many to-day, who have been working for twenty or twenty-five years under the old law, have been granted a pension under this new law within an average of about ten months,—a law under which it is not necessary that a disability should have been incurred in the service.

Mr. O'Donnell referred to the many terms he had served his constituents in Congress and done their bidding, and said that this new Congressional district had been created for the express purpose of defeating him: that he knew he had a rocky road to travel but so far the people had made it easy traveling for him. He ended by asking the votes of the people for himself, Harrison, and the entire Republican ticket.

From a Republican standpoint he gave a good address, free from vulgarity and blackguardism. After its conclusion Chairman Elliott introduced Mr. Retan, of Hudson, candidate for the office of County Treasurer. He asked the people to excuse him for remaining seated, as it was extremely difficult for him to stand, and thanked them for his call before them. Three cheers were then proposed by J. D. Shull, which were given and the meeting then adjourned.

Republican Representative Convention.

The Republican Representative convention of this district, was held in Sutton's opera house, Monday afternoon, Oct. 10th. Hon. B. F. Graves, of Adrian, was made temporary chairman, and afterward made permanent chairman of the convention.

Dr. Geo. Howell, of Tecumseh, was made chairman of credentials, and Dr. Nelson, of Ridgeway, chairman of committee on rules and regulations.

When the convention was called to order there appeared only one candidate in the field, Hon. John D. Shull, the present incumbent of the office, representative from the old district; as there was no opposition to his nomination he was put through with neatness and dispatch, or in other words, by acclamation, after which he made one of his very neat and appropriate speeches, thanking the convention for the honor they had bestowed upon him, which was received with applause, after which the convention adjourned.

YOUNG DETECTIVES.

Some Pertinent Remarks on the Subject By Detective J. M. Fuller, of New York City.

To the young man contemplating a life of mystery and wonderful deeds by becoming a "detective," I want to say a word. First of all, don't choose the avocation of "Hawkshaw" if you can find an acre of potatoes that needs digging, or a cord of wood to chop and split. There is nothing ahead of you but hard monotonous work with small recompense and little glory.

After 22 years service during which time I have come into contact with every phase of misery, crime and suffering, I say, young man stay in your shop, or on your farm, and grow up with the country and let the detective business alone.

Dime novel writers have thrown a halo about the business which has an existence only in the brains of the writers of the trashy stuff with which the market is constantly glutted. False impressions are conveyed by these cheap publications which often lead to pernicious results.

There is still another delusive and more criminal trap set for young men yearning for glory. I mean the "Mills" that grind out detectives at $5 per head, badge, diplomas and all, and inform their dupes in addition that 'experience is not necessary.' These people who write such wonderful stories about visible and invisible detectives, do not know the difference between a jack-plane and a jimmy, or a sneak thief and a first-class bank burglar. The 'dime novel detective' is made to perform impossibilities, both mental and physical, while they are proof against pistol, knife and pestilence. Again they are never known to eat or sleep.

The genuine, flesh and blood detective is a man who should possess many qualifications. First of all, he should have a good physique; next, brains. Then come the following conditions in their order: Honesty of purpose; a clear eye; a retentive memory; a pleasant address and perseverance and pluck. He should avoid all oppressiveness, and strive to gather facts by all means. He should make every effort to get the truth of a matter, not manufacture a result. A detective is supposed to detect and discover, not invent. The moment a man starts in to secure a result by other than legitimate means and methods, that moment he begins to go down the scale and in time becomes as great if not a greater criminal than those he is hounding. The law presumes a man innocent until he is proven guilty but the 'blood-thirsty and reputation-seeking detective' is bound to make you appear guilty, and thus add another leaf to his already inflated record. Such a man's place is behind prison bars, for he is a menace to all mankind; no man's liberty is secure so long as he is permitted to be at large. The good book says: "Thou shalt not bear false testimony." It is better that twenty guilty persons should escape than for one innocent man to suffer.

Circumstantial evidence is another thing the young detective should seriously and carefully weigh before reaching a conclusion. There is nothing in the world more delusive and perplexing. Circumstances are always worth investigating, but mighty unreliable as proof. How often have you heard the expression, "circumstances directly point to the man's guilt," and yet after explanations have been made, investigated and proven, the man has been allowed to depart because investigation has established his innocence. Thousands of such instances are on record. It never seems right to me that men and women should be deprived of their lives and liberty on purely circumstantial evidence. It is human to err, and why prosecuting officers and juries should presume to decide a person's fate on such unreliable grounds is beyond understanding. The jury convicts because they think the person is guilty. The law says they must establish the man's guilt, yet in spite of this wise injunction, the jury simply thinks he is guilty because they have reached this conclusion, perforce, the man is guilty and deserves all the punishment the law can inflict.

I once heard a juryman declare that he voted for conviction simply because the case was the first one tried by the new district attorney, and the juryman did not want to see him lose his first case. Ye Gods, what a confession! And to think that innocent men must suffer in order to cater to the vanity of man. Give a man a bad name and everybody kicks him. Simply charge a man with a crime and he is at once declared guilty by the majority. People do not stop to consider that perhaps he is innocent, or possibly he is the victim of somebody's malice.

Look at the number of indictments found every year for crimes ranging from picking pockets to murder and then note the convictions. At least twenty-five per cent are dismissed upon trial. This simply goes to prove that all who are charged with crime are not guilty, yet I know a judge who assumes that every man who is brought before him is guilty, and his mind has grown so warped and narrow in consequence that every time a jury does not view the case through his spectacles and acquits, he immediately discharges them for the term with a severe reprimand. Could anything be more inconsistent and unjust? Never profit by another man's downfall. As Davy Crockett says: "First be sure you are right, then go ahead," but be sure you are right.
